Good Homes For Children
The Kentucky Children's Home Society now has for placement, the finest lot of boys and girls in all its history. This is largely due to the strict medical requirements recently adopted by the Institution. These children are yearning for the love and sympathy of real home life. Only those who are in a position to offer this, and who are willing to contribute to the happiness and well being of unfortunate children are requested to write the Kentucky Children's Home Society, Lyden, Ky., for particulars.

We do not place children out of Kentucky.

Richmond—County Jail's office is drawing candidates from every quarter. Horace Wells has announced, bringing the field to 14. A. J. Long, one of the aspirants, has died, and another, Charles Rogers, has withdrawn.

Franklin—Only the presence of mind of Felix Martin, negro, press-cooper for the Franklin Favorite, saved the building from destruction when a gasoline container, from which he was filling the tank, exploded and set fire to the building.

Milton—Charles W. Lehman received a severe cut on his left foot when a mule he was riding became frightened and ran away. The mule ran between a barn and a fence and the boy's foot was slit open by a nail sticking out.

Frankfort—Court of Appeals approved a loan of $54,000 made by the city of Ashland to the Ashland Board of Education, holding that the loan merely was an accommodation to taxpayers, so that the city had a surplus and the Board of Education needed the money.

Georgetown—County Health Department has issued a ruling that all persons who have been vaccinated successfully within the last five years must be vaccinated at once. This order came following a meeting and discussion on smallpox by county physicians.

Hill, a representative of this organization, and physicians of Marshall County and Benton, have concluded the examinations of more than three score children in Marshall County. Ashland—Mrs. Emma Sloan, 57 years old, killed with a hatchet her two sleeping children, Margaret Sloan, 16 years old, and Jack Sloan, 18, and then attempted to end her own life with the same weapon after locking herself in the bathroom and turning on all gas jets in the house. She is expected to recover. It was said at the King's Daughters' Hospital.

Richmond—Individual deposits subject to check in the four banks of Richmond amount to $2,167,719.97, according to certified reports. Outside of the city there are other banks in Madison County which show equal prosperity.

Paducah—Discovery that a bar at one of the windows of the county jail had been partly sawed off and it was tampered with broke. The window bar and the small back saw, which had been used, were discovered by Jailer Sam B. Gott.

THE REARING OF PARENTS

By THOMAS ARKLE CLARK
Dean of Men, University of Illinois.

THERE has been a great deal written in recent years on the proper rearing of children, but when it comes to the bringing up of parents, a problem that is quite as difficult and as harassing as the rearing of a child, the inexperienced youth is left without a pilot to steer his difficult and rock-infested course. There is a crying need for a full and reliable text on this subject. The work should include, also, helpful suggestions for the control and direction of obstreperous mischievous aunts, or indignant grandmothers, and should show how to inhibit persistently generous and soft-hearted bachelor uncles. The writer of such a text, if he has given the proper study to the subject, will have recognized at a glance the added difficulty which the child of a single parent encounters in properly rearing his charge, as compared with the youth who has under his control the normal number of progenitors. The child with but one parent to look after will find it next to impossible to develop in him the normal amount of selfishness and the proper backbone. And if he is also burdened with a couple of maiden aunts or a grand-mother, the situation for the youth is all but hopeless.

My greatest source of trouble, as an executive officer, comes from the overindulgence and badly-brought-up parent or guardian. For example, take the case of Huy. He was looked upon as a selfish, irregular, purposeless student, when in point of fact he would have been a credit to himself if it had not been for his badly reared parents. His mother was so spoiled that she could not live without seeing him once a week or so. She was afraid he was ill fed, so she gave him dinners; she did not feel that he had the right amount of the right sort of social life, so she made him week-end parties; and the father sent him more money than any boy in college can safely spend.

There are all sorts of ill-trained and badly spoiled parents. Usually the worst trained parent of all is the self-made man. He is either like Everhart's father... or, as a southern and determined that since he himself got where he is by rigid economy and sacrifice, without education and without help from any source, his son must travel the same road. So Everhart dresses in frills and washes dishes for his board and dunks in his studies, while his father hoards an already enormous bank account, and prides himself that by leaving his son to be democratic and self-reliant. Or, perhaps, he is like Wiley's father, who got through college by the most menial sort of toil, who scarcely had enough to eat or to wear, and who now coddles his boy in college until

MISS VAN RENSSLAER

Many women of prominence have urged Miss Martin Van Rensselaer of the college of home economics in Cornell university to seek the nomination for United States senator from New York.

Your Conversation "AMBITION" "AMBITION" is a word which we have inherited from the old Roman custom of a candidate who was seeking office. It comes from the word "ambire" which means "to go around." The Roman candidate for office paraded through the streets as a sign that he was seeking election to office. The word has thus come to mean seeking the attainment of certain aims. The correct pronunciation is "amb-ish-un," with accent on the second syllable.

DROUTHS NOT SO HARD ON ALFALFA

Lexington, Ky. — The drouth resistant properties of alfalfa should commend this legume to farmers in central Kentucky, which often suffers from lack of rain in summer, declares Ralph Kenney, College of Agriculture extension crops specialist, who believes that eventually thousands of acres of alfalfa will be grown in the state.

Under drouth conditions, young alfalfa succeeds many times where clover fails, Mr. Kenney said. "Central Kentucky, especially the Blue Grass counties, are subject to annual drouth periods extending from June to late August. Under such conditions the clovers are frequent sufferers to the extent of extermination. Even last year, when a late, cool, wet spring made the planting of all the crops late, drouth came along later still, and in September the accumulated deficiency for the year was 5 inches. Under such conditions alfalfa outdistances the clovers."

Alfalfa can be seeded with good results as late as May 1, and many fields in Northern Kentucky have made good stands from seeding any time in May, Mr. Kenney said. While late seeding avoids danger, he emphasized that the dry top soil made covering the seed more advisable as the season advances.

He said that lime may be applied any time and in any manner found handy, the most important consideration being to get it on the soil before the alfalfa starts to grow. He recommends 1,000 to 2,000 pounds of burned lime or two tons of pulverized lime per acre, for alfalfa growing.

"Inoculation must not be forgotten," he warned, "and a nurse crop of small grain helps to hold weeds in check until harvest time."

BASE BALL

Brown's Home Run for Burlington and Pitching of Brady and Berkshire features of two games

Petersburg made the trip to Bellevue Saturday with a team composed principally of youngsters and encountered there a team made up of much of the same kind of material. As a consequence a very interesting game was played, though the fielding of both sides was somewhat ragged in spots. The pitching burdens were borne in fine form by Berkshire for Petersburg and Joe Brady of Bellevue, who was returned the victor by the close score of 3 to 2. The hits were kept well scattered and no long drives were registered by either side.

Burlington bested Florence again last Saturday by virtue of slugging. Joe Hogan started in the box for Florence, but due to a sore arm was not able to put much on the ball. He was greeted by a lusty 3-bagger from the bat of Roberts, followed by other drives of lesser magnitude, which were responsible for a total of five runs in the first inning. Hogan was soon removed, and succeeded by Waters, who passed the burden on to Hazel Walton later in the game. Brown's homer with two on clinched the game for Burlington. The final score was 12 to 4. Hebron will play at Burlington next Saturday and Florence at Bellevue.

FAREWELL PARTY FOR W. W. ADAMS AND WIFE

Home of Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Gaines is Scene of Affair.

Mrs. Bert Gaines entertained about fifty members of the Young Men's Bible Class, their wives and families last Saturday evening at her lovely country home on the Petersburg pike. The occasion was in honor of W. W. Adams, who organized the class here in September, 1922.

During the evening Dr. Yelton in a very appropriate manner presented Rev. Adams with a beautiful Bible in behalf of the class, to which presentation Bro. Adams responded in his usually impressive style.

Delicious refreshments were served in abundance during the evening.

MAXWELL ACCIDENT MARS TOURNAMENT

Drops Unconscious While Running in Mile Relay, Victim is Senior in Class Play

A considerable shadow fell across the path of the high school tournament last Thursday, which considerably dampened the spirits of the whole affair for the remainder of the meeting.

It occurred when Charles Maxwell, a senior in Boone Hi School, of Burlington, while running in the one mile relay, fell completely exhausted and remained unconscious for many hours. He was immediately removed by Prof. Hook and Rev. Gillespie, assisted by two classmates, to the Chris hospital, Cincinnati, where several X-ray pictures were made in an effort to locate the trouble.

It was known that he had been badly hurt before the relay race in a basketball game, and it was feared by the doctors that he was the victim of some serious internal injury, as he suffered almost continually from severe convulsions. Many thought that he could not recover, but at this writing he has improved to such an extent that it is a practical certainty that he will soon pull through, although the exact nature of his injury as not as yet been ascertained.

It seemed for a time that quite a cloud would be cast over the commencement season here, as Charles is the son of the graduating class, and plays the leading role in the class play which will be given on Saturday night, May 16th.

However, unless unforeseen ailments set up it is thought that he will be able to take his place in the commencement activities.

Charles is the son of Mrs. W. W. Craddock, of Petersburg, Pike, Mr. Craddock's step-father.

SHERIFF FOLLOWING JURY INSTRUCTIONS

Notices Being Posted to Notify All Dog Owners and Harbors.

Sheriff B. B. Hume and deputies are posting notices over the county officially notifying the dog owners and harbors, who are delinquent with their dog tax, of the action he will be compelled to take unless they comply with the warning of the last grand jury.

The grand jury at the last April term of circuit court made a complete list of all owners and harbors of dogs, who had not complied with the statute, and turned it over to the Sheriff with instructions to proceed according to law. They however suggested to him that he notify the delinquents giving them until June 1st to comply with their mandate. This he is doing, and he will also follow their instructions further by turning over the names of all remaining delinquents to the August grand jury. He is also carrying an official notification on another page in this issue.

BELLEVIEW HIGH SCHOOL EXERCISES

Held Tuesday Evening at Baptist Church

The annual commencement exercises of Bellevue High School were conducted last Tuesday evening in the Baptist church at that place.

The Class Address was delivered by Dr. M. B. Adams President of Georgetown College, Georgetown, Ky., music by the Scholastic Orchestra of Southgate, Ky.

The members of the class were Elizabeth Brown, Jas. Robert Huey, Walton Rogers, William Rogers, George Cook and Vernon Flick.

Mrs. Florence Campbell-Martin is the principal of the school.

TRULY REMARKABLE

On the Petersburg school campus in the fork of a locust tree, but little higher than a man's head, and in plain view from a window of the school building, is a bird's nest. Every child in the school has known of its existence since the mother bird first began to build, she now has two young birds almost grown and the nest has never been disturbed. To the knowledge of any one this is truly remarkable considering the known passion of most small birds for the obliteration of their nests.

A Tribute To The Personification Of Devotion And Sacrifice--Our Mothers

On the second Sunday in May the men and women, boys and girls of this nation turn their thoughts to the homes of their childhood, and to the beloved ones who made that childhood possible--their Mothers.

The gray-haired mother who struggled against poverty and fear and want from sunrise until candlelight to keep the children in school, and mother who in the shack in the wilderness, far from church or neighbor was preacher, teacher and civilization to the sons and daughters who on this day bear gifts of flowers or send loving letters or telegrams of grateful appreciation.

There are no words that adequately express this majesty and heroism

"When I was but a little child I fell, And mother kissed the place and made it well; Then spoke to me in tones of strength and cheer, 'Be brave, my little one, and stop your tear.' And so from her I caught my strength and smiled. This happened when I was a little child.

"When I was grown a man, one day I fell, And mother kissed the place and made it well. Then spoke to me in tones of cheer and strength, 'Be brave, my little one, there is no length Down which a man may fall--he may not rise' And so I found my courage in her eyes."

There is a saying that "God could not be everywhere and therefore he made mothers." May He bless them and strengthen them to carry on with high hearts--the greatest human force and influence known to mankind.

WAREHOUSE MUST PAY FOR SELLING POOL CROP

Judgment of Mason Circuit Court Against Liberty Company For Selling Pool Crop At $100 At.

Lexington, Ky., May 2.—The Kentucky Court of Appeals the past week affirmed the judgment of the Mason Circuit Court, handed down some time ago, giving the Burley Tobacco Growers' Co-operative Association damages to $500 and an attorney's fee of $100 against the Liberty Warehouse Co., for knowingly selling tobacco belonging to a member of the Burley Association.

The court also upholds the constitutionality Section 27 of the Bingham co-operative marketing act, which gives the association, or any like organization of farmers damages of $500 and attorney's fees against any person, firm or corporation which knowingly sells any products which may be pledged to such an association.

The decision of the court is the first of the kind in Kentucky and establishes the law insofar as it relates to the sale by warehousemen of pool products.

Timely Agricultural News

By R. J. Matson, County Agent

Lime Crusher—The state lime crusher is progressing nicely. Harmon Jones and Roy Lutes have finished nice piles of rock of between 75 and 100 tons each and the machinery has moved to Eli Surface.

The crusher is putting out a fine grade of rock, and very cheap rate. Quite an interest is now being taken in the work.

Boone County School Tournament—The Boone County School Tournament was a big success. It was one of the nicest affairs held in this county for some time.

The contest has received favorable comment from a great many of Boone counties school boosters.

The contestants in agriculture only did average, although we have an agricultural county. Willie Wessler wrote an exceptionally good paper. The contest was a credit to the principals of our schools.

Jersey Club—The local club met at Burlington last Thursday. The main topic of discussion was a cooperative sale planned for some time during the latter part of June. Enough good cattle were located to conduct the sale with and a sale manager is now under discussion.

Wool Situation—The wool market has shown some hesitancy recently, the feeling not being as optimistic as a while back. Wool and spring lambs have been profitable products for Kentucky farmers in recent years. They will likely continue to be so. For the long pull, however, remember that the tendency for prices to move in cycles also applies to this industry. This is especially true of lamb and mutton. In the case of wool, the do-and power and beauty that is a mother's love. Where man shrinks that love never falters, and where man faints that love will only grow stronger toward the need which has aroused it. Men about to die cling to it.

It is a guiding flame whose radiance shines over the wastes of worldly affairs unquenchably and from whose wavering spark men who have failed catch the courage to go on.

Great men have acknowledged it. Abraham Lincoln said, "All that I am I owe to my angel mother." Poets sing of it and we humbler souls in our humbler spheres are greatly indebted to those whom fame has touched.

"When I was but a little child I fell, And mother kissed the place and made it well; Then spoke to me in tones of strength and cheer, 'Be brave, my little one, and stop your tear.' And so from her I caught my strength and smiled. This happened when I was a little child.

"When I was grown a man, one day I fell, And mother kissed the place and made it well. Then spoke to me in tones of cheer and strength, 'Be brave, my little one, there is no length Down which a man may fall--he may not rise' And so I found my courage in her eyes."

JOHNSON OF WALTON FOR REPRESENTATIVE

Farmer, Schoolman, and son of a Baptist Preacher is First to Announce.

The announcement will be found the announcement of Edwin M. Johnson, of Walton, for Representative of Boone and Grant counties.

Mr. Johnson is 44 years of age, and was born and reared on a farm which vocation he followed until about ten years ago, when he entered the commercial field as a traveling salesman. He is a son of a Baptist preacher and has one brother who is also a minister of the same denomination.

He informed the Recorder that he is a Democrat, that he has always been and never expects to be anything else, that, if nominated and elected, he will go to Frankfort with no "strings tied to him," standing at all times for what he believes to be the best interests of his constituency.

It is fortunate for us that the Fathers didn't decide on the European plan when they founded our government.

Community Programs

Community programs will be held as follows:
May 6—Hebron 7:30.
May 7—Florence 1:30.
May 7—Petersburg 7:30.
May 8—Verona 7:30.
May 9—Hamilton 7:30.
May 11—Walton 7:30.
May 12—Grant 7:30.
May 13—Union 7:30.

The meeting will be held in the High School auditorium except at Florence where it will be held at Odd-Fellows Hall.

Mr. John S. Gardner, Field Agent in truck crops from the University of Kentucky will speak at Walton to the tomato growers and at Grant to the watermelon growers.

Motion pictures this month will consist of a good two reel comedy, one reel on tobacco growing in Conn. one reel on growing corn and another on the value of Limestone to all soils.

Clubs—Virginia Jones of the Union club has a group of fine Buff Rock chicks. Virginia hatched them quite early and is planning to send them to the State Fair in addition to local shows.

L. W. Kite visited several Jersey herds in southern Indiana one day last week.

O. C. Hafer and R. J. Matson drove to Crittenden and thence to Lexington last Saturday.

ARRANGEMENTS BEING MADE FOR GALA DAY

Amusements and Drawing for Free Merchandise to Feature the Day

Arrangements have been practically completed for the grand jubilee day to be staged by the Covington Merchants and Manufacturers in Burlington on Thursday May 14, just one week from to-day.

The orchestra and singers have been engaged, aeroplanes hired especially for the occasion, in which a few lucky ones will get free rides. Short talks will be made by Mayor O'Donovan, State Senator R. C. Simmons and Commonwealth's Atty. Orin S. Ware.

Tickets for the free drawing have been printed and are being distributed and the merchants desire to say that anyone who has not received a ticket before that day will be supplied with one after reaching Burlington. Something like eight hundred dollars worth of free merchandise will be drawn for, as well as free rides in the air.

The Parent-Teachers Association is arranging to serve dinner for the visiting business men in the basement of the Baptist church.

In short the business men of Covington want this day to be Boone county's red letter day, and one that will not soon be forgotten. Let's turn out and enjoy the day folks--meet them half way in their effort.

PLANTINGS BEING MADE ON SCHOOL GROUNDS

Forty Schools Showing Interest in Beautifying Campuses

Plantings of trees and shrubs are being made on school grounds in Boone county by N. R. Elliott, of the Extension Division of the College of Agriculture. Twelve are in Jefferson county, 3 in Oldham county, 1 in Fayette county, and 4 in each Garrard, Campbell, Mercer, Christian, Graves and Whitley counties.

The work is being done under the auspices of parent-teacher's associations, home-makers' clubs, school boards, boys' and girls' clubs and other organizations. Among the kinds of trees used are, sugar, maple, ash, walnut, sweet gum, wild cherry, native cedars and pines, and of the smaller trees and shrubs, dogwood, red bud, sumac and coraberry.

Mr. Elliott is placing emphasis on the use of native Kentucky trees and shrubs, of which there is an abundant supply. "Kentucky has a large list of native trees and shrubs that can be well adapted for planting in school grounds," he said. "A child who is fortunate to go to a school where the grounds are properly planted with native Kentucky trees and shrubs cannot help having a keener appreciation for the value of trees. All school grounds should be spots of beauty. Practically all of the good trees in Kentucky can be transplanted in either the spring or the fall, and the trees can be secured without cost. Under the direction of the teacher the children can be taught how to properly plant them, so that it is possible to make every school ground in Kentucky a beautiful place."

Another point which Mr. Elliott stresses is that trees should not be planted promiscuously, so as to interfere with the children's play ground. It is a safe rule, he said, to plant the boundaries of the school property with good trees, setting them 30 to 35 feet apart on all sides, with perhaps one or two trees in the lot within 15 or 18 feet of the building, and on the southwest side, as they will give some shade from the afternoon sun. Undesirable objects or buildings can be screened by mass plantings of dogwood, red bud, sumac or coraberry.

It is rumored that there has been drinking in high places—in Washington, but they are really high when they descend to such low living?

CORRESPONDENTS, PLEASE NOTE

We respectfully request our correspondents to refrain from incorporating any items in their communications relative to the activities of any of the candidates for county office in the present campaign in their respective localities. It would be impossible to keep up with the "comings and goings" of all, and naturally the ones omitted would have cause for grievance. The Recorder has never, in its half century of circulation, taken on any active part in a county primary and it is not our desire to alter this policy.

HEBRON IS WINNER IN COUNTY TOURNAMENT

Union and Petersburg Girls Basketball Game is the Outstanding Feature

The first School Tournament ever held in Boone county and composed of Boone county schools alone was held at Florence April 29, 30 and May 1st. The morning sessions were devoted to Academic subjects. Prof. Jones, of the State University conducting the examinations, Florence and Hebron running neck and neck in these subjects.

The one on Friday between the above two teams Union winning by a margin of two points. The Union boys had previously won from Verona on Thursday.

The two night sessions demonstrated to the large audience that Boone can produce the goods when it comes to declamation, Oration and Music.

Prof. Yealey, Secretary of the tournament financed it so well that no hardship was imposed on any locality and after all expenses are paid there will be a few dollars surplus.

In addition to the honor of being winner in the different contests a blue ribbon was given 1st and a red to the 2nd, besides $1.00 in cash and other prizes. The following is a complete record of points won by the different schools:

GERMANY'S DESIRE

FOR A KAISER

The election of Gen. von Hindenburg as president of Germany, will probably be in ing that the majority of Germans are sick of republican institutions. One would think after all they have suffered, that they might have a desire to manage their own affairs, as to keep out of trouble. But there are some who are never able to learn the lessons of experience.

It may perhaps be premature to reach such a conclusion now. Military glory wins many elections. Most students of history in this country would say that Gen. Grant did not show as president the qualifications needed for that high office. Yet the fact that he was a great military leader enabled him to get elected twice. It may be the same in Germany.

WILL GERMANY KEEP THE PEACE?

The fact that Germany has elected a monarchist and friend of the old Kaiser, as president, will cause anxiety in the rest of the world. Yet it does not necessarily prove that the Germans want war again. The business men of that country are probably sick of socialistic rule. They may have felt that in voting for Hindenburg, they were opposing those dreary theories.

The Germans are at present worrying as to how they can borrow money in America. If they find it difficult to obtain loans for their relatively small peace time enterprises, it would be 100 times as difficult to secure them to promote a military campaign.

The German politicians will have quite a jolt the next time they appear in the American financial markets, to pass the hat for a loan. It will no doubt be said to them, that a country that will place a representative of the discredited old regime at the head of its government, is not entitled to a credit rating.

Mrs. Anthony Wayne Cook, president of the Daughters of the American Revolution, said the other day: "There is criticism of our American social life today in which the instances of looseness, irresponsibility and reckless display of selfish pleasure seeking are constantly brought to the surface. But we are God-fearing home-loving citizenry. The exceptions to this are so exceedingly small in number that they only appear great in being conspicuous."

The rising generation may be turning away from certain ancient standards in the search for a better and higher truth. They will not accept some of the shams, either political or religious, as easily as did past generations. Conditions are rapidly changing—and must be met squarely.

The population of the U. S. will be 114,000,000 by July, an increase of 8,000,000 since the 1920 census.

Of this growth 2,000,000 are credited as immigrants. One of the sad side-lights of these figures is the fact that nearly 1 of every 10 of this population are inhabitants of penitentiaries, jails, almshouses, asylums and public homes, or on the books of charitable institutions as paupers or subjects of charity. With all our wealth and prosperity we have a very disconcerting back-yard.

It may be of interest to several of our Southern states to know that England still carries bonds issued to former Confederate States amounting to more than $200,000,000. The British Council of Foreign bondholders base their claim for settlement on the arguments used by the United States in regard to the default of Russia.

President Coolidge shook hands with 1869 high school students the other day, but he could not have taken time to pat each one on the head.

The time to get after the flies is now. An accurate swat at this time will prevent a vast brood of progeny from gathering in the homes of Boone county people later on.
 The housewife of today is sensitive on the fly question. If two or three of these little beasts appear, she queries anxiously when the husband is going to put the screens in? Her attitude has changed from the days when the presence of a flock of flies was accepted as a necessary evil.
 In the days when man and horse had horses in stables closely connected.

Co-Operation and Good Roads Will Promote a Greater Kentucky

In our last issue we carried an editorial briefly commenting on the "evil of sectionalism" in our commonwealth. Reference was made to an excerpt from a speech made by Dr. Frank L. McVey, President of State University, before the Exchange Club of Louisville, which attributed a part of the cause of this evil to the influence of outside newspapers.

However in the Kentucky Road Builder's last issue another cause is referred to which probably contributes, as much as any other one thing toward keeping Kentuckians apart. When Northern Kentuckians travel to either Louisville or Ashland they are compelled to travel thru Indiana, on one hand, and Ohio on the other, in order to reach their destination.

This condition is regrettable to say the least, in fact it is calamitous, for whenever a tourist goes out of the state it means spending money out of the state which should remain here.

Two arterial highways have been proposed, and are now being considered, which would eradicate this. In fact all the faults of Kentucky can be overcome by co-operation.

We quote in part from The Kentucky Road Builder: "Let's snap out of it! Let's all work together for the good of Kentucky. Let's be Kentuckians for Kentucky, just as Californians are always for California. That's the spirit that wins. That's the faith that moves mountains.

Kentuckians probably talk more about their own state than any other class of Americans, with the exception of Californians and New Yorkers, but so often they just take it out in talk. They brag about Kentucky's history and its traditions; they brag about the wonderful horses that we breed, the amount of whiskey we can drink and the preponderance of beautiful women in our state. They have a right to brag about these things, particularly about the beautiful women, because we've got 'em in pulchritudinous abundance. But action speaks louder than words, and if we want to make our dreams come true, we've got to work for 'em.

So let's all get busy and work together for the good of Kentucky. Let's cut out the bickerings and the petty jealousies and live up to our state's motto. Then we will get somewhere. But we can't get anywhere unless we present a solid front and show the rest of the world that we're real mahogany and not veneering. Kentucky is the garden spot of the world, but the world will never know it as long as we keep the garden gate locked. Let's hang a welcome sign on the gate and put a welcome mat underfoot and the world will beat a path to our door.

Good roads are the open sesame that will unlock the doors. That way progress lies!"

Editor Boone County Recorder,
Burlington, Ky.,
My Dear Sir:

One week ago today I delivered what purposed to be my special word of thanks to the members of my church, and through them to all who have had a part in my ministry in this community. I fully expected not to deal further in personal matters, but to confine this last visit among you to interests entirely above the human level. But it was destined to be otherwise. I cannot avoid it—the people have forced me to add this other word and it is through your kindness, Mr. Editor, that I am permitted to say what I must say and what I can say in no other way.

These two days have been choked with the unexpected. The Young Men's Bible Class led the way. Hundreds of experiences with these noble men have bound them to my heart with bands of steel. And the gathering Saturday night at the home of Mr. Bert Gaines was in a real sense the climactic event of many happy occasions together. It took me totally by surprise. The words of Dr. Yelton, spokesman for the class gripped my heart in a way never known to me before. The Bible which the class presented to me is second to no gift that has ever come to me. With this Bible in my hands, its truth in my heart, its message on my lips, the names, faces, love, good wishes and prayers of those who gave it accompany me wherever I go. The refreshments prepared by the ladies could not have been improved upon by Mrs. Adams and I can never forget this occasion.

The services Sunday at the church were the most wonderful which I have ever been my privilege to have a part in. A spirit of true worship prevailed. The spirit of God was present. These services will remain a perennial inspiration to us. Brother Berkshire's message in song: "I'm Praying For You," will never cease to ring in my heart. Beyond this I dare not call names. The gospel singing by the congregation was heavenly indeed. The hundreds of good wishes that came to us, irrespective of faiths and creeds, challenge Mrs. Adams and me to go forth in nobler efforts, because we know we are not alone.

The Ladies Aid Society and the W. M. S. called us to the basement of the church just before the evening service and each presented us with a handsome gift of money and with many words of encouragement. Then the church increased my weekly checks far beyond the usual amount. Through these various channels over one hundred dollars came to us. All of this was unexpected. I have no other way to say "thank you" except this way.

God has as noble and true Christians in Burlington as exist on the face of the earth. You have been to the gospel, God's truth, and he has blessed you. You will continue loyal and he will continue to bless you. You must not fail, because God must not fail. You will not fail because God will not let you fail. You will win, because God and Truth, when lived and sacrificed for will always win.

May the blessings of Heaven attend you always.
Very Sincerely Yours,
W. W. ADAMS

(By Peter Keegan)

The streets of Washington have been crowded during the past week with members of the various societies which have been meeting here. The D. A. B. Congress opened this "convention week" followed by the Daughters of 1812, the Pan American Conference of Capital Cities, the League of American Pan Women and a convention of scientists at the National Academy of Arts and Sciences. The National Capital is rapidly becoming a "mecca" for big conventions. The Spring season is especially desired by the members of these various societies as the time for their meetings, however, because of the unusual beauty of the city at this time.

Plans for the further beautifying of Washington are being discussed by the Pan American Conference, whose members represent 12 countries, the majority of whom are interested chiefly in city planning. The beauty of the city was praised by the city planners although they deplored that Washington should have for its background a "veil of black smoke." Especial interest has been taken in the activities of this conference by the Washingtonians who have had their attention called particularly to the betterment of their city recently through the campaign conducted by Eldridge to straighten out the traffic problem here.

Disagreement between the Vice President and the Senate has not ended as was shown by Senator Moses' ridicule of Dawes' attack on the rules of the Senate. Moses, President Pro Tempore of the Senate and member of the rules committee declared that he would not support any revision of Senate rules, and predicted that Dawes' efforts during the congressional recess would be practically fruitless. The New Hampshire Senator maintains that the present rules have successfully run the country for a century and that they have never kept any legislation which the people really wanted off the statute books.

Colonel Wm. Mitchell, former assistant chief of the Army Air Service, who was demoted from brigadier general to the rank of Colonel as a result of the recent fiery controversy between Navy and Air forces stated the other day, that he would continue his fight for a separate air service. The statement was made at a farewell luncheon given for him by friends at the Racquet Club here.

Experience
Does Count

Our many years of funeral directing have given us a rich background of experience and a service that we are proud to offer. Funeral directing is a profession and art, and to be well done it must have a firm foundation of experience as a guide. That—we are able to offer.

MRS. MINNIE STEPHENSON

Laid to Rest Sunday. One of Walton's Largest Funerals.

Mrs. Minnie Stephenson, age 57, the beloved wife of J. W. Stephenson, died in Covington, Ky., Friday evening, April 24th, at the home of her daughter, Mrs. S. E. Conrad, after an illness of four months from that dread disease cancer. The remains were brought here to her home Saturday afternoon. She is survived by her husband, three sons, Robert, Warren and Acie, and two daughters, Mrs. S. E. Conrad of Covington and Mrs. Erma Conrad of Walton. Mrs. Stephenson was a good Christian woman and a devout member of the Baptist church. The funeral took place from the Walton Baptist church Sunday afternoon and was one of the largest ever held in Walton as her relatives and friends were legion. Rev. John A. Davis, the pastor of the church, preached a most appropriate funeral discourse over the remains. The flowers were numerous and profuse, and as the funeral procession left the church six young girls bore part of the floral tributes just preceding the casket. The remains were laid to rest in the Baptist cemetery, where a short service was held at the grave side. Undertaker C. Scott Chambers had charge of the funeral arrangements.—Walton Advertiser.

IN REMEMBRANCE

Her life was such that her inheritance was heaven with all its glory but soon we will all be over there. She is not dead but has gone on before where there is no pain or sorrow. All that medical skill and loving hands could do was done to prolong her life, but proved unavailing and on April 24th at 6 p. m. her spirit and soul were wafted to the Great Beyond. Only live to meet her God who doeth all things for the best. Asleep in Jesus blessed sleep from which none ever wake to weep.

COMING! HER VICTIM!

The Burlington H. S. will present "Her Victim at the Picture Show House, May 10th at 8 o'clock. It is another Parker play as was "Borrowed Money" which made such a hit.

It is a clever four act Drama, full of humor, that is sure to please.

Special music will be quite a feature.

Admission 25c and 50c.

FOUR COUNTIES HIT RAISE IN TAXES

WOODFORD, OWEN, SPENCER AND MONTGOMERY PROTEST NEW ASSESSMENTS

Cattle Men Cite Loss—Conditions Explained By Deputy Tax Commissioner
J. W. McCabe.

Frankfort, Ky.—Tentative raises in assessments, as proposed by the State Tax Commission, were protested by delegations of taxpayers from Woodford, Owen, Spencer and Montgomery counties.

The rate of assessment on county property in Woodford is 76 per cent and on town lots only 62 per cent. A method for equalizing the two rates was discussed. The increase in assessment of livestock in Woodford was approved. Cattle owners have lost money in the last few years, it was argued. Taxpayers were dissatisfied with assessments on horses and mules.

J. W. McCabe, Deputy Tax Commissioner, did most of the talking for the delegation. He was accompanied by County Judge Robert S. Hawkins, County Attorney Will D. Jesse, W. Lee Dale and Charles B. Sullivan, land owners.

Owen County's livestock assessment showed a loss of $90,000 from last year. The intangible loss was $123,000. Members of the delegation expressed dissatisfaction with the amount of tax-free securities. Owen County farmers are assessed and taxed to a point where they have to sell their farms, while investors in tax-free securities go free, it was said.

Timothy T. Wells, Commissioner, said he attributed raises in assessments year after year to the increasing demands for better roads and schools. Tax-free securities also are responsible, he declared.

Members of the delegation included O. H. Curtis, merchant; O. B. Brock, garage man; L. D. Johnson, highway engineer; County Attorney J. G. Vallandigham, Clay Vallandigham, druggist; R. L. Vallandigham, merchant; County Tax Commissioner L. H. E. Howard; Howard Ellis and Robert Kemper, merchant.

Other counties that have had hearings on tentative raises are Franklin, Clark, Anderson and Boyle.

JUDGE HUMPHREY RESIGNS

From Board of Charities; E. A. Weber, Republican, Fort Thomas, Succeeds Mrs. Lafon Riker, Lexington.

Frankfort, Ky.—The resignation of Judge Alex P. Humphrey as a member of the State Board of Charities and Corrections was accepted by Gov. William J. Fields, who at the same time announced the appointment of E. A. Weber, Republican, Fort Thomas, to succeed Mrs. Lafon Riker, Lexington, on the board.

The letter of resignation indicated the Governor had urged Judge Humphrey to remain on the board. Judge Humphrey found "circumstances are such now that it is quite impossible for me to give either time or thought to the work of the board and I am, therefore, going to ask you to relieve me from its duties."

Judge Humphrey was the last member of the old board that had retained Joseph P. Byers as Commissioner of Public Institutions. Appointment of his successor will make the board 100 per cent a Fields board. A bill to change the management of the charitable and penal institutions failed of passage at the 1924 General Assembly. Opponents of the measure said its design was to oust Mr. Byers.

Paris Game Club Is 10 Years Old

Paris, Ky.—Ten years ago, through the efforts of Catechy Spears of Paris, a number of Bourbon County sportsmen organized a club for the purpose of protecting and increasing the meager supply of fish and game in this county. James D. McClintock was elected secretary of the organization, and through his efforts and that of Charles and Catechy Spears and others, the fish and game of this county have had more adequate protection than obtained in any other county in the State. At the time the club was formed it was the idea of the founder to have similar branches in every county in the State. This plan is now being realized through the efforts of the Rev. George Waggoner, executive agent of the State Fish and Game Commission.

Dog Owners Indicted

Maysville, Ky.—The grand jury indicted sixty dog owners who have not paid the dog license and it is said that over one hundred will be indicted in the next grand jury report.

Sentence Commuted

Frankfort, Ky.—Governor Fields commuted to five years the sixteen years' penitentiary sentence of John Ames, who was found guilty of robbery in the Keaton Circuit Court at this July, 1920, term. The commonwealth and county attorneys said Ames was barely 18, that he had been enticed into joining three other persons in a holdup of the Stevens roadhouse after he was pined with liquor, that when arrested he had none of the booty on him and was at his mother's home in Cincinnati.

THE FLAG OF PEACE

"Flag Week" which this year will be the week of May 23-30 will be an event of more than the usual importance in arousing all Americans but particularly the boys and girls of the land, to a keener sense of their own responsibilities, as well as a better understanding of the symbolism of the flag.

The United States Flag Association is arranging a program designed to affect the effort to make it appear that the national emblem inspires only thoughts of war. It is these who have sought to discourage its display on schoolhouses, on public buildings and elsewhere. The lesson sought to be impressed is that the flag is emblematic of peace rather than of war, and that true patriotism may be expressed in a re-dedication of all hopes and dreams to the cause which teaches a continuing and true patriotism.

The Patent Office in Washington has issued more than 100 patents for new devices to meet the age-old desire of women for curly hair and the number is rapidly increasing. Men have been the inventors of most of these patents, the first of which was granted in 1857. But the gentle art of making straight hair curly by means of implements dates back to early Egyptian history, as is proved by a discovery in the tomb of a royal lady. It is rather a curious fact, however, that people with "kinky" hair want to have it made straight. Witness the great fortune amassed by a colored woman who provides a preparation for this purpose.

A Detroit Grand Jury declares that several departments of the city administration is honeycombed with graft, corruption, theft and extravagance, and names five prominent men for whom it demands arrest and punishment. The list includes paving contractors, a banker and heads of departments. There are more than one kind of bootleggers, but they all come under the same head.

BIG EGGS MAKE STRONG CHICKS, SAYS INSTITUTE

Big eggs make big, strong chicks, says the Blue Valley Institute in urging farmers in this locality to use only large eggs for hatching purposes.

Experiments show that 71.5 per cent of the weight of an egg at the beginning of incubation is the weight of the live chick hatched from that egg, according to the Institute. Eggs used in hatching should therefore be large and smooth-shelled, measuring at least one and five-eighths inches crosswise. These eggs may be picked out by means of calipers or by use of a stiff card-board having a one and five eighths inch opening cut on one edge. The egg should be held up with the thumb and forefingers at the ends, and all eggs rejected for hatching purposes that are either too small crosswise to fit tightly or touch both top and bottom of the points of the opening.

Big, strong chicks from large eggs are easiest to grow, states the Institute, and early developing pullets regardless of breed will be found most profitable. Pullets should be developed and laying by the season of early frosts, and when 25 weeks old, Leghorns should weigh three pounds, Rhode Island Reds 4 pounds and Plymouth Rocks, 5 pounds.

THE BASE BALL ROOTERS

In the big ball parks the rooting by the crowd is a part of the fun of the game, and the amount of noise let loose would be heard a long distance if other sounds did not offset it. Rooting has its psychological element in deciding who shall win, and the school and college athletes lean heavily on its influence.

A good cheer leader has a post of weighty responsibility. A fellow who can keep the crowd shouting and singing when the home team's fortunes are low, provides a mental influence that offsets the drooping spirit of many players. It nerves them on to the final pitch of effort that creates unexpected victory.

Now if that rooting spirit can be carried into activities of the larger world and if we will root for home town progress as ardently as we used to about for the school team, some good results ought to follow.

THEY ARE NOT BAD

Every day or so some clergyman or reformer makes the assertion that the young people of today are on a toboggan for Hades, or at least going to the dogs. Then there are sensational stories of sex orgies in college life and books that savor of barnyard odors without number.

The statement of President Hopkins, of Dartmouth, that the young people of today "are a cleaner lot in their morals than any in other age," comes as a refreshing and stimulating hope.

Harry Emerson Fosdick says: "I am enthusiastic about, and concerned for this bewildered, adventurous, but hopeful generation. Do not run it down. They are thinking far more than their fathers did."

The fact is it's not the younger generation which has gone to smash but only certain people who have gone to pieces. They have found the life too much for them to stand under.

NOTICE TO DOG OWNERS

The April 1925 Grand Jury submitted to me a list, showing the names of Owners, Harborers and Keepers of dogs in Boone County, who have failed to license their dogs for the year 1925, and directed me as Sheriff, to summon to appear in the Boone County Circuit Court at its next August Term, all persons on this list who have failed to license their dogs on or before June 1st, 1925.

The license will be issued to you, either in person or by mail, by the County Clerk, upon the payment of the proper license fee. If sent by mail, include 5c for postage and state kind and sex of dog.

Section 68b-17 Kentucky Statutes, provides that it shall be unlawful for any person to own or keep any dog unless such dog is licensed by the County Court Clerk of the County in which the dog is kept, and Section 68b-33 Kentucky Statutes, provides that any person violating or failing or refusing to comply with any of the provisions of this Act shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction shall be adjudged to pay a fine of not exceeding One Hundred ($100.00) Dollars or to undergo an imprisonment of not exceeding Three (3) Months or both, at the discretion of the Court.

der. They would have smashed at any time. But the younger people who have come from good homes are not smashing. Very far from it. And why run them down?

THE MOST LAWLESS NATION.

Should it not alarm us to learn that more robberies are committed in a year in New York or Chicago than in all England, including Scotland and Wales? Should we not hang our heads in shame to discover that, on the basis of each 100,000 population, homicides were seven times as numerous last year in the United States as they were even in Spain, and that America is the most lawless country in the world?

The average age at which crime is committed has been lowered in the last five years by at least three years. Most crimes are now committed by boys. It is a terrible thing to read that "the average hardened criminal is about 17."

There are causes, of course, and nearly every investigator traces these causes back into the home, the moving pictures, the school and the church.

There are remedies, too, in better

The BULL'S EYE

Editor and General Manager
WILL ROGERS

Another 'Bull' Durham advertisement by Will Rogers. Bull's Durham, the best of all tobaccos, is a fact. It is the only one that has won recognition wherever tobacco is known. It still offers the public this—more flavor, more enjoyment, and a lot more money left at the end of a week's smoking.

NEW YORK is building some more of those subways under the ground. No use building any more, people can't find their way out of the ones they got now. There's people down underground in New York that haven't been up for years. New York people are just like a lot of Gophers; every time they grab a hole in the ground they grab a nickel and duck for it. If they keep on living underground, in two more generations their children will have fur like a rat.

What's this Subway got to do with 'Bull' Durham?

Nothing. What do people outside New York care about how New Yorkers live?

Nothing. But there is an old saying that one half the world don't know how the other half live, so I am telling you how they live, not as an Ad but as a fact. Five million Ground Hogs in New York rush through life missing one Train and being shoved into the next. The real trouble is that they can't smoke 'Bull' Durham down there.

P. S. I'm going to write some more pieces that will appear in this paper. Keep looking for them.

SIXTY-FIVE YEARS AGO!

Today is the day, yes, it's true that Boone county has had big days before, and we are expecting to have still more of them, but this is the first time that the neighboring city of Covington, our sister county seat, has ever penetrated the fastnesses of Boone on such an expedition. This expedition, citizens of Boone are not prompted by selfish motives. They simply enter our midst in a friendly attitude, and, primarily, for the purpose of getting better acquainted. And that we now address the citizenry of the entire commonwealth in general, and of Boone-co., in particular, is Kentucky's crying need. To get better acquainted with each other, in other words, to eradicate sectional feeling.

If the different sections of our state know and realize the needs of the other, and have the interests of the entire commonwealth at heart, then it should be an easy matter to get together on public issues and adjust our differences, both political and economical, to the best advantage of our Commonwealth as a whole.

If we trade in Kentucky, of course our money stays in Kentucky, and Boone county will ultimately reap her portion of the benefit.

Summarily speaking, trade in Boone county first, if you can't get it at home get it in Covington, then have their goods.

ours, and our progress is assured.

STILL LOCATED NEAR LAWRENCEBURG FERRY

Still and Liquor Destroyed But the Owners Elude Officers in Brush

On last Friday night a still was located just east of the Lawrenceburg Ferry by Sheriff Hume and deputies Snyder and Uza. At the time the still was located by the officers no one was present, nor could any one be found in the vicinity of it. However the officers left the still undisturbed and Snyder and Uza returned on Saturday morning.

As they approached the still the next morning the men were seen running through the bushes. The officers started in pursuit, firing as they ran, but the fugitives avoided them in the extremely heavy undergrowth.

They returned to the still and destroyed it. It was a ten gallon still with five barrels of mash. This was destroyed as well as 10 gallons of liquor which was also found near the still.

This is the first still yet found by the officers where whisky was being made from corn mash instead of by the simpler and easier method of corn sugar.

The still was situated in an ideal place, according to the raiders, who are at a loss to know how the barrels and other parts of the outfit were transported to the scene of distillation, as it would be impossible to approach the place in a vehicle of any kind.

PROMINENT CITIZEN OF HEBRON IS DEAD

Bank Director and Member of the Church Board of Councilmen

Frank Hossman, aged carpenter, passed away at his home in Hebron last Friday night at eight o'clock. Mr. Hossman was highly respected in his community, and a devoted member of the Hebron Lutheran church, being a member of the board of councilmen of that organization. He was also a member of the board of directors of the Hebron Deposit bank.

He was 69 years, two months and 25 days of age at the time of his death, and is survived by his wife, one son Frank Hossman, Jr., and one daughter, Mrs. O. C. Hafer, both of Hebron.

Funeral services were conducted by Rev. G. A. Royer from the Lutheran church at 2 o'clock Sunday afternoon with interment in the local cemetery.

Undertaker Wilford Bullock had charge of the funeral arrangements.

J. C. BENTLER DIES AT HIS ERLANGER HOME

Former Citizen of This County and Prominent Erlanger Man

John C. Bentler, aged 70 years, passed away at his home in Erlanger on Monday May 14th, after a lingering illness of heart trouble. Funeral services were from the late residence Thursday with requiem high mass at St. Henry's church at 9.00 a. m., after which the remains were taken to St. John's cemetery for interment.

Mr. Bentler was formerly a citizen of Boone county, residing at Burlington for many years, where he was engaged in the blacksmith trade. His shop was in the same building where one is now conducted by Chas. Birkle.

Mr. Bentler was actively engaged in the coal business until five months before his death, at which time he sold his property interests to the Dixie Supply Co. He is survived by his widow and two sons Wm. and Lewis Bentler.

Undertaker Philip Taliaferro had charge of the funeral arrangements. The Bentlers have a number of friends in this county who regret to hear of their bereavement.

COMMENCEMENT ACTIVITIES START AT FLORENCE H. S.

The annual baccalaureate sermon was delivered to the members of the 1925 graduating class of Florence High School last Sunday evening at the Baptist church. Rev. Cardwell of the Methodist church occupied the pulpit for the occasion.

Commencement exercises will be held on Thursday evening the 14th with Rev. Holloway of Lexington delivering the class address.

MAY 16th IS STRAW HAT DAY

According to an unwritten law straw hats may be worn after May 15 regardless of weather conditions. It may be of interest to men to know that the straw from which most of these hats are made comes from China, Japan and Italy. The value of the manufactured product is about $33,000,000.

DECISIVE VICTORIES ARE WON SATURDAY

Hebron and Bellevue Won Over the Burlington and Florence Teams

Bellevue delivered a decisive triumph to Florence last Saturday afternoon on their home grounds by the score of 7 to 1. Bob Hayden Wilson twirling for Bellevue acquitted himself in creditable fashion, while Yesley, in the box for Florence was bumped pretty hard at times.

The hitting of Less Ryle and J. Brady for Bellevue, aside from the pitching of Wilson, feature the game.

The Bellevue team will visit Petersburg next Saturday, where a good contest is anticipated.

Hebron and Burlington locked horns on the local lot for their first game of the current season last Saturday afternoon. When the game was called in the seventh inning on account of rain the count stood 3, with the Hebron team on the long end. Hazel Walton pitched good ball for Hebron, while "Pete" Brady, for Burlington, was a victim of poor support at times.

Walter Brown, who hit the ball so hard at Florence the week previous, let the pecky pellet enter the count with him in the sixth inning, when he was hit on the head by a fast one. He resumed his position at the bat but soon became so sick that he had to be removed to his home, where he lapsed into unconsciousness. Dr. Duncan, who attended him, was considerably concerned for a time, but he soon came around and was on the street Sunday apparently as well as ever, with the exception of a slight headache.

A meeting was held in Burlington on Friday night in the interest of another county league, but from reports we have of the meeting the idea has practically been abandoned for this season at least.

THIRTEENTH ANNUAL COMMENCEMENT HELD

At Petersburg With Eleven Graduates Receiving Diplomas

Although it was the thirteenth commencement and Friday night at that, this superstitious alignment failed to mar in any manner whatever the annual exercises at Petersburg this year.

Delivery of their respective theses by members of the graduating class, the music, the class address and everything were all that could be desired. The address by Dr. J. J. Castleberry, pastor of Walnut Hills Christian church, Cincinnati, was delivered in that superlative style, which needs no introduction to Boone county's radio audiences, as Dr. Castleberry speaks from WLW each Sunday at 6:45 p. m. Splendid musical numbers were rendered by three members of the Schouthuysen orchestra of Southgate, Ky.

Those who received diplomas 11 in number, were Cordelia Berkshire, Ruth Chambers, Emma B. Nixon, Emelyn McChord, Benjamin Jarrell, Robert L. Mashe, Margaret E. Walton, Ruth Hensley, Alice White and Irene Berkshire. The members of the eighth grade class also received their graded school diplomas at the same time.

County Superintendent J. C. Gordon presented the diplomas.

BURLINGTON P. T. A. WILL GIVE PROGRAM

Prize Winning Declarations To Be Rendered On May 29th, 1925

The Burlington P. T. A. will meet at the Court House Wednesday night May 29th. Mrs. Hook is leader for May and her helpers for weeks are Mrs. Stanley Eddins, Mrs. Garnett Tolin, Mrs. W. R. Davrainville and Mrs. Lloyd Weaver.

This will be a good program and the children will put on a Good Health Red Cross, Kathryn Arvin, Virginia Yelton and Robert Hensley will repeat the declarations which won prizes at the county tournament.

A good program has been prepared and a large attendance is expected.

UNION SCHOOL NOTES

The last meeting of the P. T. A. will be held Wednesday eve. Immediately following services at the Presbyterian church. An interesting picture show will follow the meeting.

Don't miss the P. T. A. play "Deacon Dubbs" to be given at the school house Saturday, May 16th, at 8:15 p. m. (Standard Time). General admission 35 cents.

The eighth grade commencement exercises will be held this week. Exact date not known.

Goebel's Bullet Torn Suit Is Found In the Attic of Georgetown Court House

MAXWELL RETURNS HOME

Charles Maxwell, member of the Boone High School graduating class returned to his home last Wednesday.

Maxwell is the young man who sustained such a serious injury in the recent Boone county school tournament at Florence, from whence he was removed to the Christ hospital at Cincinnati where he remained in a critical condition for many days.

Prof. Hook and members of the class were very much concerned for a time thinking that the young man, who plays the leading role in the class play, "Her Victim," would not be able to take his place.

However, when the curtain is drawn on this production next Saturday evening, they are assured that he will be able to take part.

MORE MONEY FOR BURLEY POOLERS

Another Distribution On 1923 Crop In June Authorized by Directors

Lexington, Ky., May 6.—Directors of the Burley Tobacco Growers' Co-operative Association, in regular monthly session here today, voted to

to the growers of the 1923 crop as soon after June 1 as possible and not later than June 20.

Action by the board followed reports of a widespread movement to buy the participation certificates of growers who are in need of money at only a fraction of their real value and attention was directed to the fact that Secretary and Treasurer H. Lee Earley already has been instructed by the board to refuse to transfer any certificates sold by the growers to speculators.

In all cases of the sale of participation certificates the checks will be mailed directly to the grower and not to the buyer of the certificate, it was said.

The amount of the distribution to be made in June could not be ascertained but it was said that it will be as liberal as possible and that no grower need feel the checks will be mailed directly to the grower and not to the buyer of the certificate, it was said.

Additional sales to European tobacco manufacturers and one sale, the first on record to that country, has been made to the Japanese government monopoly, President and General Manager James C. Stone announced.

Reports were made by the heads of the various departments and it was said that delivery of the 175,000,000 pounds of tobacco sold since the season opened in December has almost been completed.

The field service reported 191 new members for the month, most of them voluntary signers of contracts, and a total membership to date of 108,444. Reports of dumping by members were said to be largely exaggerated.

Community organization work has been extended to Ohio and to a number of new counties in Kentucky, the report of that department showed.

All members of the board were present except Judge Robt. W. Bingham, of Louisville; W. H. O'Brien, of Indiana; Hon. Elliott Northcutt, of West Virginia and Clark B. Patterson, of Mt. Sterling.

LAWRENCEBURG CONTINUES TO WIN IN K. I. O. LEAGUE

They are beginning to realize that Lawrenceburg is really in the running in the K. I. O. League this season. Leslie Ryle, of this county, is making his presence felt with his heavy war club, a home run from which was a deciding factor in their victory over the El Ricco two weeks ago.

Last Sunday the Hoosier team won an easy victory over the Kentucky Jockey Club by the score of 8 to 1.

TURBULENT TIME OF TWENTY- FIVE YEARS AGO RECALLED WHEN GOEBEL'S SUIT IS FOUND IN THE COURT HOUSE

The moths are rapidly destroying the last bit of material evidence used in the nation famous trial which took place in Georgetown through the first years of the 1900's—the case of Cael Powers for the assassination of Goebel, Democratic nominee for Governor of Kentucky.

This bit of evidence is the bullet torn suit which Goebel wore at the time of his assassination. It rests in an old trunk in the attic of the Scott county court house. After the famous trial, which lasted over a period of years, Goebel's family did not claim the suit or any of the other material evidence which accumulated through the long case. And now it rests there in the attic in that old trunk—musty with dust as well as tradition—an attraction for moths and bugs as well as for curiosity.

The incidents leading to the state wide trouble in the latter part of 1899 and the first part of 1900 are still familiar to the older people of the county.

It seems that in June 1899, Goebel was nominated for the Democratic candidate for the Governor of Kentucky. The tri-cornered Democratic party was not satisfied, and another branch of the party put the nomination on the shoulder of John Young Brown.

The Republicans nominated Walter Brown in the heated contest which followed.

However, the state legislature was Democratic in both branches so it was not without protest from the Democrats that the Republican Governor was inaugurated on December 12th.

The affair grew in import until on January 30th, when Goebel and 1,000 armed men from the eastern part of the state took their places around the state house to see that the Republican administration was not unseated. Feeling ran to the idea that Goebel was to be put in the governor's chair.

The situation reached its climax on January 30th, when Goebel was mortally shot by some one hidden in the office of the secretary of state. Goebel was on his way to the state house at the time of his assassination.

Goebel was administered the oath of office before his death on February 3rd.

On March 13th, 1906, the famous trial reached its apex when Justice Harlan, of the United States Supreme Court, decided an appeal against Powers. Powers was tried by the Scott county court three times, two resulting in terms for life, and one resulted in a sentence to death. The Kentucky Court of Appeals interfered in each sentence so that neither of the three were executed.—Georgetown Times.

THE KID BALL GAME

One of the proud moments in the history of a boy, is that day when he is informed that he has been chosen to play a position on the ball team representing his grammar school. He feels he has climbed some distance up the path of his dreams. Then if he can come and tell Dad that he caught a fly from his remote outfield position, or made a run, he sees himself far up on the path of glory.

It is a somewhat inspiring sight, to see these little folks play one of their kid games. They have reached a new stage of development. Previously their hours had been spent in aimless ways, and they had not gained the conception of team play. Now they want to do something!

ger, which calls upon the individual to subordinate his own desire to the need of his team. If they learn that lesson thoroughly, base ball has taught them something that will be very useful to them later.

THE WILD FLOWERS

This time of year brings supreme pleasure to many persons who love nature, in the beautiful wild flowers that adorn the fields and roadsides. Many of them lack the luxuriant beauty of garden blossoms that have been developed by long cultivation. But they have a very pure charm of their own and, many fields covered with them are a matchless carpet of beauty, that no fabric ever manufactured by man can equal.

One should drive his automobile in such a tearing hurry, that this natural beauty can not be appreciated. Many nature lovers familiarize themselves with the haunts of favorite blooms, and feel that something is lost if they have not visited these spots each year and gathered some of these lovely blossoms. But one should be careful of certain varieties that are growing scarce, as free picking by motor parties is threatening to destroy some choice species.

THE KID AND THE FISHPOLE

Some of us here in Boone county will think on these fine spring mornings, about those old boyhood days when we used to get out the fishpole after a winter's rest, excavate the garden patch with feverish energy, and start for a reheated campaign against the diminutive fish of some neighboring pond or stream.

Not many thrills of later years would equal the excitement of that moment when you saw your cork disappear beneath the water, and when you encountered a firm resistance from the mysterious depths of the pool. No success in later years quite equalled the triumph you felt when a flopping creature surrendered at your feet. There were moments of unforgettable sorrow when the biggest one of all got away. The fish we caught were not valuable, but they represented the first triumph of man over the natural world, and the kid heart rejoiced. Them was the happy days!

VACATIONS FOR COWS URGED BY PROFESSOR REED

"A cow should have a vacation full feed every year. Instead of being turned into the back pasture or the staked field and forced to rustle for herself, she should receive a balanced ration including legume hays or pasture, just as she had to have to produce the maximum flow of milk when fresh."

This is one of the ideas that Prof. O. E. Reed of the Radio Farm school of the Blue Valley Creamery Institute is trying to get across to farmers. Since a 100 per cent efficient cow is the result only of a calf properly grown and fully matured it is important that farmers acquaint themselves with the essentials of raising good dairy calves, says Prof. Reed, who is a widely travelled, thoroughly experienced dairyman at the head of the dairy department of the Michigan Agricultural College.

The time to begin to raise good calves is before they are born, says Prof. Reed, "and poor calves are calves that were not right when they were born. We are told that from the time the egg cell is fertilized until the calf is born 95 per cent of the power of growth has been expended. This makes it plain that everything possible be done to furnish the necessary nutrients for development and growth during this period. A cow cannot produce good strong calves year after year without having proper care and feed and being given a rest from producing milk each year. In some herds the cows have plenty of vacation but they are not fed properly when dry. This is too important a time in the calf's life for the mother to be so treated. The cow must be properly fed at the time and the ration should contain succulent foods if at all possible."

"Nature's plan of having the cow raise her young is good, but modern dairy practices are even better and more economical. Raising the calf 'by hand' and making the diet largely skim-milk is the most practicable and desirable. Experiments conducted at the Indiana Experiment station showed an average daily gain of 1.67 pounds per day for a lot of 12 calves as compared with 1.88 lbs., daily for the same number of calves on whole milk. So while the skim-milk calves will not look quite as thick as the first few months as the year will generally find the skim milk calves better, provided they had been properly fed. The skim-milk calf becomes accustomed to eating grain and hay early in life, and does not suffer a setback when weaned. The calf that has been fed on whole milk has not been accustomed to getting very much of the nutrients from grain and hay, and invariably does not gain as rapidly as does the skim-milk calf for the first two or three weeks after it is weaned."

SAVINGS BANK GAINS

Savings deposits in 893 banks amounted to seven per cent more April 1 than they were a year ago. This is a most encouraging feature, and indicates that the year has shown development in prosperity.

It ought also to mean that a great mass of people have decided that their only hope for security and welfare is to cultivate the saving habit. Also that they have concluded that they make no mistake when they invest in good banks in their home neighborhoods.

The savings deposit in a bank assembles the product of the thrift of many families, and puts it to work, in the ways which expert officials decide is the best for the depositors. The managements of these banks are often asked to risk this money in securities that promise high rates of interest, and to loan it to individuals whose credit is doubtful. These managements acquire from long experience a keen insight into business propositions and personal character.

They are wise enough to know that it is far better to give up a little interest, rather than place money in enterprises where they may lose the whole principal. At the same time

THE VANITY OF MAN

Yes, man loves to decorate himself. Ever since the invention of furbelows and ribbons and powder puffs and lip-sticks, man has been teasing the opposite sex. But I am willing to bet seven little wrinkled potatoes that the dear men would adorn themselves with just such useless truck if custom would allow it.

If it were the style, the majority of men would simply look like a ribbon show, with feathers in their hats and a dozen ruffles on the legs of their Sunday trousers. And yet men say that man is not a vain animal! Why, bless your soul, women would not dress half so gay were it not for pleasing the men. Women don't stick on fuss and feathers to please their own vanity, but to attract the attention of the men, hoping to turn it into admiration. Men, like moths, love the gaudy glitters that dazzle your eyes.

So you think you wouldn't wear skirts do you, my masculine gender? I have seen you decorate your horse with rings and ribbons and buckles, just because you dare not put them on yourself. But haven't I seen you march in the ranks of some secret organization, where out on parade, dressed in more glory than Solomon ever dreamed of? You march through the streets of a neighboring town with your stomachs pushed away in your briskeys so's to bulge out your manly chests and display a big brass medal.

And in reading about savages and cannibals, you notice that it is the men who wear the gayest outfits? He is the dignified head of the barbaric family and all the paint and feathers belong to him. If he makes a good appearance in the war, they are happy.

Oh, yes, the vanity in the world is confined to the weaker sex, as it seemed good to some misguided man to describe woman. Anyhow woman has just lately begun wearing warm brown curdury pants decorated with blue drilling patches.

IN THE NAME OF THE CHILD

Mr. W. W. Gaines, school board member and former president of the board of education, on Friday, April 18, completed his annual visitation of the schools composing the Atlanta system. This is a record unique in Atlanta's school history and unique we dare say, in every school system of equal size in the entire country. Furthermore, this is a record of active interest in the city's business unequalled by any other public official in Atlanta's service. Mr. Gaines is now the senior member in point of service of the school board and during all the years he has been on the board he has made it a point to visit every grade in every school every year. Serving without a penny's compensation and having no political aspirations except to be useful as a citizen and constructive as a public official he has given unstintingly of his time and talents in promoting education in this city.

Nor does a play the role of inspector or supervisor. Recognizing the child as the most important part of the system he goes directly to the child in the classroom. Sometimes the children recite, or sing, or play for him and sometimes he talks to them. It may be to tell a fairy story or a hero tale; it may be a few words from history, biology or travel; it may be a story of optimism, service, or love; always it is the father heart going out in speech and in personality to the boys and girls of our city.

The children have come to know him and expect him. Every school looks forward to his visit. Indeed he is doubtless known to more teachers and school children than any other person in the city except the superintendent. Commenting on his experience, Mr. Gaines said: "I greatly enjoy these visits to the schools and the children. They give me accurate, first-hand knowledge of each of the schools. There are 68 of the schools and each one has its own individuality. No two are just alike. And the boys and girls are fine. They are a real inspiration to me. I would not trade my acquaintance with these boys and girls of Atlanta for anything else Atlanta could give me."

Long after rules, regulations, elections and squabbles have been forgotten, Mr. Gaines will be remembered as the man "who told us that pretty story" or "gave us such a nice talk."

A man such as he deserves public approbation. We commend his superb service to any who would serve his fellowman.—Atlanta Journal

(By Peter Keegan)

The Myers case which is now being argued in the Supreme Court renews the controversy brought up by the McCarli case recently, relating to the powers of the President. Senator Pepper, who is representing the estate of Frank Myers, maintains that Myers' removal as postmaster at Portland Oregon was illegal because the Senate did not confirm it. Opposing Pepper is Solicitor General James M. Beck who argues that such restraint on the power of the President would cripple the Executive Department of the Government so that it would be rendered practically useless. Mr. Beck, who is the author of an authoritative book on the Constitution, is interested especially in that phase of the case, insisting that the Constitution was intended to create a strong Executive Department and protesting against "Congressional Despotism."

The adjournment of Congress does not necessarily mean a vacation for the members of Congress, many of whom are still in Washington working on the various committees. The Sino-Port joint congressional investigating committee, for instance, has been called upon by the Department of Agriculture to recommend the forfeiture of about 40,000,000 acres of land granted in 1864 to the North Pacific Railroad Co. Two limits, one of time and another on the prices of the sale of land, are said to have been violated by the railroad company. An act of Congress is required to complete such forfeiture and it is the work of the Sino-Port committee to investigate the conditions of the case prior to introducing a bill for the sixty-ninth session of Congress. The land involved covers a large area extending in an 80 mile belt from Wisconsin to Oregon. Much of the land is built up into towns or owned by individuals, but all of the owners of course, would be recompensed by the Government should it be confiscated.

Secretary of the Navy Wilbur thinks that play and work may walk hand in hand, and although he is anticipating no fishing trip, he has gone off with Mrs. Wilbur and Maj. General John A. Lejeune, commandant of the Marines, or the "Syph" for cruise duty to Fort Huachuca. The Secretary is reviewing several hundreds of pages of evidence in the Alameda base case and he is visiting Quantico where aviation tests are being carried on.

There has been much speculation over the possibility of Senator Wm. M. Butler of Massachusetts resigning from the Chairmanship of the Republican party in order that he might have his time to organize his campaign for the Senatorship next year. Out of the whispered conferences of the waiting rooms at the White House comes the declaration that this is not true and that his co-operation with the committee will aid him in his race for the Senate seat from the "bay state."

This season of the year in Washington always hatches out a number of eccentric romances. Last week the marriage of Mrs. Flora Gortner, 63 years old, to Theodore Forst, 23, was announced, and pretty Delight Porter Arnold, who was to have married Martin Marshall Marston, a prominent clubman, ran off without even a whisper to her intimate friends and married Prince Haliloff, a Russian officer in the Russian army, whom her father had met in Constantinople. He has been, of late, a dancer in a cabaret in Washington.

President Coolidge is not the only man in the administration with an economy program. Congressman Madison of Illinois, chairman of the House Appropriations Committee, stated last week that approximately $50,000,000 would be cut from the taxes next year as a result of the large Treasury surplus. Martin B. Madden is THE authority on money matters of the Government as all bills relating to Government finances must be introduced in the House of Representatives. He is in favor of bill which would automatically cut the tax whenever treasury surpluses justify.

One of Washington's most beautiful women and a favorite in the National Capital's society has been recently appointed to be third secretary of legation at Bern Switzerland. She is Miss Lucille Atcherson, and is among the first women contestants to pass the State Department examinations for entering the diplomatic corps. Miss Atcherson has for several years been detailed to the State Department but in spite of her recognized ability has not until now been sent to any foreign country.

LIVES LOST THROUGH IGNORANCE

Each year more than two million babies are born in this country. Upon their feet the nation must march forward. The lives of two hundred thousand babies are lost every year, largely through ignorance and lack of protective measures. Five other countries take better care of their babies than we do. Where New Zealand loses only forty-two out of every thousand babies born, and Norway sixty-two we lose seventy-six. One out of every thirteen babies born in this country fails to reach its first birthday.

And in the waste of our motherhood we have an even more serious accusation to face. Sixteen other countries have reached their maternal mortality lower than we have. In this country between sixteen and twenty thousand women die in childbirth each year. One out of every one hundred and eighty-five confinements ends in death. With adequate care, most of these deaths could be avoided. The neglect of parental and natal attention for mothers is closely related to the loss of the hundred thousand babies who die in the first month of life.

EDUCATIONAL INEQUALITIES

As a nation we spend over a thousand million dollars a year to educate the twenty-four million children who are in our schools. Of that amount but a fraction over one per cent is expended to insure that they will grow to strong manhood. According to the U. S. Bureau of Education, but one-tenth of the nation's school children are receiving "anything which even pretends to be adequate physical education and health training."

It is estimated that we pay one billion four hundred million dollars a year for the services of physicians and other healers, for nurses, hospital services, drug and patent medicines, while for health work, part of which at least is preventive, we spend through Federal, State and municipal agencies only sixty millions. We actually spend a larger sum in this country for chewing gum than for health activities.

Ten million school children in our rural districts are beyond the reach of the better health facilities of the cities, and the possibility of opportunity is demanding the attention of educators and statesmen. Every child should have a square deal.

THREE PRECIOUS RESOURCES.

Nearing the end of a long life, rich in those things generally esteemed worth while, John Burroughs wrote: If I were to name the three most precious resources of life I should say books, friends and Nature; and the greatest of these, at least the most constant and always at hand, is Nature.

Nature we have always with us, an inexhaustible storehouse of that which moves the heart, appeals to the mind and fires the imagination—health to the body, a stimulus to the intellect and a joy to the soul.

These great resources, which a great philosopher has highly seem available to pretty nearly everybody and particularly to people who live in the country. But they are not. Unless an appreciation of them is cultivated they remain perpetually out of reach. Like the spiritual powers of life, they are an inexhaustible checking account to some, an account that is never open by others.

It is the principal job of a president to be photographed in all kinds of poses, after which he may be permitted to give a little time to public business.

THE GOOD COUNTRY "EATS"

If a person mentioned the good food that he enjoyed in his country home, as his reason for not removing to some city, some folks would say that his mind was too much of a fleshly thing, and that he should not think so much of his stomach. And yet food is the chief essential of physical welfare. It makes a big difference whether people get the right kind of food or not.

It is hard to bring up a healthy family on poor food. The workers are deprived of their proper sustenance, the children can't grow as they should. You may stuff the heads of the children with book knowledge but if they can not develop physically owing to not having the right kind of food, their education is futile.

Food is cheaper in the country. Many families raise their own vegetables, and if they buy them, they get them cheap and fresh. When they buy food at the stores, they do not have to contribute to the high cost of store operation in cities. They can afford better food and usually they get it.

Second, country habits tend to make women good cooks. More interest is felt in cookery as an art, and the women glory in their faculty with this form of skill. They think and talk cookery much more than they do in the city. They become more expert at it, and their husbands, their children, and they themselves profit physically. People can eat more without overeating, where the food is well prepared and their stomachs can digest it better.

If you attend a country gathering you will notice that most of the people have well rounded and healthy looking faces, indicating that they are well fed. The city crowd is apt to be pale and sallow, indicating conditions where food costs high and where less attention is paid to the art of preparing it for use.

THE FAMILY DOCTOR

It is sometimes remarked that the younger men who are entering the practice of medicine, show an increased tendency to take up the work of specialists in some particular disease, rather than follow the line of the old fashioned family doctor. The career of the specialist is often said to provide higher fees and more comfortable conditions, with less of those calls in the middle of the night which impose such a heavy burden.

The medical student, however, might well ask if this tendency does not so threaten the crowding of the field that many of these specialists must lack business.

It will be a great misfortune if the good old tribe of family doctor should decline. Most of us can look back and see how at various points the skill and practical insight of some family physician offered us advice the value of which was simply priceless. He has turned us from some wrong course of habit, and by shrewd suggestions and skilful treatment, has helped us to avoid some menacing difficulty.

One reason why some medical students are repelled from the field of the old fashioned family doctor, is that to obtain a foothold in the same it is often necessary to go into the country towns and small cities, where they may not have a good chance to keep up with the latest developments of their science.

The Graduate School of Medicine of the University of Pennsylvania is doing a most useful thing, in forming extension groups all over that state, where doctors can get the latest ideas in their profession from competent specialists sent out by the university. This would be a fine plan, to put to work in Kentucky and everywhere else.

RETAIL COMPETITION

If the older people in the majority of towns through their business districts, they will find comparatively few concerns that were doing business 25 or 30 years ago. The great majority have commonly come in since that date.

It is often said that there is not much competition in business at present. The way business concerns keep changing, however, is a suggestion that there is a great deal of competition. Some business people of course make a success of their enterprise and retire or go elsewhere. More commonly these changes mean that an existing firm has been forced to close because of the competition.

This is a suggestion that the old ideas are not adequate for these times, and the fact that a certain business plan worked 10 years ago does not prove it will do so now.

PATCHING THE ROADS

In many places the common method of road mending about this time of year, is to take the worn out dirt that has washed into the gutters, and round it up into the middle of the road. Commonly this stuff has little road building value, and it is very apt in a short time to be swept out by traffic and weather conditions into the gutters again, leaving the road just about as before.

It costs a good deal for labor to work on roads in these times, and when that labor is being paid for, it should be employed on correct methods of maintenance and rebuilding. It costs more of course to secure the right kind of material to put on the highways. But it is better policy to do good work on a shorter strip of road and have it somewhat permanent, than to go over a longer distance in a superficial manner.

Wisconsin holds that the interest of the gasoline consumer is equally as important as the interest of oil and gasoline dealers, and has passed a law compelling gasoline dispensers to publicly display a list of their prices. Other states are studying the plan with a view of adopting a similar system.

Can The Schools Afford to Lose the $400,000 Paid The State Treasury Each Year by The Jockey Club

HON. JOHN M. ATHERTON, of Louisville, one of the first citizens of Kentucky in character and ability, contributed to a recent issue of The Courier-Journal the following closely reasoned and forceful article on the proposed repeal of the Pari-Mutuel Law and the production tax on Coal. He makes the strong point that the schools of Kentucky can ill afford to lose their share of the $400,000 paid into the State Treasury annually by the Jockey Clubs.

The Legislature and the Pari-Mutuels

To the Editor of The Courier-Journal:

The progress of the political campaign indicates clearly that the coming Legislature will devote much of its time to two subjects—repeal of the pari-mutuel law and a production tax on coal. As the session is limited to sixty days and considering the important interests of the State—roads, schools, education generally and State institutions—how much time will the proper consideration of these interests require, and how far will fair and impartial discussion and action be interfered with by the fight over the repeal of the pari-mutuel law and the coal tax? The difficulty of temperate discussion and legislation is increased by the failure so far of the two major parties to advance State platforms and become sponsors of legislative action. The result will be a free lance Legislature, worked up to fever heat over horse racing and a coal tax. However absorbing and exciting these issues may be, the fundamental interests of the State will not be essentially affected by any action the Legislature may adopt on either or both of these issues.

The progress and welfare of the State should receive paramount consideration and, if necessary, to accomplish this purpose, the repeal of the pari-mutuels and coal tax can be taken up after the real imperative interests of the State have been disposed of. Wiser still would be the indefinite postponement of one of these contentious questions. This course would lessen the danger of coalition and open the way for dispassionate discussion of the material interest of the State.

However much we condemn cliques and coalitions in the Legislature, it is known of all men that they are formed and will be formed to protect interests in which the members are more or less interested. The attack brings out the defense. This is according to the nature of mankind.

The doctrine of liberty of conscience is accepted generally over the world. Christianity has not suffered from the substitution of this doctrine for the old time persecution. Religion and morality are closely related, and why not apply the same doctrine in morals? There is no universal religion and no universal code of morals. Why not release to the individual conscience the right to decide on a debatable question of morals? A very large body of public opinion considers betting on a horse race to be sinful, while a very large number do not think it to be sinful. The conscience of neither will be affected by a statute. Betting on races will continue even though the tax on betting is repealed. If it is to go on why not tax it? Many object to the tax on the allegation that as citizens, they are made parties to the sinfulness of betting. But the justification of this objection lies in the assumption that betting on races is sinful, and around this open and controversial question the discussion will go on regardless of the opinion of a majority of the Legislature. Why not turn our thoughts to the great good that may be accomplished by the $400,000 the State receives from the Jockey Clubs each year?

In all democracies, education is preferable to coercion. The former acts on the inside—the latter on the outside. The former makes friends—the latter creates enemies. One makes recruits—the other encourages the deserters. The end does not justify the means, but when the end is beneficial and the means is open to honest and virtuous differences of opinion, the maxim does not justly apply. The money received annually from the tax the bettors on races pay will build forty two-room sanitary school houses in districts unable to build them. In ten years this money will build 400 school houses. Consider the gain in public morals from these schools and the teachers and the parents who will feel and know the State is their friend and benefactor. In be used to reform our State institutions and our State university. But another objection to the pari-mutuel law arises from the alleged inconsistency between the statute against gambling and the tax on betting on the race track. There is this inconsistency in the letter of the law, but no inconsistency in the administration of the law. It is to the spirit and enforcement of the law we look for its true meaning and value to society. The good that can be had from this tax on pleasure far more than counterbalances the gratification that can arise from the reconciliation of this alleged inconsistency.

These observations may be objected to as a sacrifice of principle to practice. But the principle put forth is not established and therefore is at best a doubtful sacrifice. Turn and twist the subject around and around and after all it brings us back to the mooted question, is betting on a race at the racetrack so immoral as to justify legal and legislative condemnation? On this question—a question of morals and not a religious question—there is no concurrence of opinion. Hence the liberty of conscience doctrine is invoked in the aid of peace and progress and in behalf of education. The failure of the State to supply equal opportunity to all the children of the State, and to properly care for the unfortunate inmates of the public institutions, presents a case of moral delinquency equal, at least in its turpitude, to the exercise of individual conscience on the racetrack. To use a trade phrase, Kentucky is longer on morals than on education. We stand near the bottom on education. We average up well in morality, and a large part of the immorality we have is due to this lack of education. The true sense of proportion is lost when the State deliberately refuses the good to be had from a tax on pleasure. Abolish this tax and you obtain no abatement of the evil complained of. Repeal the law, and betting "on the nod" goes in lieu of a pari-mutuel ticket, and the children in many counties assemble in huts with all their physical discomforts and depressing influences, and competent teachers shun employment under such conditions. The substitution of an arbitrary dictum on a question of morals that should be left to the individual conscience will not reduce our illiteracy, will not improve our morals, and will not pull us out of the mud.

THE LACK OF CONFIDENCE

It used to be claimed that residence in cities makes a person more confident, that the contacts with a greater number of people gives one a certain ease and feeling of ability to take his own part, so that city people have more capacity for going ahead and doing things.

There is not much truth in such an idea now, when country people have so many interesting things going on. But some country bred young people need certain experiences that will develop confidence. Here is where the benefit comes from social events, athletics, dramatic and musical performances. They give people confidence in their own powers.

THE GARDEN BACKACHE

Some householders who theoretically would like to do some work about their home places this spring, complain that as soon as they stoop over to fuss with flowers and vegetables, they get lame backs, which handicaps them in their regular work, so that the effort costs more than it comes to.

There are some impetuous folks, who after years of indoor work, will go out and labor so violently in these stooping positions, that they get lame muscles and backs that last for weeks and months. The boys of the family protest pitifully about how their backs ache when they get down to perform these tasks, with the result that they are very apt to be excused by tender hearted parents. When people show up such muscular weaknesses, it suggests that they have been neglecting physical development for years. The farm workers, who have done healthy outdoor work for long time, do not complain of lame backs.

It is commonly said that modern industry has little use for old workers. Yet if you look through the factories of almost any city you would usually find quite a number of men who are now working at their trade 40 to 50 years or more. There is a man in Beverly, Mass., for instance, who has been shoemaking for sixty-five years.

Some business men think that their older workers are not so efficient. They should realize that they have a value apart from amount of product. Many of them will do as much as any young man, for they came up from a time when it was not fashionable to limit production. It was the custom then to make goods that would last a long time, a good idea to impress on the young crowd. "TWO DEAD; TWO INJURED"

The season of the year is here when the headlines begin to run to dead and injured, especially those in the Monday editions.

In a recent instance the driver was perplexed by the blinding lights of the "car" ahead, but his perplexity did not arouse him to action soon enough to save the lives of two friends riding in the car with him.

On this road, the interurban line frequently crosses the highway from one side to the other, particularly at the entrances to towns. This happened to be at the outskirts of a town, and the automobile met the interurban as it was crossing the highway. When the driver realized the "blinding" lights were not those of an automobile, he made a frantic effort to evade the inevitable.

There is a lesson in every automobile accident, but so few people ever profit from them, apparently. This one particularly teaches the danger of driving too fast after dark on roads with which the driver is not familiar. Many accidents are due to unexpected road crossings and turns. No driver is safe driving at a high speed, but the margin of safety is considerably reduced when the driver is not acquainted with the character of the highway.

This is a factor in the driving of automobiles that few take into consideration, though on its hinges the fate of everyone who rides. High rates of speed on strange roads make driving especially hazardous at night, but some drivers learn the lesson too late.

THE WONDERFUL AUTOMOBILE BUSINESS

Recent reports from the automobile factories are that they are running practically up to capacity. Some pessimists have been thinking for some time that the automobile industry would soon reach its capacity, and be forced to slow down, but the more cars are made, the more people seem to want.

Owing to the many poor roads and to the speed which the American people seem to prefer in driving automobiles, cars wear out fast. The mere replacement of such scrapped machines is a tremendous business of itself. Also the outside world is just beginning to wake up to the value of automobiles. As nations and will demand more automobiles, and America has a long start in the business of producing them.

IN THE WAY THEY SHOULD GO

"Spare the rod and spoil the child" This has always been regarded as good sound philosophy, coming down from many generations back, and now comes Dr. Dandolph M. Binder, professor of sociology at New York University, and reinforces it from the modern viewpoint.

"Spank your children if you want them to grow up in the way they should go," he says. Corporal punishment will impress youngsters when nothing else will. Most parents are convinced of this fact, although there are occasionally some who have found it possible to spare the rod and still not spoil the child.

John G. Brown, an Indiana farmer who has been president of the National Live Stock Producers association, has found such a thing possible, according to his observations on rearing a family, which appear in a monthly farm magazine. And the convincing thing about his testimony in favor of the rodless household is the evidence he offers. His family of nine children was reared on the farm and all who are interested in farming. They have been brought up in the way they should go, which is an accomplishment of which any parent may well be proud.

"We have tried to keep the home influence dominant but not dominating," writes Mr. Brown, commenting on the fact that he never found it necessary to use the whip.

Here is a course of action that has succeeded eminently well and might be studied by parents who actually feel the responsibility of parenthood and honestly want to succeed at the job.

When the home is made the chief interest in the child's life, and when the child is given some responsibilities without overdoing it, the influences that make the rod necessary are not of sufficient consequences to cause trouble.

Now that the snow shoveling season is over, it will be safe for the Weary Willies to go North.

A bumper huckleberry crop is predicted for this year, and the householder will tell his wife to lay in plenty of pie plates.

THE FUTURE OF FARMING

Some people can only see the immediate present. Others look ahead. Many of the country people have been discouraged of late, because farming did not seem as prosperous as other lines of business.

The best test of the outlook of a business, is as to whether it supplies some essential or not. If it supplies basic needs, it can't help being good in due time, because the people will demand its product, and will have to pay enough to make it profitable and induce people to remain in it. Agriculture is bound to be prosperous, because it supplies the most essential of all needs, that for food. Those who get out now are in the position of speculators who sell on a market that is beginning to rise.

SLOW ACTION

While the country towns as a whole are going ahead, yet many of them remain stationary, and in many cases this stagnant condition is due simply to lack of initiative. These towns will argue about some needed improvement for many years. Then finally after wasting all that breath, and stalling and delaying, they will take hold of the project and put it over. If they had done the thing years ago, they would have saved a vast amount of energy, and would have placed themselves in a position to go ahead.

For instance, in one small town that could be named, a handsome church erected by a former wealthy resident, burned down. The ruined walls have remained standing for a dozen years, or so, creating an impression of decay that must have been harmful to the place.

Various plans for rebuilding or clearing up the ruins were suggested, but the conflict of opinion was such that nothing has been done until recently, when it has been voted to clean up the place and make it into an attractive park. If that decision could have been reached years ago the town would have been saved the depressing influence of that ruined structure all these years.

A progressive town should realize that in many exigencies that come up, there must be some kind of prompt action unless the community is to suffer injury. Also action that is prompt may be better, even if it is unwise in some respects, than long hesitation that gets nowhere. When a town will argue and argue for years over, or so, creating an impression that ought to be put through without needless delay, it indicates a certain lack of force that is harmful for prompt action about the things that need to be done, and if a thing is reasonably feasible and necessary, let us put it through at once.

OUR FRONT YARDS

If every family in Boone county or most of them, would make a special effort this summer to keep their front yards in attractive condition, and would set out a few shrubs and flowers where such grounds are bare and unadorned, it would make quite a difference in the appearance of the county.

The majority of our people do make such an effort for attractive grounds, but there are many of us who have been too busy to attend much to these matters, and our home grounds could be made more pleasing. Now is the time to get out with spade and watering pot and some flower seeds or shrub stock, and see what we can do to make a finer looking home place.

STUDYING THE HOME MARKET.

It is often noted that many families can get along on amounts that seem pitifully small to their neighbors, while there are many who have what seem to be quite lavish incomes, who are hard up all the time.

This difference is largely created by the differing degrees of thrift in various cases. But one large element in this difference, is the fact that certain families study their expenditure carefully, while others just spend as they happen to want things, without regard to whether they are getting good values.

The buyer for a business concern is supposed to spend a good deal of his time and money in the study of his market. A New England grain dealer once remarked that he made it his practice to telephone to Chicago every day to get the latest news of conditions in those markets. This cost him something of course, but he felt as well rewarded by obtaining the latest and most reliable information. Such buyers must usually spend considerable time in reading market reports covering the various lines they have to handle.

The making of purchases for a home is also a business and to do it well calls for a considerable study of the market. The ordinary home buyer does not have to take much time or spend much money to get this information. She can obtain it at a very slight expense, merely by reading the business news in her newspaper.

A person who reads the newspaper advertising thoroughly and constantly ought to be able to save a considerable share of the expense of financing a family. Such a one should have a clearer idea of the goods that are being sold, of the prices that prevail at the time, and of the places that are reaching out the most actively and efficiently to serve the public.

The thing about the house that lasts the longest and is used the most is the looking glass.

About the most important thing in life is what to do next.

Experience Does Count

Our many years of funeral directing have given us a rich background of experience and a service that we are proud to offer. Funeral directing is a profession and art, and to be well done it must have a firm foundation of experience as a guide. That we are able to offer.

CROWDED SCHOOLS

The people of Kentucky feel proud of their schools, and all they are accomplishing for the young people. But they do not realize the extent to which in many growing towns and cities, those schools are handicapped by crowded rooms.

With the taxpayers groaning over their assessments, there is some demand for a scripping policy in the schools, which may result in a certain number of crowded school-rooms. You put 50 or 60 youngsters in a room where a teacher should not handle over 30 to 40, and the capacity for trouble of that bunch of youngsters is greatly increased.

Also the time and energy of the teacher is spread out pretty thin, in her effort to put some wisdom into so many heads all at once. While she is getting an idea into one head, the other 50 may be conspiring to counteract the ideas she got into their little brains on the day before.

AIR PORTS NEXT

"A landing field and air port in every town," is the slogan of the new American Society for the promotion of Aviation. Its members are all ex-army and navy fliers, most of them veterans of the A. E. F. and some of them veterans of the Royal Flying Corps and the French flying service. An interesting feature of the new society is that not one member is connected directly or indirectly with aviation today. It is said that there are 18,000 ex-army mechanics and riggers with valuable knowledge born of experience, scattered all over the United States who are anxious to be of use.

In former years many country stores did not think they needed to advertise, because they did not have much competition, but that was before mail order houses were doing their present business.

Covington Good-Will Day Is Great Success In Everyway

Largest Crowd Ever Assembled In Boone County Gathers at Burlington To Greet Covingtonians

True to advance information the Covington Merchants and Manufacturers descended upon a considerable portion of the assembled populace of Boone county last Thursday morning, even as the proverbial glacial avalanche descended upon the quiet valley below.

The point of meeting was Burlington, the county seat, and the time was almost precisely as scheduled—11 a. m., central standard time.

The parade of about 150 automobiles and trucks preceded by two motor cycle cops, was met in front of the court house by a reception committee composed of N. E. Riddell, chairman, B. B. Hume, W. R. Rogers, B. H. Riley, W. L. Cropper, A. B. Renaker and R. E. Berkshire, who immediately escorted the members of the visiting party to the Baptist church where dinner was served to exactly 179, though this number does not represent the entire Covington party by any means, merely those of the association who had ordered dinner in advance.

During the dinner hour some of the purposes of the P. T. A. were outlined by A. B. Renaker. Treasurer of the organization, who suggested that if any of the visitors desired to contribute to a worthy cause that the opportunity was thereby presented. Suffice it to say that as the merchants passed out the door they left in the plate, $7.96, which will no doubt cause several bricks in the walls of the new High School Auditorium to be labeled "Covington." It might be mentioned further that though the Covingtonians left behind them many tired and worn bodies among the ladies of the P. T. A. that the same time those same weary beings encased in those happy hearts, for their greatest ambition in life now is to meet the associations obligation to the school board for the new auditorium, and this day was beyond question an enormous, vaulting stride toward the coveted goal.

After the lunch hour the assembled crowd, which had been entertained during the interim by Justin Huber's jazz orchestra, singing by Kern Aylward, and acrobatic stunts by Nona Rich, the diminutive, though proficient daughter of Bert Rich, of Covington, turned its attention to speech making.

Ex-Senator S. W. Tolin, of Burlington, formally greeted the visitors in an appropriate manner, to which salutation Mayor Daniel E. O'Donovan, of the Kenton county metropolis, responded with an enthusiastic speech. The mayor was followed by Ex-Mayor "Pat" Phillips, who introduced Orle S. Ware, Commonwealth's Attorney of Kenton county, who proceeded with a very cordial "get-together address."

Immediately following this the principal event of the day took place. This was the free drawing. For fear of omitting some one of them, and due to the fact that they were all publicly announced as the drawing proceeded, we will not attempt to enumerate the merchants who contributed to the drawing for they were indeed numerous. There were about 150 prizes distributed and the drawing consumed about an hour and a half.

The two free airplane rides were drawn by John Campbell, of Walton, and Mrs. Wallace Rice, of Idlewild. These rides were donated by a plane from the Crescent Airport Park, the plane being owned by Mr. Delehaunty, of Ludlow, and Mr. B. P. Court, soft drink manufacturer of Covington. Mr. Delehaunty married a Boone county girl, formerly Miss Catherine Crigger, of Hebron.

The conclusion of the drawing brought forth another musical concert, which was followed by a general dispersal. After the smoke had cleared away the tickets in the box were counted and there remained 1987 after more than 150 had been drawn out. It was estimated that 500 of those present failed to deposit at all, which allowed one to deduce that there were approximately 2500 people in attendance. So since the Covington merchants staged this as "Boone County Get-together Day" they should be pleased for the fact they "got a few of 'em together."

CONFEDERATE VETERAN RETURNS TO SPEND A DAY

Among the ex-Boone countyites in town last Thursday, was Capt. Elijah Parker, formerly of Petersburg, but for the last few years has made his home with his daughter at Saylor Park, O. Mr. Parker is 85 years old and looks well for one of his age. He served as Deputy County Clerk of Boone county from 1866 to 1874, under his brother A. B. Parker. He served three years and eight months in the Confederate Army, Second Ky., Infantry, was wounded three times in the battles at Chancellorsville, Ft. Donelson and in Georgia, and was taken prisoner at Clarksville, Tenn. His many friends were glad to shake hands with him once more.

FLORENCE HIGH SCHOOL HOLDS COMMENCEMENT

Annual Exercises Observed in Both Graded and High School

The Florence Graded Hi School commencement exercises Wednesday evening. Eight were given diplomas which will admit them to high school. Prof. Lucy, of Hebron, gave the class address and his talk was appreciated by the large audience and class, and of all the great truths left by him, the one that stands foremost is, "The friendly relation that exist among the schools of Boone."

On Thursday night the following received their diplomas from the High School Department: Ann Miller, Ada Pace, Maggie Northcutt, Mabel Tanner, Edna Jetter, Rosa Drinkwater, Adeline Arnold, Arch Marie Lucas and John McEvoy. Miss Ada Pace delivered the Salutatory address and Miss Adeline Arnold the valedictory. Hon. J. B. Holloway Hi School Instructor gave the class address and knowing the school system of Kentucky so well and its needs, was able to give to his large audience an address that was appreciated by all. Mrs. Shattuck's Orchestra of Ludlow, furnished the music. This is the first time in the history of the school that more were graduated from the High School Department than from the 8th grade. The High School department had an enrollment of 36—nine graduates which makes the ratio complete. Fine prospects are in view for this school as the community is growing in numbers rapidly.

EGG CANDLING LAW IS NOW IN FORCE

Force of Inspectors Increased To Prevent Selling Spoiled Eggs

Kentucky's egg candling law went into effect last Friday and in preparation for strict enforcement of the candling law, the State Board of Health has increased its force of inspectors over that of last year when warrants were taken out for 200 violators throughout the State.

The law passed in 1922, provides that all eggs marketed between May 15 and January 15 shall be candled and selling of spoiled eggs is punishable by fine, each spoiled egg constituting a separate offense.

Mrs. F. C. Dugan, director of the Bureau of Food, State Board of Health, has provided the force of inspectors large enough to cover every egg producing county, she says although the greatest vigilance will be in Louisville and other of the larger cities.

According to Mrs. Dugan, a survey shows that Kentuckians, prior to the passage of the egg candling law spent more than $1,000,000 a year for inedible eggs and due to the large numbers of rotten eggs in all shipments out of the State, those sent from Kentucky brought a much lower price than from States where egg laws were in effect.

"This law protects the buyer of eggs and does not cause him to pay for a product he cannot use—rotten eggs," says Mrs. Dugan.

ANNUAL CLASS PLAY IS SPLENDID SUCCESS

Inclement Weather Keeps Down Attendance—to be Repeated

Though somewhat hindered by threatening elements, a splendid crowd greeted the presentation of "The Victim" at the local picture theater last Saturday evening. This play, given by the Senior Class of Boone High School, was one of the very best amateur productions ever staged in this town, according to the opinion of some of the best critics here.

Just at the time when folks within a few miles of town would have prepared to start for Burlington, a severe looking storm hovered over this section, which unquestionably induced many to stay at home. There fore, when the first curtain was drawn the house was not quite filled, though the first presentation of a home talent play almost invariably draws an overflow house here.

In saying a word about the caste, an injustice would be done the balance to mention the good qualities of any in particular, as it can truthfully be said that this caste was almost perfectly balanced, each one seeming especially adapted to his or her particular part, with the splendid coaching they had received in evidence in almost every line and action. When consideration is taken of the fact that most of them were without previous experience in a theatrical way, they performed exceptionally well indeed.

It has been announced, that, owing to weather conditions last Saturday evening, this play will be repeated on next Saturday evening, May 23rd, at the same time and place.

ELIJAH STEPHENS IS DELEGATE FROM SIXTH

District to Modern Woodmen Convention at Milwaukee in June

At the quadrennial session of the Modern Woodmen of America of the State of Kentucky in convention assembled at Paris, Ky., on May 6, Elijah Stephens, of Burlington, was selected as a delegate from the sixth district of the state to represent this district at the National Convention which will be held in Milwaukee, Wis., some time in June.

Mr. Stephens has long been identified with Modern Woodmen activities in this county and it is the opinion of men well acquainted with Woodmen affairs that the selection of Mr. Stephens at the Paris convention could not have been improved upon.

At this meeting Paduech was selected as the scene of the next quadrennial convention.

BASE BALL.

Petersburg defeated Bellevue on the home lot of the former last Saturday afternoon in wild affray, featured by juggling, juggling, and wild eyed throwing in profusion. Brady on the mound for Bellevue, was bumped harder than he has been for some time, while Christy, who started for Petersburg, was considerably off-color, both in control, both in control and effectiveness, and was relieved by Berkshire, the sixth, who managed to hold the opposition in check, the Harley Sprague, the third man to face him drove one to the Aurora Ferry of his delivery.

These two teams will face each other again next Saturday at Bellevue.

Burlington journeyed to Hebron last Saturday afternoon where the two teams indulged in an abbreviated contest. The shortness of the contest was due to an interruption by rain which occurred in the fifth inning with two men out and two strikes on the third man. The score at this juncture was 11-1 in favor of Burlington.

"Old Pap" Brady, who has assumed the captaincy of the Burlington nine, was on third base, with his youngest son, known as "Pete," occupying the pitchers mound. "Pete" is in pretty good form for the five innings that he pitched, according to those who witnessed the contest. Walton and Hafer, who took turns at pitching for Hebron were not in their customary form, as they permitted the visitors to tamper with their delivery unmercifully.

The two teams will re-engage each other in combat next Saturday afternoon at Burlington.

There isn't a man or woman living who cannot think thoughts worth fortunes. But they lack the spark of self-confidence which makes the difference between the Doer and the Dreamer.

ATTENDANCE RECORD OF INDIANA PUPILS

Almost Equals That of Petersburg Lad—Exceptional Nerve Displayed.

In last week's issue the Recorder carried a feature reciting the school attendance record of Millard Nixon, of Petersburg, who has failed to miss a day in his entire eight years school life, in the same week's issue the Ohio County News, published at Rising Sun, Indiana, published an attendance record of two of their local students, which comes pretty close at least to our Boone county record. Although the Boone county student has been "bested" in number of years, at the same time one of the Indiana students deserves special credit for keeping up his attendance while suffering with a broken arm.

Following is an account of the Ohio county record as quoted from the Rising Sun paper:

The recent ending of the 1924-25 school term shows up another perfect year in attendance for Miss Thelma Monroe and Jesse J. Monroe, the children of James and Pearl Williams Monroe of Pleasant-Ridge. This makes six years of perfect attendance for Miss Thelma and five years for her brother, who is the younger of the two.

Despite the fact that Jesse had the misfortune to break an arm while swinging on a grape vine at school this spring, he had the pluck and determination to continue his school work without missing a single day. That arm hurt, and hurt badly, too, but to have missed a single day from school would have hurt Jesse much worse, and he bravely stood all the pain—and did it gladly, too—buoyed up with the knowledge that he was keeping his attendance record up to the top notch.

His brother possesses the same pluck and determination and they are quite proud of these documents.

Jesse has passed to the 7th grade and has held a perfect record ever since he started to school as a member of the primer class. His sister has graduated from the 8th grade and she has made a perfect record since her second year in school.

It is likely that the Monroe children hold the best record for attendance of any school pupils in the county. Should there be others whose records are still better, the News will be glad to receive a report of same.—Ohio County News.

POOL GROWERS TO GET LARGE DISTRIBUTION

More than $31,000,000 Paid Members Since January 1st.

Lexington, Ky., May 11.—Growers of burley tobacco who are members of the Burley Tobacco Growers Co-operative Association will have received by June 20 a total of $31,000,000 on their 1922, 1923, and 1924 crops, since January 1, Secretary-Treasurer H. Lee Easley said Saturday, or about $5,000,000 more than the entire 1920 crop sold for.

Business throughout the burley tobacco district will be given a summer boost by the distribution in June by the Burley Tobacco Growers Co-operative Association of not less than $10,000,000 to the growers of the 1923 tobacco crop. This was the best piece of news for farmers, bankers and business men that has come out of the offices of the Burley Co-operative since the reports of big sales of the past season and the distribution of more than $6,000,000 in final settlement for the 1922 crop.

Almost the entire membership will share in this distribution, which is to be in the hands of the grower not later than June 20. The total membership for the season of 1923 was 102,000 and the territory involved includes all of the Burley States—Kentucky, Ohio, Indiana, West Virginia, Tennessee, Missouri and Virginia.

It is not the intention of the Burley Association management to make another distribution on the 1921 crop at this time unless additional sales are made. Organizations of Locals of the Burley Co-operative is being pushed by the Department of Community Organization, with the assistance of the growers and their wives and children.

It is the purpose of the association to form community locals in every county of the district in order to keep the members informed in regard to the association.

KENTUCKY IS FIRST TO REACH ITS QUOTA

State Overseascribes Fifty Per Cent In Great Legion Drive

Indianapolis, Ind., May 15.—With two more states over the top in The American Legion $5,000,000 endowment fund campaign, several others expected to complete their quotas for disabled veterans and orphans of the World War in one very near future, National Commander James A. Drain, of the Legion, announced here today.

Arkansas and Tennessee have more than subscribed their respective quotas of $40,000 and $60,000. The campaign is not completed in those states, as many communities are yet to be heard from. West Virginia's quota is nearly completed.

Kentucky was the first state in the country to reach its quota. An over-subscription of nearly fifty per cent was made there.

The endowment fund campaign is now expected to close in the majority of the states in the final group late this month or early in June, it was said at national headquarters of the Legion here. Meantime, preliminary preparations for the intensive public appeal in those states are being hurried forward.

Rhode Island made its public appeal from April 27 to May 2. South Dakota has set aside the week of May 3 to 10 and Utah that of May 11 to 17 as "Endowment Fund Week."

New Mexico plans to do in one day what other states have taken one or two weeks to do. It will raise its quota of $10,000 on June 1. D. K. B. Sellers of Albuquerque, is the state chairman.

"How much more?" That was the laconic question which accompanied a check for the fund sent in by Martin Yellowtail post of the Legion at Kenel, South Dakota.

From Home, Commander of the post all but one of whose members is a full-blooded Indian, called a meeting. He explained the purposes of the fund to the town's twenty inhabitants. Contributions were at once made and more than the quota fixed was raised in five minutes.

Employees of the Denver office of the United States Veterans' Bureau made the first contribution to the fund in Colorado. Every employee contributed to the total of $225 subscribed.

Dr. H. H. Aldredge and other business and professional men of Englewood, Colorado, a town without a Legion post, asked that quota be assigned to the town. They made themselves personally responsible for raising it.

Mrs. O. D. Oliphant national president of the Legion Auxiliary, sent a telegram of appreciation to the Daughters of the American Revolution following endorsement of the endowment fund by that organization at its national congress at Washington.

REV. PAUL G. GILLESPIE DELIVERS THE SERMON

To Graduating Class of Boone High School Sunday Evening.

The baccalaureate sermon, the second event of the Boone Hi School class week, was delivered by Rev. Paul G. Gillespie last Sunday evening at the Baptist church. The church was very tastefully decorated with beautiful flowers, while the evening's program included several vocal selections, including a male quartet, the outstanding number being a solo by Mrs. Flossie Campbell-Martin, her rendition of "Open The Gates" being masterful in the highest degree.

Rev. Gillespie, who takes a two-fold view of school life since he is both teacher and preacher, rendered a very broad and pleasing discourse, which brought unstinted praise from the entire gathering.

Commencement exercises for the class of five graduates will be held next Friday evening in the same building with Rev. H. C. Runyan, of Latonia, delivering the Class Address and Prof. Soretin, of Vienna, an accomplished violin artist rendering the music for the occasion.

AN APOLOGY

The name of Russell Cook was inadvertently and unintentionally omitted when the list of graduates was copied in our little story on the Petersburg High School Commencement last week's issue.

It is indeed difficult to see how Russell could be overlooked as he is by far the tallest one in the class, but, be that as it may, the error has occurred and like other errors occur, and we now offer public apology for the mistake.

KENTUCKY LAMBS OF VERY HIGH QUALITY

Probably Seventy Five Per Cent of Lambs Already Trimmed, Is Report

Lexington, Ky.—Reports received by the Experiment Station indicate that probably 75 per cent of the spring lambs in Kentucky have already been trimmed. This means that a large percentage of the crop will be of high quality, according to Richard C. Miller, sheep specialist who has been conducting a lamb standardization campaign. Several counties have reported that 90 to 100 per cent of their lambs will go to market trimmed and docked.

Mr. Miller urges all sheep raisers to trim their lambs. He says that this is important, regardless of when they are marketed. All lambs under six weeks old should be both castrated and docked, and all older lambs should be castrated. There is no danger in performing these operations this late in the season, provided the lambs are used on the wounds after the operation, he said.

"There are going to be more lambs on the market this year than usual," Mr. Miller stated. "This will mean lower prices on inferior lambs at least, if not a lower general price. When the supply is above normal, inferior lambs sell for a much greater margin over inferior lambs than when the supply is small and competition keener. Therefore it would seem especially wise to raise only high quality lambs this year."

KENTUCKY COWS GO ON RECORD AT STATION

Animals Owned by Experiment Station are Butter Fat Producers

A year-old Jersey cow owned by the Experiment Station at Lexington, recently completed an official 365-day test, which she produced 415 pounds of butterfat and 8,083 lbs. of milk on two milkings a day. Her milk average 5.16 per cent fat. This record qualifies her for the Register of Merit of the American Jersey Cattle Club. Steinhilber Itchen May 2d, a senior two-year-old Guernsey by the Experiment Station, recently completed a 365-day test in which she produced 6,355.9 pounds of milk containing 345.5 pounds of butterfat.

ADDING SOMETHING TO BEAUTY

Some people make it their duty to set out each year something on their home place that shall add to its beauty. It might be a rather expensive job and one taking a good deal of time to make a thorough job of beautifying it all in one year. But if a family would resolve that every year they would set out some new shrubs and vines, or a few hardy young trees, or add some circles of perennial flowers, every year that home place of theirs would grow more beautiful and would become a constantly increasing source of pride and affection.

CARD OF THANKS

We desire in this way to thank our friends for the multiple kindnesses shown us in the recent illness of our son Charles Maxwell, resulting from an accident suffered at the Florence tournament. Especially do we wish to thank Rev. Gillespie for taking him to the hospital, also Mr. Walter Huey for taking care of him at his home.

Just half of the Cabinet which Coolidge inherited from Harding will continue to sit around his council table, if Weeks decides to resign his portfolio as Secretary of War. They are Secretary of Treasury Mellon, Secretary of Commerce Hoover, Secretary of Interior Work, Secretary of Labor, Davis and Postmaster General New. The renewed indications of the imminent resignation of Mr. Weeks brings many speculations as to who will fill his post. Dwight F. Davis, Assistant Secretary of War, is mentioned prominently as Weeks' successor, both because he is familiar with the work and because Coolidge wants to avoid sectionalism in his appointments. Having recently appointed Sargent, a New England man, as Attorney General, the President is likely to choose a man from the middle west to take Weeks' place it is rumored here. Davis is from Missouri.

Each day brings forth statements from the various Senators pro and con the revision of the Senate rules, as advocated by Vice President Dawes. Senator Fess, of Ohio, expressed himself in favor of revising the rules to require Senators to speak to the issue before the Senate and an amendment to that effect was submitted to the Committee on Rules by Senator Watson during the last session of Congress. It is believed that Dawes will have the support of his party in such revision of the rules, and that Coolidge is in favor of it too. The Democratic Senator from Arkansas, Joseph T. Robinson stated however, that the rules needed no revision, the President of the Senate having it in his power to decide whether a Senator is speaking to the issue or not.

The citizens of Washington won victory in their battle to elect a self-governing body which was selected by representatives of various municipal community groups. Washington, which has been governed largely by the Congressional District Committee, will have a central body through which to voice opinions, and according to Senator Capper, Chairman of the Senate District Committee, this council will receive the cooperation of the Senate.

Gaston B. Means, the man who stated that his avocation in life was answering to indications, but that he had never been convicted of any, will have to retract the latter half of that statement, since the Court of Appeals has confirmed the decision of the jury who convicted him of having conspired to illegally remove liquor from a bonded warehouse. Means, who had been out on bail, has been taken into custody, that he may begin to serve the two years term in the Federal penitentiary at Atlanta, to which he was sentenced. A $10,000 fine was also imposed.

Washington will have to wait till the "chickens get old enough to scratch for themselves," before Mrs. John Garibaldi Sargent pays it her first visit. Mrs. Sargent was unable to accompany her husband to the National Capital when he was called to fill the place of Stone as Attorney General, because she was suffering from a severe attack of the grippe. Since she recovered from her illness, she has postponed the trip until after the chickens had been hatched. That farm life holds more allurements for the Attorney General's wife than the society whirl of the Capital is evidenced in her reluctance to "barter this Vermont air for Washington."

A great number of Government Employees are going through the throes of small-pox, according to the recommendation of the Public Health Department, in the attempt to prevent the spread of the dread disease which has resulted in fifty-four cases and 19 deaths since January 1st. Officials at the Health Department denied, however, that the disease had reached epidemic proportions, and stated that it was well under control. The President was strongly advised to submit to vaccination, because of his daily contact with the hundreds of visitors with whom he shakes hands, but no official statement has been given as to whether he did so or not.

Influence is the greatest ideal to which man or woman may aspire. Many men have acquired prominence from the standpoint of success, but their influence on the world departed with them. That is not true of Washington, of Lincoln, of Frederick the Great, of Emerson, of Luther or of Christ. A man is great only in the influence he leaves upon mankind—and it is a peculiar fact that only the good influence endures. Influence has no death. There is a life after death, because a man lives in what he has left.

MEMORIAL DAY

Patriotic organizations are preparing for Memorial Day. It is a sad commentary on American patriotism that this responsibility falls to the lot of those who suffered the most when our common country was in danger.

Rather should those who are enjoying the freedom that was won by patriots, assume the burden of keeping alive the spirit that Memorial Day engenders. To patriotic societies belong the credit for sustaining such a national holiday.

Rather should those who have been fought mainly by volunteers should have a day set aside annually to honor the patriotism of its citizens.

Memorial day has been an evolution of the people. It would not exist but for the volunteer armies that have mainly fought the battles of the United States.

This country has never had a standing army on the European basis. We have no conscription law that sends every able-bodied man into camp for at least two years continuous training. Even in the civil war volunteers filled all quotas for the first two years of the tremendous conflict, and to the end formed the great bulk of troops in the field.

No disparagement of the regular army is meant, but it has often been comparatively small and is but a handful now. Our volunteers have been the chief reliance in times of war, and no national contest has ever ended with unsatisfactory terms of peace. The citizen soldier has never failed to make his mark.

No other country has the counterpart of Memorial Day because no other has such a record of freely offered service in army and navy. When men leave the vocations of peace to bear arms wherever they might be directed to go, and for a slight money compensation compared with what they give up in occupations of gain without danger, they are not alone in making the patriotic sacrifice.

American women fully share in the volunteer spirit. In the sorrows that war brings on, they bear the keenest of the suffering. When women advise sons and husbands to enter the army, the proof of love of country is unsurpassed.

All people meet on common ground in the anniversary. American men, women and children are in fellowship with what the day implies in the nationality that, powerful as it has become, is yet new in its infancy.

SUMMER RECREATION

What can we do with the children during the vacation period? This is a problem that confronts most parents and a happy answer to it is being sought.

It is not so great in the country because there is not so much danger that children will get into mischief on account of idleness. The farm offers plenty of work for strong young muscles, and near to nature as it is, the tasks are health promoting, body building work.

But in the town and city, anxious parents are constantly seeking ways and means of keeping the active youngsters occupied. They like to be busy doing something, and if a method can be found to turn their energy into useful channels, they will be benefitted and the temptation to fall into evil ways will be removed.

With a scarcity of work for the young hands, the best substitute is a playground center where a part of the vacation time can be devoted to organized play.

Many communities have recognized their responsibility and have provided playgrounds, as well as a director.

MISPLACED—Persons furnishing dishes and silver for P. T. A. dinner are asked to look for extra pieces taken through mistake. Please leave same with Mrs. Lee Cropper.

"SPRING"

I see the tiny grass blades springing

The song of the Robin o'er vale is ringing.

The bluebird's nest is high in the tree

And there he is singing his joyous glee.

He sings in the morning,

He sings in the night,

And when winter comes

He makes his great flight.

From the sunny southland,

The bluebird does fly,

He comes back to welcome

Both you and I.

Spring is the gladdening time of the seasons,

And I will tell you why,

These are my reasons: Because of the flowers and the green grass that grows

By the side of the brook where the crystal stream flows.

SHOP TEAMS

If certain radical agitators had their way, the workers would spend much of their time in thinking about the wrongs of their class, and in studying up ways to create social revolution.

Sensible people will say it will help these workers more to use Saturday afternoons and an hour after their supper, in healthful out door sports. Such diversions brighten them up and so improve their working ability that they can increase production and be worth more to any employer.

One of the best things that the younger men in any factory can do is to organize a shop ball team. Such an aggregation will give them their out door exercise that they need after indoor labors. A shop league of such teams in a town or a group of nearby places provides a fine way of spending leisure time, and promotes good feeling in industry and pride in one's place of employment and one's community.

PUSHING THE LAWN MOWER

It is with some feeling of distaste that many of our men resume the work of pushing the lawn mower. Many of them envy the prosperous fellow who can spend all his spare hours driving around the country while his hired gardener keeps his home place looking trim.

Yet it should not be a sore trial to push a lawn mower once a week over the soft turf. There is said to be a certain health giving quality in the soil. It does not hurt a man a bit to press his feet on it once in a while, instead of on hard pavements.

Some men make lawn mowing a more difficult job than it need be, by allowing their machine to get dull, or letting the grass grow long. Rightly handled, the mowing job will give you a better appetite for the meals the good wife cooks. You will regain confidence in your physical powers, and have more endurance when it comes to next sun-hot days.

CUT WORMS DESTROY TOBACCO

Several farmers have reported to the Experiment Station at Lexington that cut worms destroyed their tobacco plants in the bed. In some cases the beds had to be resown. A poisoned bran mash may be used to kill the worms. It is made by mixing two level teaspoonfuls of Paris green in a quart of bran or two heaping teaspoonfuls of arsenate of lead in a quart of bran. Put the Paris green or arsenate of lead on dry bran and stir thoroughly until each particle of bran has been poisoned. Four or enough water to dampen (not wet) and scatter over the beds or around the edge. Molasses added to the bran tends to increase its effectiveness. It may also be advisable to dust the plants with arsenate of lead, or spray them with a solution of 1-3 of an ounce of arsenate of lead to a gallon of water. The evening is the best time to spray or spread the poisoned mash.

SEEING AMERICA FIRST

Growth of motor camping, both as a recreational and educational factor, has been so marked within recent years that 3,000 communities in tourist parks, with the result that a complete list including all the national and state forests reservations would run over 10,000 according to the educational department of the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce. While most of the motor campers journey individually or in groups of two or three cars, the Michigan Automobile Tours, under the auspices of the National Grange, will conduct an organized motor caravan of 200 cars and 800 travelers over a 2,000 mile route through mid-west and eastern states this year starting from Battle Creek about August 5th.

TOO MUCH FAMILIARITY

Records show that during the last three years more persons have been killed in avoidable automobile accidents than there were American soldiers killed on the battle fields in France during the World War. The modern traffic problem is one of the most difficult questions that confronts this nation. Cities were not laid out or designed for the traffic that now demands control. With 17,000,000 registered automobiles, practically one for every six persons, it is not to be wondered that 20,000 men, women and children are killed every year, while twice that many are injured, many of them permanently.

This alarming fatality is largely due to carelessness because of familiarity. It is safe to assert that 99 of every 100 people who stand within 24 inches of an auto traveling at 20 miles an hour, or dodging between them at street intersections driven by amateurs would hesitate to get within ten feet of a locomotive moving at 15 miles an hour on a defined and grooved path.

Then, of course, are the one-handed drivers, and the moon-eyed drivers, and the bear-eyed drivers, who contribute to most of the accidents.

"POPPY DAY"

The Veterans of Foreign Wars of the American Legion will observe Friday May 22nd

a day set aside for the preservation of the sacred memories of those who made the supreme sacrifice in the World War, the Spanish War and other foreign wars.

The custom of wearing a budding poppy on Memorial Day, and by this means provide employment to disabled veterans, is most commendable and no doubt every citizen will gladly respond to the appeal.

While many of the flowers are made by the women's auxiliaries, a factory is maintained in Kansas City for the manufacture of the flowers and in this place are employed veterans who are incapacitated for other work. The flowers are exact replicas of the blossoms so familiar to the ex-dough boys uring their campaign in the fields of Flanders.

DOES ECONOMY HURT BUSINESS?

The president of the Rotary Club at Washington discussing business conditions, asserted that "if everybody stops spending money the time will soon come when nobody will have any money to spend."

This was really a criticism of President Coolidge's advocacy of rigid personal economy, and but expresses the growing resentment that prevails among many business men who say that this policy is hurting business.

Whether this be true or not the fact remains that savings bank deposits are steadily growing. Of course, these funds eventually find their way to stock and bond markets and make possible the big capital flotations. Money may be diverted from one channel to another but it is never idle.

Most people rejoice in the idea of economy in governmental matters, and will support the President in his efforts to hold them down. The same business principles should apply with equal force to every other business, public or private. One can't have his cake and eat it, too.

BIG CITY CONGESTION

President Coolidge, speaking to a gathering of Automobile Club secretaries some days ago, expressed some doubt as to whether the very great cities are as efficient as they have been thought to be. Many students of social conditions will say that the big cities have reached a point where they expect too heavy a charge for the privilege of having a home in them.

If the streets are so crowded that business vehicles have to move very slowly to get anywhere, it is expensive distributing supplies. If it is pushed to exorbitant values, it will cost too much to own or rent homes there.

If stores have to pay high rents, they must add these charges to their goods.

The time would seem to have come for movement to persuade people not to crowd without reason into the great centers of population. If a person starts for such a community with a vague idea that the opportunities are better there than elsewhere, the chances are strong that he will be sadly disappointed.

If he comes more money, which is doubtful, he will have to spend more for the cost of everything. The visitor to almost any great city must be impressed with the way traffic gets jammed. As he sees trucks waiting for the time until they can move, he must feel that the consumers of the stuff carried by those trucks are having to pay the cost of that jam, as charges are imposed sufficient to cover the expense of slow moving deliveries.

National Unity

President Coolidge, speaking at the dedication of a Jewish community center, appealed for a forward movement that shall unite all factions and races and sections in the common effort to realize American ideals.

Our people come from all over the globe, with the most various traditions and capacities. How can we unite all these people whose interests on the surface are often different, and who have been trained in such various ways?

And yet when you compare America with the countries of Europe, it will be seen that we have already achieved a high level of unity. While themselves to some extent, yet in most cases they get along comfortably. Meanwhile the racial elements of Europe are often on the verge of actual war.

When you put out money here in Kentucky for a school with a good American for a teacher, you soften the old asperities that make conditions in many lands so constantly menacing.

REFUSING TO FIGHT

Some of the pacifist element are going pretty far nowadays, and they advise that when the "next war" comes, young men should refuse to fight.

What would they do in a case like that of poor Cuba in 1898, when the Spanish conquerors were oppressing the weak with constant cruelty? What would they do in a case like that of 1917, when Germany was grinding its tyrant heel into Belgium and France, while American ships were being torpedoed on their lawful voyages? There come times when people who have any sense of justice must stand up for their rights, although if proper aid and help is given to the cause of world peace, it ought to be possible to show the nations that there are better ways than fighting for reconciling their differences.

According to government reports there is no truth in the statement that the slowing-up of business is due to failures of foreign markets. Our foreign markets are even better than normal. There's another reason for the slump in business and it may be found nearer home. Our real reason is the over-expansion of credits. About one-half the families of this country have mortgaged their earnings to the point of slavery for some years. Their purchasing power is exhausted.

JOHN S. GARDNER HERE—

John S. Gardner, Field Agent in Truck Crops from the University of Ky., on Monday and Tuesday of last week. On Monday evening he met with the men at Walton to discuss improved methods of growing tomatoes. He especially recommended the spraying of the tomato plants while in the plant bed with a 4-4-50 solution of Bordeaux Mixture. This should be applied three times before the plants are transplanted to the field. Fertilization is very necessary said Mr. Gardner if maximum returns are to be expected.

On Tuesday afternoon Mr. Gardner met with some of the watermelon men at Petersburg, and in the evening at Grant.

OUR AIMS IN LIFE

While it is my aim of habit in writing articles for these columns to direct the essence of the theme to the young, inexperienced and careless generation who are around us in the daily walks of life—who I know will shortly be successors in the governmental power—as well as in other high vocational fields of trust—ruling subordinates for good or evil—who are now young and tender and easily led to good results in life—if by anyone without a selfish, callous motive for gain—who shows and takes an interest in their future welfare—but I can safely say that there is not a reader of this humble and most insignificant article, young or old in age, who cannot take the above title, subject to heart with interest, if they have any intellectuality, the youngest child at the verge of accountability, has his ambitions or aims in life of rosy "aircastles" for his future in life—altho it may be "Hotair" and small, insignificant and impossible to those most interested in him, but none the less vital and important to him—of course as he advances in age, his ambitions or aims in life change to higher realities of life, as in the language of the "good Book," "When He was a child, he thought as a child, acted as a child and was a child in all things but when he became a man he put childish things behind him and acting as a man, pressing forward toward the mark to the goal of life that is sure and certain" with ever an unchangeable purpose of stability, not looking over the smaller positions in the fields of labor in the eyes of the aristocracy of mankind that are the very essence of even their existence of life of farming and the trades that furnish us the staples of life of bone, muscle and robust life-giving vitality of health and strength, for the present high-cultured, cultivated, intellectual sedentary life-sapping office chair in the financial realms of national commerce, for greed of the present large salary Boys! Girls! Girls! what good will a large salary do you, if you have wrecked your physical health and strength, both mind and body in so doing, which may culminate in the awful monster death—the executioner of old mother—fixed decrees of law—who will not heed and willfully ignore Her warnings, so plainly and often given, and who will only pay our funeral expenses, and a very welcome and unappreciated "bonus" to some of the nearest of kinship to us. So then let us affix our aims to raise our vocations that we are fitted and talented for, if they are not as high as the estimation and eyes of the cold, cynical, unsympathetic world of commerce, as we would like it to be—altho I consider all the vocational labor-high and honorable that is a benefit to our existence in life—much more so, than many of the so-called high vocations in the fields of commerce—tell me what is higher and more honorable to our existence in life than farming and bringing forth the staples for our every day use, the fruits from the fields of trades of the manufacture of cotton, and woolen fabrics for clothing, of shoes, building of houses and the thousands of other vocational exploits in the fields of labor that are so essential to our existence of life—considered by many in the higher spheres of the vocational ranks—in their own estimation, to be inferior to their own? But I think the notable event of our "world's war of 1917" opened the eyes of many to this fallacious idea and to the necessity of these vocational fields for the existence of mankind, which I take pleasure in thinking the great event was a severe "eye opener" or a curative remedy for this fallacious disease of unthinking that many of us that were favored a little more by fickle Dame Fortune than others in the grain vocational field of life, by favoring them with such sincurian, easy jobs to their liking, forgetting that the fickle mistress of "good luck" never favors any one of Her children for a life time, as Her name implies, but long enough in their sedentary positions of trust—to make their muscles and general vitality of vigorous robust health, soft, sickly and unfit for the more strenuous exertions of the more active employments in the vocational fields of life—do not try to fit yourselves to fill those sedentary positions so high in the estimation of mankind, if you have no liking or talent for the work itself, you will but fail with humiliation and distress if you do, but through the intellectuality that you have been so long and carefully cultivating and burning the mid-night oil in so doing—set a mark to a high standard of perfection, and by intellectual, scientific methods and the modern appliances that we have in the fields of science of the 19th century—raise the vocation that we now have to a plain that cannot be darkened, tarnished or hidden, altho it may now be small, unimportant and obscure in the eyes of the holders of those high vaunted positions in the vocational fields now—Remember it is intellectuality that makes aw of the positions in the vocational fields high and honorable through honest dealings with all mankind and through our honest aims in life.

I am with you in all intellectual pursuits.

BIG ROAD RALLY AT CARROLLTON

June 6th, When a Meeting Will Be Held In Behalf of The Federal Military Highway Between Camp Knox and Ft. Thomas.

Sensors Richard P. Ernst of Covington and Fred M. Sackett of Louisville and Congressman Arthur B. Rouse of Erlanger, will be the principal speakers at Carrollton on Saturday, June 6th, when a meeting will be held in behalf of the proposed Military Highway between Camp Knox and Ft. Thomas.

The meeting is being held under the auspices of the Chamber of Commerce of Carrollton, and arrangements are being made for the largest road gathering ever held in Northern Kentucky.

Arrangements for the big road convolve are in charge of a Special Committee, of which Hon. John J. Howe, Commonwealth's Attorney of the Fifteenth Judicial District and widely known throughout Kentucky for his remarkable race in last year's Senatorial primary, is Chairman. Mr. Howe has just made a trip into several of the counties traversed by the proposed route, and he reports that the plan to perfect a permanent Military Road organization at the Carrollton Meeting June 6th, has met with an enthusiastic reception, and he is very much encouraged over the prospect of securing this road.

Mr. Howe believes that the proposed Military Highway is the greatest opportunity that Northern Kentucky counties ever had or probably ever will have to take a great stride forward. The proposed road, he points out, passes through Campbell, Trimble, Oldham, Jefferson, Bullitt and Hardin counties, several of which counties have no railroads or other means of transportation and must depend on good roads for their economic salvation.

The importance of the road, however, he points out, lies not so much in its local benefit to the section it traverses, but in its usefulness to the Nation as an integral part of the National defense system. It would be a connecting link between two of the greatest Army camps in the country, and would be invaluable in time of National emergency as a means of quick transportation for troops and supplies. It would also relieve the congestion of the railroads serving as an auxiliary system of transportation, a need which was so clearly brought out by the experiences of the past war. At present, it is pointed out, it is necessary to transport troops between Camp Knox and Fort Thomas by means of river barges, a system wholly unsatisfactory under any conditions and of course, out of the question in any National emergency.

While the primary purpose of the proposed Military Road is its utility as a part of the National defense, it would during peace times serve the needs of a large section of the country's population, probably as much or more so than any Military Road in the country. It would considerably shorten the distance between Cincinnati and Louisville, two of the largest cities of the Middle West, and would serve well over a million people directly along its route, in addition to probably more than three times this amount in the outlying regions.

The proposed route also possesses scenic attractions which would make it one of the favorite tourist thoroughfares.

Several thousand invitations to attend the meeting have been sent out by the Carrollton Chamber of Commerce to good roads enthusiasts all along the route, and in addition large bills carrying the heading "Everybody Invited" have been distributed throughout the various counties. Several counties have already organized their delegations and are making arrangements to attend the meeting in a systematic way.

Ralph M. Barker, former Director of Warehouses of the Burley Tobacco Growers Cooperative Marketing Association and widely known tobacco broker of Northern Kentucky, is President of the Carrollton Chamber of Commerce, and will be one of the speakers at the big meeting. Carrollton, it will be recalled, held the first meeting in the organization campaign of the Burley Association, and it is credited with a large share in the success of this organization. Mr. Barker, in preparing to launch the campaign for the Military Highway with this meeting at Carrollton is going about the arrangements with his customary vigor in handling affairs of large proportions, and is personally directing certain features of the program.

Arrangements have been made for a brass band of forty pieces and other entertainment features are being worked out by the Committee.

The purpose of the gathering at Carrollton June 6th, is to perfect an organization to promote the interests of the Military Highway and to see that it is successfully steered through the various legislative stages until it is an accomplished fact. The suggestion that such a meeting be called at some central point on the proposed route like Carrollton was originally made by Hon. J. Barker Holcomb of Warsaw, former editor of the Warsaw Independent. One of Mr. Holcomb's recent newspaper articles presents a strong brief for the proposed Highway and gives an idea of its value as a part of the Nation's defense system, as well as its inestimable benefit to the section it serves.

BOONE COUNTY MEN IN KENTUCKY POLITICS

Judge S. W. Adams Announces for State Senate — Richard Northcutt For Police Judge.

Recent political developments in Kentucky county brought into prominence the names of two former Boone county men, when Judge S.

for the State Senate from Kefton, and Richard Northcutt made known his desire for the Police Judgeship of Covington.

Judge Adams was born and reared on Gunpowder creek, but has spent his entire active life in Kenton county, where he has been a very successful practitioner of the legal profession. He has represented Kenton county in the lower house at Frankfort, where he held the honor of being its speaker during the last session. He was appointed by Governor Fields to fill the unexpired term of Judge F. M. Tracy on the Kenton Circuit Court bench, being defeated at the last regular election by his Republican opponent, who rode in on the crest of the general landslide. A member of the law firm of Northcutt & Northcutt, is also a former Boone countyman. Mr. Northcutt was reared on the hills of Middle creek and is a graduate of Boone High School. He afterward attended Law College at State University of Kentucky.

NAMED TO BE CADET.

Roy S. Thompson, Erlanger, Recommended By Congressman.

Congressman A. B. Rouse has named Roy Simpson Thompson, Erlanger, Ky., to be a cadet at the U. S. Military Academy at West Point, N. Y.

Thompson was graduated last year from the high school at Erlanger, Ky. He has passed the physical examination for entrance to the academy and because of his having in excess of 15 credits in his high school diploma, no mental examination was required for his entrance. Thompson will enter as a "plebe" at the academy July 1.

"Kirtley Klopp was chosen out of a class of one hundred and five students as assistant teacher in the Chemistry Department at Transylvania University for the coming year. Kirtley was an honor graduate of the class of 1924 of Brookville High School."

Kirtley is a son of Chas. Klopp and formerly lived at Petersburg in this county.

Supt. J. C. Gordon will not be at his office next Monday, as he will attend the graduating exercises at State University, Lexington. His youngest daughter, Miss Edna, being one of the graduates, Miss Edna has been selected as one of the State Examiners of teachers diplomas, and will begin her duties at Frankfort June 8. His oldest daughter, Miss Mary, is at home from Boston, where she has been taking special instruction in Emerson School of Expression.

BOONE HIGH SCHOOL COMMENCEMENT HELD

Address and Music splendid—Class Play Repeated Saturday Night

The commencement of the Boone High School which was held last Friday evening at the Baptist church was one of the most successful and entertaining affairs of its kind ever held in Burlington, according to local observers who have been attending this annual event for years.

Prof. Soranin, of the Cincinnati College of Music, and an exceptional violinist, more than pleased the large audience with his wonderful renditions, and Prof. Hook is to be congratulated for being able to obtain such an artist for the occasion.

Rev. H. C. Runyan, pastor of the First Christian church of Latonia, held the complete attention of the packed house during his entire discourse. Rev. Runyan has been heard in Burlington, but he was never better than at this occasion.

Prof. Hook's vocal rendition of "The Garden of Tomorrow" was another pleasing feature of the evening, and his short talk to the class in presenting the diplomas was indeed worthy of the favorable comment that it received.

The members of the class who successfully completed the four year course and who were rewarded by diplomas were Misses Martha Bush, Bessie A. Baldon and Myrtle Edkins, and Messrs. Charles Maxwell and Arthur Maurer.

All that remains of the 1924-25 school year of the Boone County High School is memories. The Senior Class has dispersed and gone on their ways in life. We hope that they will continue their education so that they can better fill their respective stations in the future.

Following the commencement on Friday, the Senior Class presented a play at the movie house on Saturday evening, and although the house was not filled, the presentation was equally as good, if not better, than the first. This was the last public appearance of the class of 1925 and marked the completion of one of the most successful school years Burlington has ever experienced.

Base Ball.

Petersburg visited Bellevue last Saturday afternoon and those who witnessed the contest saw Wilson of Bellevue, being very near setting his foot in base ball's hall of fame. Some even go so far as to say that he really deserved a "no-hit" game. Both the Petersburg and Bellevue scorers allowed the Petersburg team two hits, but some say they were the "scratch" variety. The RECORDER would be glad to give this boy credit for a "no-hit" game, but since we did not see the game, we can not state our opinion as to whether or not it was such, but we merely state what our reports of the game were. In a report of this game it would not be proper to omit favorable comment of the pitching on the other side, as Berkshire, of Petersburg, really must have pitched quite a game himself when he held the slugging Bellevue boys to two runs. One scorer gave Bellevue six hits and one four. At any rate the final score was 2 to 0 in favor of Bellevue, and it must have been a real game.

Bellevue plays Erlanger two games at home on Decoration Day, while Petersburg will play two at Florence.

Hebron came over last Saturday afternoon and succeeded in taking the Burlington club under by the score of 13 to 8. "Pete" Brady was not in the fine form of the week previous, and even at that would have held the score considerably lower with better support.

Joe Bullock, on the mound for Hebron almost took the air at one stage of the game, but came back to earth, and pitched fine ball for one who had been hit so hard in one inning. Joe was to receive a new glove if he fanned ten men, and the last man up was "Pap" Brady, who made the tenth out. Brady is always a hard man to get on strikes, so Joe earned the glove. The features of the game were the hitting of Riley for Hebron, who drove out two circuit clouts, and of Hook, for Burlington, getting a double, triple and a base on balls in four trips to the plate. The professor has batted six times for Burlington and obtained five hits.

RETURNS FROM HOSPITAL.

W. D. Cropper returned Sunday from the Jewish Hospital, Cincinnati, where he has been undergoing treatment for the past week. He is not as yet able to return to his duties at the Boone County Deposit Bank, however; during his absence, affairs at this institution have been very ably conducted by G. B. Kelly, assistant cashier.

BOONE COUNTY GIRL WILL BE GRADUATE

Of Georgetown College This Year—Graduate of Petersburg Hi School.

Georgetown, Ky., May 22.—Miss Bernice Duncan Grant, of Burlington, will be graduated on June 3rd from Georgetown College, Georgetown, Ky. Following her graduation Miss Grant intends to be a dietitian. Miss Bernice is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Grant, of Bullittsville, and was graduated from Petersburg High School in 1921.

Commencement exercises will begin with the baccalaureate sermon at 11 o'clock Sunday, May 31. Dr. H. W. Virgin, pastor of the North Shore Baptist church, Chicago, will preach the baccalaureate sermon. The Kentucky Baptist Education society will meet Monday, June 1st, followed by the Senior Oratorical Contest at night. Other events which will take place during the commencement week will be the meeting of the Woman's Association, exercises by the department of music, class reunions, alumni banquets and business meetings and the annual meeting of the board of trustees.

Among graduates from Georgetown College are listed two United States Ambassadors, two State Governors, twenty-three college presidents, nineteen statesmen, twenty-six editors, 126 lawyers, forty-six authors, 120 college professors, four mayors, fifteen judges, nineteen engineers, forty-seven bankers and seventy physicians.

There are fifty-one students in the graduating class, twenty-three of whom have worked their way through school.

SIX MONTHS ADDED

County School Superintendents

According to a decision of the Court of Appeals the terms of County Superintendents now in office and expiring Jan. 1, 1926, are extended to July 1, 1926, McHenry Rhoads, State Superintendent of Public Instruction, declared one day last week in a statement to County Superintendents and Boards of Education.

The statement was based upon the Court's ruling in a test case brought by the Kentucky Educational Association, giving to new boards the sole right to elect County Superintendents.

Boards of Education to be elected in November, and taking office the first Monday in Jan. 1926, will not be privileged to elect Superintendents until after April 1, 1926, Mr. Rhoads stated.

"This decision will have the effect of making the term for which County Superintendents may be employed begin and terminate July 1st with the school year," he said.

PROTRACTED ILLNESS ENDS IN DEATH

Chester Utz Died at Hebron last Saturday after long illness

Mr. Chester Utz passed away at Hebron last Saturday at 3 p. m., after an illness of more than a year. Some of his neighbors ago he was "sick" in a factory in Cincinnati, from the effects of which he has suffered since, it being the ultimate cause of his death. About five weeks ago he was removed to Bethesda hospital, where he remained until last Tuesday, when, realizing that his end was near, he asked that he might be brought home, which was done.

Mr. Utz was a very popular man, who leaves a host of friends. He was a comparatively young man, being but a little more than 43 years of age. He is survived by his wife, formerly Miss Mary Riddell, daughter of J. A. Riddell, as well as a number of other relatives. He was a member of the I. O. O. F. Lodge of Hebron.

Funeral services were conducted at Hebron Lutheran church Monday afternoon at 2:30, Rev. H. C. Runyan delivering the discourse. The remains were interred in the Hebron cemetery by Undertaker W. A. Bullock. It was one of the largest funerals ever held at Hebron.

FROM GUAM, M. I.

Editor Boone County Recorder

Burlington, Ky.

Dear Mr. Editor:

I received my Recorder last week and thought I had best send you my new address which is 41 Co. U. S. Marine Bks., Sunay, Guam, M. I.

My sister ordered the paper for me while I was stationed at San Diego, California. Be sure of my new address. I do not want to miss a single copy. Your subscriber Leslie C. Clark.

Timely Agricultural News

By R. J. Matson, County Agent

Programs Changed—

The community programs will be held as announced in last week's news, but it is with regret that we must change the program.

The film "A Crop Worth Saving" has been recalled to Washington, but we will be able to obtain it in the near future as a copy of the film has been bought by the Experiment Station at Lexington.

Instead "The Siren of T-Bone Ranch" will be shown. This is a good film showing many beautiful Western scenes and depicts agricultural production on the range.

Two reels of Aesop's Fables will also be shown "Good Old Circus Days" and "Lumber Jacks."

These films will be shown as announced last week—during the first week of June.

Another Race—

During the Recorder's subscription drive we read a great deal about the horse race and at this another race comes to my attention with similar analogy.

Last fall E. G. Stephenson entered a pen of his White Leghorn pullets in the International Egg Laying Contest at East Lansing, Michigan, which is the largest contest in the U. S. The race has been very keen with 62 pens in the White Leghorn class. Goebel's pen has been around the top since the beginning but now he is climbing even farther to the top.

"Since his is the only White Leghorn, we are all boosting. The enthusiasm which Goebel has and interest shown by the extension men at Lexington, equals this to another horse race.

Goebel's pen of White Leghorns now stand in eighth place. They have been on the honor roll for six weeks straight on weeks production.

Limestone Analysis—

A sample of rock selected from the rock ground on Harmon Jones farm analyzed showing a neutralizing power of 90.1 per cent estimated as calcium carbonate. This is a very good grade of limestone and if all our rock tests so high it is highly worth grinding.

Lime Crusher—

The State machinery which is now on Stanley Utz farm, had a slight break down and will not resume work for a few days until properly repaired.

Jersey Sale—

The date for our Jersey sale has been set for June 22. This will be a big day. In addition to the greatest Jersey auctioneer in America, there will be good cattle, good eats, and a brass band.

Hopeful—Harold Beemon, who is attending Wittenberg College, spent the week-end with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. A. G. Beemon.

Francesville—Miss Jessie Wilson returned last Saturday from Campbellsville, Ky., where she attended college during the past term.

Hebron—Jos. Bullock, of Springfield, Ohio, spent the week-end with his parents here, pitching the game against Burlington Saturday afternoon.

Mt. Zion—Miss Lucille Sleet has returned from Midway where she has been attending school, and will spend the summer with her friends and relatives here.

Petersburg—Miss Olea Hensley and Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Stephens attended the second presentation of the Senior class play at Burlington last Saturday evening.

Florence—An enormous crowd assembled here last Saturday to attend the lot sale in the Carpenter sub-division. Good prices prevailed. The Ford touring car was drawn by Master Wm. Clayton Cooper, son of Mrs. Katie Clayton Cooper, of Hebron.

Bellevue—The Sunday School classes of Miss Anna Cason and of Mrs. E. W. Rice will have an all-day picnic on Monday, June 1st at the Middle Creek Cliffs. All members of those classes are urged to be at Bible school Sunday morning to help plan. Come.

Walton—Miss Georgia Rouse, daughter of Mrs. Julia Rouse of Walton, Ky., is winning many honors at the University of Kentucky, at Lexington. She is vice president of the Woman's Student Government association; a member of Alpha Gamma chapter of Kappa Delta, a national honorary educational sorority; secretary-treasurer of Educational Club; secretary-treasurer of junior class in the College of Education; she has made Morton board, woman's senior honorary sorority of the university; she was a delegate to Blue Ridge, N. C., from the Y. W. C. A.; a member of the History and Cosmopolitan club; vice president of the Patterson Hall, and a member of the girls' tennis team. She graduated from the Walton High school in 1922, at which time she was valedictorian of her class. She has chosen as her major subject "Education," and for her minor subject "Latin."

BOTH PERFORMANCES DREW CAPACITY HOUSES

on Two Successive Evenings.

The Senior class of Hebron High School presented the "Path Across the Hill" at the High School Auditorium last Thursday and Friday at 8:00 p. m. It was well that they had scheduled this play for two performances for had there been only one it would have been the cause of keen disappointment to many who could not have gained admittance to the building, as the house was filled on both occasions.

These fortunate enough to witness the production report that it was exceptionally well played and a credit to the efficient coaching of Mrs. J. L. Fowler, who also very capably played the part of Zuzu, the negro cook.

This event marks the beginning of the end of Hebron's 1925 school activities. A corps of splendid teachers and the capable leadership of Principal C. V. Lucy has given Hebron probably the best school year ever experienced there, and stamps their school as one of the very best in the county.

The annual baccalaureate service will be held Sunday afternoon May 31st, at 2:30 p. m. while the commencement will take place in the auditorium on Tuesday evening, June 2nd.

THIRTY THREE MEMBERS IN NORTH KY. CLUB AT GEORGE TOWN COLLEGE

Georgetown, Ky., May 14.—Thirty-three members are enrolled in the North Kentucky Club of Georgetown College this year with Jesse Auton, of DeMossville, president, Eloise Thompson, Dayton, vice president, and Dick Hodson, Ft. Thomas, secretary. The object of the club is chiefly social. The Boone county membership is as follows: John Clinpin, Walton; Bernice Grant, Burlington; Sue Catherine Bristow, Clinton.

PLAY FOR DRY RIDGE COM- MENCEMENT

Prof. C. M. Hook, Mr. and Mrs. Julius Smith, Miss Hazel Marie Clure, and Arthur Maurer journeyed to Dry Ridge last Thursday evening, where they furnished the music for the commencement exercises. The Dry Ridge school authorities engaged them after having heard them play for the P. T. A. production "Borrowed Money," when it was presented there in March.

Judge Sidney Gaines will convene the regular June term of the Grant County Circuit Court next Monday. The Grant County News of last week says: "While there is a fairly heavy docket of carried over cases, both civil and criminal, it is not likely that any of them will be tried. In the past Judge Gaines has respected the predicament the farmers are usually in at this season of the year with reference to their crops and there is every probability that he will follow the same course of procedure this time."

SUPREME TEST

The federal government's organization to fight rum running will be put to the supreme test when winter vanishes.

Fast destroyers, machine guns, cannon, airplane and radar will be utilized to sweep the modern brigands from the sea.

The coast guard has been assembling its material and training its personnel, according to Washington advices, in preparation for the crucial effort when summer opens.

All good Americans will applaud the attempt on the part of the government to uphold the majesty of the law.

There is no more reason for non-enforcement of the prohibition statute than there is for failure to compel observance of any other law.

The problems that confront the officers of every community would be materially reduced if the government were able to stop the flow of liquor from other countries.

Soon after the war the young crowd was called hard boiled, but considering the way many of them act they are more soft boiled now.

Marrying is a good deal like fishing. Some girls can land a man without any trouble, while others will spend a life time in angling and make a water haul.

The unexpected generally happens, especially when we are expecting good luck.

THE BIGGEST EFFORT ever made in the history of the world for the enforcement of a single law is the only adequate description of the campaign now being put on by the federal government to make prohibition effective on both land and sea. A real navy, armed to the teeth, is strung along the Atlantic seaboard to keep the rum runners from bringing their contraband cargoes into New York or Chesapeake Bay, while similar offensive warfare is planned along the Pacific Coast and the Gulf of Mexico. This great dry battle is being made at the express direction of President Coolidge, who has given his subordinates orders to go the limit in enforcing the Volstead Act. Millions of dollars will be required to carry out enforcement programs of prohibition officials, according to early estimates.

TAX REDUCTION legislation will feature the work of the next Congress. From every side are coming plans for reducing the nation's tax burden, while the Treasury Department and the Bureau of the Budget are co-operating on a program designed to accomplish the same end through the reduction of Governmental expenditures. Estimates of how much will be slashed from the federal tax bill by the 69th Congress range from $350,000,000 to half a billion. The surpluses on big incomes have come in for a great deal of criticism and a movement is on foot among members of the House Ways and Means Committee to eliminate them altogether by making readjustments in the ordinary income rates to bring in the revenue required by the Government.

THE WAR DEPARTMENT is up in the air over its plans for another national defense mobilization as a result of the President's refusal to approve the plan. The President's principal objection is that the test involves the expenditure of a considerable sum of money without adequate return that it is possible for Army officials to determine through ordinary channels from day to day just how well prepared the nation is for war without publicly displaying all its man power. It has also developed that information with regard to the preliminary plans for the test got into the newspapers before War Department officials were ready for publicity, thus leading to additional embarrassment when the President put his foot down on the project.

IT HAS YET TO BE made clear whether or not a diplomatic effort was committed by someone in the State Department when the United States failed to offer formal congratulations to Field Marshall Von Hindenburg upon his assumption of the office of President of Germany. Matters of this kind are usually taken care of in a routine way, but no cable went forward to Hindenburg on his inauguration day, and some displeasure was expressed in Germany as a result, according to reports received here. Having failed to send congratulations at first, the Government then had to wait until Hindenburg held his formal reception in Berlin for members of the diplomatic corps, when the American charged affairs joined with other Governmental representatives in extending best wishes to the second President of Republican Germany.

FRANCE AND THE United States are now moving toward an understanding on war debts and it is expected that a French commission will soon come to Washington to open negotiations for the payment of the four billion dollar French War debt. Jean Parmentier, who conducted the first French debt parley here two years ago, is in this country, but it has not been determined whether or not he is to represent his Government in the new conference.

The Fisherman's Experience. It is a matter of regret to many men who have always been fond of fishing, that it is necessary for them in these days to go long distances to indulge in their favorite sport. They look back to former days with regret, as they point out some pretty stream which years ago used to abound with fish, but which now is the outlet for rains and manufacturing establishments so that fish can not subsist there. Still it has always been claimed and many of them journey long distances rather than abandon their favorite sport. But even then they quite likely find the fish depleted by the many anglers. Still it has always been claimed that this sport promotes a philosophical temperament, that it calms the nerves and promotes love of nature. These joys can still be gained, and added satisfaction will come when the wary fish of these sophisticated times yield to the art of the modern angler.

This issue of the Recorder carries the announcement of Jos. A. Huey, of the Union precinct, for the office of Magistrate from the district composed of Union and Beaver precincts. In last week's issue the Recorder published a petition in its columns signed by approximately one hundred and fifty voters, who thereby pledge their support to the candidacy of this man if he could be induced to offer for this office. Though it is a considerable sacrifice for any one to hold this office, Mr. Huey has very unselfishly responded to this call by announcing this week. No more could be said of the character and integrity of this man than that which is attested by 150 of his neighbors and friends. He is a member of one of Boone county's most aristocratic families and one of the foremost citizens of the county. He was for several years a very capable member of the county board of equalization.

Memorial Day is the day of all days in the patriotic calendar of America, and its sacredness and significance becomes more and more manifest as the years go by. The Memorial exercises all over our broad land, in memory of the soldier dead of all our wars, attest the fact that the great, loyal heart of America is still as steady and true in its appreciation of American ideals and the value and sacrifices of those whose lives have been freely offered on its sacrificial altars from Bunker Hill to Flinders Field, where 50,000 crosses mark the resting place of our brothers and sisters.

In Flinders Field the poppies bloom Above your lowly, hallowed tomb. That your brave deeds may never die. The tears of freedom lifted high Shall shine forever where you lie. No more in Flinders field will grow The crosses, endless row on row For crushed and conquered lies the foe.

We kept the faith, we've seen it thru Our myriad brave lie dead with you In Flinders field. It is 60 years since the vanguard of progress in times of peril were mustered out of service. They were the citizen-soldiers of the U. S. mere boys and most of them, who stood for history, a principle, a divine instrument. The boy of 20 has become a white-haired old man. In a few years the Grand Army will be simply a matter of history and memory, to be maintained by the American Legion as an example in patriotism for generations to come.

They are fast passing on, the Blue and Gray Where drums never sound at the breaking of day, Nor bugles blow forth the loud reveille.

To awaken the sleep of the Blue and the Gray. The Sentinel Death guards that long picket line, And takes from earth soldier his last countersign.

The call is up yonder, and now one by one

They are passing—these heroes of musket and gun. God himself has certainly had the American continent in His keeping for some wise purpose; in His own hand seems to have guided our destiny and kept us from the foreign entanglements of which Washington warned his countrymen. And the same unseen guidance has made of America the polar star of hope for the burden bearers of the world.

AMERICA'S MAIN ISSUE

The great issue in America today is the boy.

Twenty years ago the average parent could be found at home with his children. Today the average parent spends too little time at home, and if the parents are not at home, how can we expect boys to do otherwise than spend their time in connection with the many commercial-amusement enterprises of the modern years, the development of the moving picture, the automobile, the salacious periodical, the cheap pool-room and the unsupervised dance hall have multiplied dangers and temptations for their spare time after school hours and at night.

Nearly 80 per cent of all those apprehended by the police for misdemeanors or major crimes are males under 25. Between 65 and 70 per cent of all the males in our penal institutions are boys under 27. These figures do not include the boys who get into courts but are not convicted. About one boy in every thirty gets into trouble for some reason.

Last year, of the more than 10,000 murders in the U. S., less than 3,000 of the guilty persons were apprehended, and of this number 75 per cent were males under 25 years of age. This seems to be the day of the boy bandit, and the youthful criminal is, in a sense, the result of our so-called "modern civilization." The boys must be encouraged to get back to the religion of their fathers and mothers, and this should be the duty of the church—if the church desires to protect its own future.

William E. Borah (R) Senator from Idaho for years has been accustomed to read aloud from his Bible for two hours every Sunday morning at his own home. It doesn't make any difference whether he has a congregation or not. It is the way he likes to worship.

President Coolidge seems to be cutting expenses considerably, but he has not yet got the government on a dividend paying basis.

LOCAL HAPPENINGS

Next Monday, June 1, is County Court.

Carpenters have begun work on Eddins Bros, new garage.

Painters are giving Judge J. M. Lassing's residence a coat of paint.

Miss Eunie Belle Willis, of Burlington, was one of the graduating nurses at Deaconess Hospital, Cincinnati, Friday evening. Quite a number of Burlington friends witnessed the exercises. Rev. Edgar DeWitt Jones, delivered the class address. Miss Bess Hall was the soloist.

On Monday of last week Jack Bodey, fourteen year old son of Chas Bodey, of the Rabbit Hash neighbor hood, was kicked in the mouth by a horse. Several teeth were knocked out, his chin was seriously injured and a cheek was badly cut. He was hastened to a Cincinnati hospital, where it is reported, he is getting along nicely.

County Road Engineer Ward has had notices printed, notifying owners, controllers and manager of land bordering on the public highways in this county, to have same cleared of all bushes, weeds and shrubs along said roads, and same to be done between the first day of July and August 20th. A fine of $20 nor more than $50 is provided for failure to comply with this order made by the Fiscal Court of Boone County.

On the Covington Good-Will Day while the drawing was in progress Mr. Harry Flye, of the Covington Overland Co., announced that he would give away a used Ford touring car.

The car was drawn by Mrs. R. E. Smith, of Union, but when she went to Covington to claim it, she found it to be in an extremely run down condition. It developed that Mr. Flye had taken the car in on the morning of the Good Will Day, but had never seen it and was ignorant of its condition. However he made good the error to Mrs. Smith, giving her a Ford Sedan at a considerable financial sacrifice to himself.

Dr. M. A. Yelton who has been devoting his time and attention to buying hogs and guineas this spring, and is always running over with joviality and ready to tell a dog story that will cause a man who has just lost his mother-in-law to laugh, is now devoting his time to gardening. Doc is one of the pioneers in gardening and is the only man who has been able to raise pole beans and morningglories on the same pole. The morningglories add beauty to the pole beans and protect them from the burning rays of the August sun and give them a scent equal to the scent of sweetpeas grown by his neighbor, Ed. Rice. At the next meeting of the Hog-Wallow debating society Doc will explain his method of growing morningglories and pole beans on the same pole.

SCHOOL ENTERTAINMENTS

Some fine entertainment programs are being put on in many schools about this time of year. They are interesting events, and the crowds of relatives and friends that gather to show how keenly our people are interested in their schools. These young folks astonish their elders by their self possession and ability to do things.

Which is proof that the country schools are steadily improving. The majority are taught by clever young women who have had modern training, and they are able to pull off stunts that would make an old time school committee man pull his eyes open. These pupils are being taught to think, and they have a good idea of what is going on in the world, and they will astonish the old timers before many days.

IMPROVING SMALL TOWNS

The need for improving country villages, to meet modern needs, is emphasized in a recent report of the U. S. Department of Agriculture. They need greater social, esthetic and economic advantages, says the report.

We already have powerful movements at work to accomplish these ends in Kentucky. Nevertheless, much remains to be done. Conditions vary so greatly in different country towns that it is difficult to generalize about them. But there are certain lacks which exist in the average small town that could be mentioned. They might be summarized as follows:

1—Better marketing systems of farm products, to capture a larger portion of the consumer's dollar. In many cases the farmers have not the initiative or the experience to arrange in their own business, the business men should take hold to help them.

2—Social and athletic events that shall make the place seem more interesting to the young crowd. Parents should encourage young people to organize ball teams and build tennis courts and golf links and run dances under proper supervision, and have plays and parties, so that they shall not be running off elsewhere merely because there is a little going on. In many places of course, all these things are now conducted, and there may be too much social activity rather than too little.

3—Some kind of active organization for improvement that shall have regular meetings, and appoint committees that will do real work. Many towns have such an association or more than one already, but there are more places that do not.

The people of country towns need to get together more frequently. They need discussion of common interests. They need inspiration from leaders who have enthusiasm. They can make great progress, if they only think so.

The ancient proverb which promised an entire day of good luck as a reward for picking up a pin has been outgrown. The people of this nation now use more than 20 billions of pins each year—about 200 per capita. The pin is one of the most ancient articles in common use. Evidence is of record that pins of the same form were used thousands of years ago.

Honesty may be the best policy, but try telling a woman she looks older than she is.

BIRDNESTING

One of the favorite sports of the boys used to be to get out to hunt bird's nests. The aim of course was to make collections of eggs. It was a fascinating sport, and there was a sense of triumph when a nest full of lovely colored eggs was discovered.

But the results helped to deplete the birds, who are such good neighbors of ours and do so much for us. The boys might claim they were carrying on nature study, but just the same they destroyed many young birds. Some of the more conscientious ones only took one egg out of a nest, but often the old birds were so alarmed by the intrusion that they forsook the nest.

The pitiful anxiety of the parent birds when their little home, which meant so much to them, was interfered with, should warn off a boy who has humanized sentiment.

We know that birds must be preserved to protect the crops. The parents of Boone county should teach their youngsters to let these nests alone.

PERSISTENT HAMMERING

There are many business men who have tried out advertising at some time in their past history, but who gave it up because the returns did not immediately come in as they thought they should.

They are a good deal like a certain type of editors whom one meets occasionally. These fellows take the authority of their words very seriously. If they come out in their papers for some proposition of public improvement, they expect the public to accept the idea at once.

But if a newspaper mentions project once, and then drops, people do not usually get waked up enough on that matter so they will do anything about it. The result is that a good many editors who lack the resolution for a sustained campaign in behalf of any public cause, will drop such a subject when they find the public did not at once follow their lead.

If they had had a better conception of human nature, they would have kept hammering at the subject a long time. People have to hear a thing over and over again before it arouses their attention. But if you tell them a certain thing often enough, they will either believe it or at least be interested enough so they will take the matter and consider it.

It is much the same in advertising. Merely telling them once or a few times that a certain place is a good one to trade at, is a good thing so far it goes, but it fails to reckon on this element of inertia in the human temperament. It is necessary to keep hammering on the idea, until the constant repetition of the same lodges it finally in their minds. That does not necessarily mean spending a large amount of money. The same effect is often produced by inserting a small advertisement over and over again, making different announcements of course so that the advertising shall seem new.

Give Them Time To Think

The candidates who are posted on the workings of the minds of the women voters will not put off electing the women until the last part of the campaign. The 19th amendment freed them from the bondage of being pot wretches and by the law made them the equal of man in politics, religion and soap box oratory. But it did not change their way of thinking nor the time it takes them to make up their minds. The candidate who has the promise of the old rooster of the house thinking it carries with it the vote of the old hen, will be greatly mistaken. When the old rooster comes to town and gets on the outside of a few bottles of nearbeer, he may do the crowing, but when it comes to telling the old hen how to vote she lets him know she is doing her own thinking politically, when her thoughts are not on having her hair bobbed or what colored silk stockings will suit to wear with her short dress. When it comes to voting she is going to vote for the man who is not afraid to shake hands and smile at her powdered nose. When a woman finally makes up her mind who she is for politically it is time wasted to try to change her opinion.—Falmouth Outlook.

SINGLE BLESSEDNESS

The "Old Maid and Bachelor Bill" has been introduced in the Florida House, and has met the approval of at least one man.

A. Y. Milam, Speaker of the House, is in receipt of a message from Harry L. Johnson of Ft. Myers, who places a high valuation on his single blessedness. The telegram, which was read and ordered printed in the House Journal, follows:

"Noting the bill taxing old bachelors $5 per year I am today sending certified check for my tax. I will be away this summer and wish to do my part. Five dollars is too little. No real free man would object to paying $50 or even $500. Whoever heard of a single woman over 25?"

The telegram refers to a bill putting a tax of $5 on every unmarried woman over 25 years of age and every unmarried man over 30 years of age.

We had great hopes for Florida's future and intended passing the remainder of our day and making our investments in that State, but imposing a tax on a man who prefers a sedate life to a stormy one is too strenuous for us.

MONEY PROSPECTS FOR BOONE

The June payment of over 600 thousand dollars on the 1923 crop to the tobacco growers of Boone just following the draw on the 1924 crop and the balance upon the 1922 added to the money being received for eggs, cream and calves, and that to be received from the lamb and wool means a continuous stream of gold into this section of the state for a period of 6 months. In olden days before people had acquired the present day habits of living that amount of money would have meant fabulous wealth to our people and any one of our citizens could have been found with a roll of greenbacks upon his person that would have made a good size cul for a cow. Today they are nearly all financially mismanaged and why? Something is wrong, this is a dangerous game to be going. It does not mean happiness now or ease and comfort in old age.

The closing of the term was made notable by the play rendered by our pupils at the K. of P. Hall at Carlton, "Deacon Dubbs" has won for the students a recognition of their dramatic ability by the citizens here. It would be unfair to lay stress on the performing of any one of them and we, their parents and friends are glad of their accomplishments and grateful for the efforts of their leader under whose guardianship we placed them. We are equally proud of their success in the various studies in which they acquitted themselves wonderfully.

A. J. IVEY, DEAD

A. J. Ivey aged 52 years passed away at his home in Erlanger Saturday after an illness of several weeks. Funeral services were held from the residence at 2 p. m., Tuesday afternoon by the Rev. A. G. Stone at which time the Scottish Masons held their Ring ceremony. Mr. Ivey is survived by his widow and three brothers besides a host of friends. Interment took place in Highland cemetery. Undertaker Phil Taliaferro had charge of the funeral arrangements.

Thirty-one years ago, May 21, 1894, the ground was covered with snow and most all fruit and vegetation was killed. And yet there are some who claim they never witnessed such a spell as that which visited this section.

He has a wife and six children and is a son of Mr. and Mrs. Ezra Tanner, of the Florence neighborhood.

CLUB MEMBERS EARN MORE THAN $183,000

Lexington, Ky., May 15.—Members of boys' and girls' clubs in Kentucky produced more than $183,000 worth of products last year, according to J. W. Whitehouse, state club leader. This is a conservative estimate, he said, since low prices were allowed in figuring the values.

Seven different lines of production are included in the work of the junior agricultural clubs last year. Beef calves led the list, their total value reaching $9,425. Poultry and poultry products came second, $28,695. Then came corn, $23,511. The values of other products follow: Dairy cattle $19,800; hogs $17,750; vegetables $13,950; sheep $11,950; potatoes $8,580; clothing $8,095; tobacco $5,918 and canned products $5,639.

As there were 20,000 club members in the state last year, their average earnings was more than $90. In many cases, however, a boy or girl earned several hundred dollars. James Robinson, champion beef calf club boy, received more than $1,000 for his calf and in prizes won on it.

Circuit Judge Henry R. Prewitt of Mt. Sterling in his instruction to the grand jury at the opening of circuit court at that place called especial attention to the statute against gossiping and asked that the jury investigate all gossip tales calculated to break up homes and cause trouble, all guilty persons to be indicted and brought before the court.

THE COST OF DOING BUSINESS

An advertising trade publication sent a trained writer to a city of 24,000 inhabitants to analyze the leading department store's management and in the first article on the subject he sets out that the cost of doing business was 24 per cent, which was "6 to 10 per cent less" than similar costs in large city department stores.

Here is a merchandizing fact that few small town people take into consideration when they are lured away from their home merchants by what they believe to be better prices of the large city stores.

Every merchant has to make a profit; if he didn't he would soon close his doors. The profit is added to the cost of the goods and the cost of doing business.

The large city store may buy merchandise to some advantage because of the demand for larger quantities, but his other costs are far in excess of the small merchants.

He has to pay rent, clerk hire, insurance, heat, light and the many other items that figure in the operation of a modern store, and it is all more than similar costs in smaller communities.

In addition to all the advantages that accrue from patronizing home merchants, this matter of cost is one that figures most in the question of trading at home.

Though the prices and the goods may look well, they won't stand up under cold logic, because the big city store can't under-sell the small town store, quality and style being equal.

LESSONS LEARNED TOO LATE.

Two young brothers who were electrocuted in New York for the murder of two bank messengers protested their love for their mother and gave advice to young men before meeting their maker.

One of them sent a "message to young people" reading like this: "Keep away from bad company. Love your parents, honor your father and mother. Abide by their wishes and remember always that it would be better to be a $10 a week clerk in a small store than a notorious bandit."

This is sound advice, but too many young men, as in this case, do not realize it until too late. Before they had a life of crime.

Most law violators are penitent after they are caught. They have some very fine ideas about the disgrace they will bring upon their respectable relatives if their misdeeds are known.

But it is a fault common of youth to refuse to listen to the wisdom born of experience. And this fault is leading young men and women into wrong paths.

THE FRENCH DEBT

Reports are in circulation that efforts may soon be made to collect the great debt owed by France to this country. The American people want to be generous about this debt, for they understand that the French people were hit a cruel blow in the war, and they have hardly recovered normal equilibrium.

But if they could brace up and tax themselves enough to pay it, it would have a wonderful effect on their credit. Great Britain's financial position has improved since they began regular payments on the American debt. If the French fall down on this payment, it is doubtful if they can ever borrow much money again in this country. While if they pay, they will obtain funds here for future emergencies.

Price of liquor along the seacoast is rising as the coast guard blockade tightens, but water can still be had by the thirsty, and it is said to be a good wholesome drink.

The farmers may not be ready for their work on the crops, but the insect pests surely are.

The number of illiterates in this country must be very large, if one estimates them from the number who can't read the danger signs on the highways.

Formerly it was claimed that parents were spoiling their children, but now it is said the children fear that their parents are being spoiled.

The girls desire slender lines; and work in the garden would no doubt promote the same.

SOY BEANS PRAISED AS SOIL BUILDERS

Lexington, Ky. — Ralph Kenney, crop specialist for the Extension Division of the College of Agriculture, estimates that were corn growers of Kentucky to plant soybeans in the same row with their corn in all fields this year, not less than $15,000,000 worth of fertility would be taken from the air and left in the soil.

According to average yields obtained at the Experiment Station at Lexington, the reduction in corn yield from growing soybeans in the same row amounts to approximately 10 per cent, whereas the fertilizer and feed value of the bean plants and seed grown ranges from 20 per cent of the value of the corn crop.

The man who "hogs off" a mixture of soybeans and corn derives enough benefit from the beans eaten by his hogs to charge off the reduction of corn yield, and still find the mixture profitable as a hog feed, according to Mr. Kenney. Moreover, 80 per cent of the fertility in the soybeans eaten is returned to the land in manure. In addition, the stalks, stems, roots and leaves go back into the soil.

Mr. Kenney advises planting 6 to 10 pounds of soybean seed per acre, when they are planted in corn rows. Some planters are or can be equipped with soybean seed carrying attachments. With others it is necessary to mix the beans and corn in the planter box, using equal parts by weight or measure. All such seed should be inoculated, and care used to set the corn planter to not cover the seed more than an inch.

The first one or two cultivations of such a crop are best done with a spike tooth harrow. This results in killing all weeds in the row between the plants, and the level cultivation does not cover up either corn or beans.

OUTDOOR GOOD MANNERS

From the time they are able to comprehend anything, children are taught that they must have "good manners." They are threatened and warned and cajoled into behaving when "company" comes and to act like they weren't little savages when they go to call on friends.

"Good manners" have always been regarded as one of the best known "indoor sports." But this is a changing world and now we find that "manners" are classified. There is the "indoor" variety. And some of the groupings are lacking in the "outdoor" quality.

The careless automobile tourist, who has left his mark from Harlem to San Francisco, has made necessary some new peaches on the subject of "good manners."

The thoughtless camper who forgets to put out his fire and leaves behind paper plates, tin cans and the remains of his lunch is the horrible example of "bad manners" and a type that must be swatted in order to keep tourists as a class in good standing.

The American Automobile Association estimates that six million people will heed the call of the road this summer. If one-sixth of them are careless, an immense amount of damage will be done. Beauty spots will be defiled, property destroyed and the way made rough for tourists who have good "outdoor manners."

Nothing is more disheartening than to find some picturesque spot among the trees left by automobile travelers and picnickers littered with refuse.

The rights of property owners in the country must be respected as religiously as they are in town and city. This children can be taught. Some of their elders may be too hard crusted to admit of teaching.

But the coming generation, at least, ought to grow up with the idea that the abuse of outdoor hospitality of parks and scheduled spots in the country is as much a breach of good manners as to mistreat a home where one has been entertained.

ADVOCATES CORSETS FOR WOMEN

A circular called "Clothes and Their Relation to Health," published by the Extension Division of the Kentucky College of Agriculture, advocates corsets for women. Two reasons are advanced: "To act as a support to the body, and to control and preserve the natural lines of the figure." Unless a woman has strong muscles and carries her body well at all times, the absence of a corset results in the well known corsetted figure, the circular says. Women are urged to exercise care in selecting corsets. They should always be fitted. The old-fashioned corset, designed primarily to give a small waist line effect, is condemned.

Senator William R. McKinley, of Illinois, who has just returned from a tour in Europe, told President Coolidge that Europe has given up all hope of persuading the U. S. to enter the League of Nations, but is so anxious to have American support that it will admit Uncle Sam to membership in the World Court on practically any terms. Intimations from reliable sources indicate that the President, as well as Senator Borah and a large number of leading statesmen, now favor a reorganization of the Hague Tribunal.

BOONE COUNTY RECORD

XLIX Established 1875

BURLINGTON, KENTUCKY, THURSDAY, JUNE 4th, 1925

$2.00 Per Year NO. 31

BOONE COUNTY MAN MADE RECORD CATCH

Paul G. Randall, Louisville Dentist, Catches Fish weighing 100 lbs.

Hard work was real fun for four lovers of the fishing sport, who after three and a half hours of laborious effort, successfully landed a blue catfish weighing between 90 and 100 pounds at 1:30 o'clock this morning at West Point.

The proud fishermen were displaying their big catch today in a bathtub at the home of Dr. Paul G. Randall, dentist, 3218 Virginia Ave.

Paul G. Randall, Jr., 16 years old on whose net line the "little whale" was caught, shared honors with his father, George Marx, Twenty-first and St. Louis Avenue, and George Wise, Cane Run Road, in landing the fish.

The anglers left Louisville for West Point in an automobile at three o'clock Friday afternoon to fish in Salt River. They put out a lot of net lines before dark and then hunted frogs along the river bank.

Returning to the lines at 10 o'clock they found a large fish was on a line baited by Paul G. Randall, Jr. Certain they had hooked a "monster" they made preparations for landing it.

Take 'em in Boat

A large gaff was constructed and a rifle was sent into a flatboat to shoot the fish if it could not be taken in alive.

Four or five times they followed along the line and pulled the fish to the surface, but each time it made a mighty lunge and dived down. The river at the point was estimated to be sixty-five feet deep.

The line was handled carefully to prevent the fish snapping it and gaining its liberty.

"He was big enough to have towed to the Gulf of Mexico," declared Dr. Randall in telling of the success.

After hours of work the men succeeded in wearing out the fish and pulling him up upon the river bank. The gaff hook and a log chain were put through his gills to prevent his flopping back into the water and escaping.

The fish, more than four feet in length, was placed in the automobile and brought to the city. It was still alive when the Randall residence was reached and was put in the bathtub.

Dr. Randall was told by fishermen that the fish was a blue channel catfish and the largest of its type ever caught in this section of the country. He had intended killing it for a fishbait, but later decided to have it mounted.—Louisville Times.

GOOD WORK BEING DONE

P. E. Bruce, who has charge of the repair work on the Petersburg and Burlington pike on the west end of that thoroughfare, is doing an excellent job considering the material and funds with which he is furnished. An experienced road man recently made the statement that Dr. Bruce was one of the best road men that he knew, his experience being considered.

Bellevue will play at Burlington next Saturday afternoon.

COUNTY ATTORNEY SEEKS RE-ELECTION

B. H. Riley, who has served County well, Asks to be Returned

On another page of this issue can be found the announcement of B. H. Riley for County Attorney. Mr. Riley is in the present incumbency of the office to which he now seeks reelection, having been nominated and elected in 1921 without opposition. He has been a practitioner in the courts of this county since 1915, in which year he was admitted to the bar. He immediately entered the active practice as the junior member of the firm of Riley & Riley, Edgar C. Riley being the senior member.

In July 1918, he was called to serve Uncle Sam in the great world war, and served as a member of a machine gun company in the 17th Infantry, being stationed at Camp Meade.

He was discharged in March 1919, returning to Burlington on the 4th of that month.

County Judge P. E. Cason was lost to the county by death on the 19th of the same month. N. E. Riddell then being appointed by the Governor to fill the unexpired term in that office. Then on the 17th of March County Judge Riddell appointed Mr. Riley to fill the county attorney's office for the unexpired term.

Mr. Riley has unquestionably made the county a splendid official and we have no reason to believe that he would not continue to do so if he succeeds in being reelected.

WARRANT IS SERVED AFTER THREE YEARS

Sheriff Serves Warrant on William Tunning Saturday

Hume served a warrant upon William Tunning at the Harvest Home picnic last Saturday night. The warrant was of three years standing, Tunning having been indicted in 1922. He was brought to jail, where he is still confined in default of a five hundred dollar bond. He had voluntarily absented himself from the county during the three year period.

The indictment against Tunning was for unlawfully selling liquor, a practice which is reported to have been in vogue at recent picnics in the county, and the committee in charge at Harvest Home, with the aid of the officers intend to permit no such practice at their gatherings. There is indeed a vast difference in the nature of these summer picnics when properly handled and when they are not.

BIRTHDAY SURPRISE DINNER AT W. L. SATCHWILL'S HOME

About 30 friends and relatives gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. L. Satchwill on the Florence and Burlington pike last Sunday to surprise Mrs. Satchwill, it being her 35th birthday. All came with well filled baskets which were spread on tables in the shade at the noon hour and enjoyed by all. Those present were Mr. and Mrs. Everett Clore and son; Mr. and Mrs. Walter Adams; Mrs. Hattie Adams; Mr. and Mrs. Ira Ryle and daughter, all of Indiana; Mr. and Mrs. Lyman Adams and children, Mr. and Mrs. Irvin Adams and children, of Cincinnati; Mr. and Mrs. Courtney Pope and children; Mr. and Mrs. Louis Beemon and son; Mr. and Mrs. Roy Beemon and Elbert Clore.

THE TEMPTATION TO SPEED.

The warm spring days and the spring-like atmosphere is bringing out every conceivable kind of automobile.

The temptation to speed is great. Some drivers can't resist it, judging from the way cars have been traveling about during the past few days.

Boys are fitting up old machines of doubtful qualities and driving them at high rates of speed.

The only time to prevent serious perhaps fatal accidents from fast driving, is before they happen.

Clearly a word to the wise should be sufficient. If the speeders persist the police should not hesitate to make arrests because there is no reason why the lives of pedestrians and sensible drivers of automobiles should be jeopardized.

County Road Crew Shifts Scenery

The County road workers having finished work on the Union and Florence Pike, have moved all of the machinery to Burlington and Bellevue Pike, where much needed repair work is now in progress.

Mrs. C. C. Roberts and son, Clifford, after a week's visit with relatives in Burlington, returned to their home in Covington Sunday evening.

WALTON HIGH SCHOOL COMMENCEMENT HELD

R. Ames Montgomery, President of Centre College Delivers Address

The Walton High School commencement exercises were conducted last Friday at 8:00 p. m., in the Walton Christian church. This was the twenty-third annual affair of the kind to be observed by the Walton school, and from all reports, one of the best.

The address was delivered by Dr. R. Ames Montgomery, President of Centre College, and was said to be one of the best addresses ever to be delivered in Boone county.

The class was the largest in point of numbers ever graduated from the institution, there being fifteen students to receive their diplomas, which were presented by Prof. McCarty, principal.

Those who received diplomas were: Layla Baker, valedictorian, Maggie Hammond, salutatorian, Vernon Kemper, J. B. Johnson, Marvin Hudson, Jr., Mary Jane Richey, Thelma Moore, Ava L. Hudson, Sue Hance, Burdette Fagan, Gladys Doane, Olivia Chandler, and Helen Aylor.

Patrons of the school are loud in their praise of the class of work done by the class of 1925, under the capable direction of principal McCarty.

FLORENCE BAPTISTS ARE HOLDING BIG REVIVAL

The tent meeting being held by the Florence Baptist church opened auspiciously last Monday evening with about 400 in attendance. Rev. O. J. Steger, pastor of the Latonia Baptist church, is conducting the services, with Allan Schaefer as song leader.

Each night is advertised as a special night for some neighboring church, Monday night being Elsmere night, with about 150 present, and Tuesday night being Erlanger night.

Wednesday night, June 3rd, was Erlanger night, and Wednesday night, June 4th, was Bellevue night, and in the latter case attendance shown at each succeeding service. Thursday night will be Southside (of Covington), and Friday Madison Ave. Other special nights will be announced during the course of the meeting. The pastor, Rev. Barker, extends a cordial invitation for everyone to attend these services.

M. W. A. MEETING WILL BE HELD HERE NEXT WEEK

A large county meeting, open to the general public including women and children, is being arranged by Patriarch Camp at Burlington for Wednesday night, June 10th at 8 o'clock.

State Deputy J. W. DeHart will be present and deliver an address that will be worth while to hear as Mr. DeHart is a talented speaker and will be able to inform the general public of the great work which the Modern Woodmen lodges are doing in the United States.

All neighboring lodges and their friends are most cordially invited. The local camp hopes to be able to hold this meeting in the Court House where every one can be seated comfortably.

Come out and enjoy the evening regardless of whether you belong to a Woodmen lodge or not.

TWO DOLLAR WHEAT

Reports compiled from all parts of this nation and from other nations by the Department of Agriculture, indicate that this year America will have no wheat to export, and two-dollar wheat seems to be a reasonable prospect. One government official, after examining the report, declared that "instead of appointing an export corporation, it looked as though we might need an import corporation."

On the basis of present showings, winter wheat in the United States is only about 77 per cent of normal. This works out at a yield per acre of about 13.6 bushels. If that ratio is maintained the coming wheat crop in the United States will be about 444,835,000 bushels which is 24.6 per cent less than in 1924. Conditions in Europe, except Russia and in Canada are better than in the U. S. Wheat estimates for the United States and India foreshadow a combined reduction of 190,000,000 bushels.

MISS MARY McMULLEN TAKEN TO HOSPITAL

Miss Mary, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Leslie McMullen, of the East Bend pike, and who is attending Georgetown College, was suddenly stricken with appendicitis last Friday. She was taken to a Cincinnati hospital where she was operated upon. Her many friends wish for her a speedy recovery. Miss Mary was one of the members of the 1924 graduating class of the Boone County High School.

PETERSBURG MAN FALLS FROM LADDER

Claude McWethy Falls Twelve Feet, Striking Head on Concrete

Claude McWethy, of Petersburg, was very seriously injured last Saturday when he fell from a ladder at his home in that town. Mr. McWethy was painting his residence and was standing near the top of the ladder when one of the rungs suddenly broke causing him to fall a distance of 12 feet to the sidewalk below. In falling his foot was caught in the ladder causing his head to strike the concrete walk with such force that it was heard by Mrs. O. S. Watta, a near neighbor, who found him completely unconscious.

Dr. Nunnally was called, who succeeded in restoring him to a conscious state, although he is still in a rather serious condition. A broken ear drum was one result of the fall, though further results are not known at this writing.

Mr. McWethy is employed as a clerk by the Big Four Railroad at Lawrenceburg, and was taking his annual vacation at the time of the accident. He is also a member of the Petersburg Graded school board.

UNION P. T. A. PRESENT PLAY LAST SATURDAY

The Union Parent-Teachers Association staged the second presentation of their stellar production, "Deacon Dubbs" last Saturday evening in the school auditorium. All available seating space was occupied before the first curtain was raised at 8:00 p. m.

As on the occasion of the first performance all who saw it were delighted. The play was produced under the very capable direction of Miss Norma Rachal, who is well acquainted with every angle of dramatic art, having been a valued member of the State University, known as the "Strollers."

It is announced that the cast will journey to Verona with the play in the near future.

BIRTHDAY SURPRISE DINNER AT THE J. M. EDDIN HOME

A fitting close for the beautiful month of May was the birthday dinner given by M. Eddins and his grandson, Jeff Jr., by his wife and children at their home on Jefferson street last Sunday, when all the children, their sons and daughters and their wives and husbands were present.

At the noon hour a long table adorned the dining room, laden with good things to eat beyond the power of pen to describe, and in the center a beautiful birthday cake. Mrs. Eddins had spared nothing to make every one comfortable. She was assisted by her daughter and daughters-in-law. Most of the grooming, however, was done after dinner.

Those present were Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Eddins and daughter, Miss Myrtle, O. S. Eddins and wife, H. E. White and wife, Mrs. Lallie Eddins and children, and Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Walton and children, of Erlanger. The day was an ideal one and greatly enjoyed by all, and now Jeff feels ten years younger instead of one year older.

EXAMPLES FOR YOUNG MEN.

A good name cannot be bought with gold. Early in life Theodore Roosevelt resolved to keep his record clean, his name white at all hazards, and he sacrificed an opportunity to become President nor the third time rather than yield to political pressure that might smirch his name. Henry Ford's actual investments may be worth one hundred millions of dollars, but the four letters of his name are each worth hundreds of millions of dollars—because they stand for something white and clean and worth while. John D. Rockefeller, Jr., is another type of man who has had all sorts of opportunities for doubling his fortune by engaging in crooked games, but crookedness never had any attraction for him.

Men of this type and character should be stressed by our teachers and parents as examples for young men to emulate but too often they are taught the tricks of Wall Street—getting something for nothing. The world needs more men of the Roosevelt, Ford and Rockefeller type. Their names will endure in the memory of man much longer than sily epitaph on graven granite. And after all, that is all any man can leave behind him.

COMMITTEE IS APPOINTED

The Fiscal Court at the regular meeting Tuesday appointed a committee to visit the State Highway Commissioner with a proposition urging the State to take over the Dry Creek Pike from Bullittsville to the Kenton County line.

TOLIN TO MAKE RACE FOR COUNTY ATTORNEY

Member of 1922 Legislature is out for Important Post

Attorney G. W. Tolin, of Burlington, announces his candidacy for the important office of County Attorney in this issue of the Recorder.

Mr. Tolin is one of Boone county's prominent Democrats having served as chairman of the Democratic county executive committee for eight years. He is a graduate of Centre College, Danville, Ky., having received his degree from that institution in 1912, during the summer of which year he successfully passed the bar examination before the Somerset, Ky., bar. He was later in the same year admitted to the Boone county bar. He served in the Lower House of the General Assembly at Frankfort at the 1922 session.

Mr. Tolin is the only son of Ex-Senator S. W. Tolin who successfully filed the same office to which his son aspires, from 1883 to 1895, a period of three terms.

If nominated and elected Mr. Tolin will extend every effort possible to make the county a good official.

MAD DOG CASES ARE NUMEROUS IN STATE

Three Human Deaths in Ky. Since First of Year as Result

The State Board of Health has written all County Judges in Kentucky as follows:

My Dear Judge:

Recent developments with the information I have received from the other Southern states, indicate a widespread pandemic of rabies in dogs. We have had three human deaths since the first of the year from hydrophobia in Kentucky. Our laboratories here and at Lexington are making every effort to identify dog heads and the examinations show that almost all those sent in now are mad dogs.

The public should be advised that animals which are of sufficient value to be kept alive should be immunized against rabies.

We have arranged with E. R. Squibb and Sons to keep an abundant supply of this treatment on hand at our offices here in Louisville. The treatment is simple and requires but one hypodermic administration. It costs 75 cents at the special price we have secured. The anti-rabic treatment for people bitten by mad dogs is also furnished to us by the Squibb Laboratories at the special price of $22.50 for the twenty-one treatments and these may be administered by the family physician quite as well and safely as at the State Laboratory here.

Prompt beginning of the treatment, which takes twenty-one days for its completion, is the most important factor in its success.

A. T. McCORMACK
State Health Officer.

J. D. HOUSTON WILL RETURN TO BOONE

To Preach in Christian Churches in Bellevue and Petersburg—Will Occupy M. E. Pulpit in Burlington

J. D. Houston, pastor of the church at Bellevue, several years ago, recently pastor of the Park church of Christ Brooklyn, N. Y., will preach at Petersburg Sunday a. m., June 7. He will also preach at Bellevue in the afternoon of the same day and at Burlington at the evening service.

Bro. Houston was instrumental in building the Bellevue church at that time and baptized many there during his ministry there. He will be remembered by many in the county as he has preached in most of the churches. He has since then had several important charges, one at Los Angeles, Cal., at Athens, Pa., and the one at New York City. He is a man of wide experience and deep scholarship, and remembers with pleasure his work in Boone county. He hopes to meet many former acquaintances during this visit. Arrangements may be made for a series of meetings later at some of the churches in the county.

BOONE COUNTY SCHOOL BOARD MET SATURDAY

The Boone County School Board held a meeting at the court house, last Saturday. On account of Saturday being a holiday very little business was transacted. There was but one bid received on the building of the annex to the Boone County High School—that of Geo. P. Nicholson, of Walton. Mrs. Lallie Eddins was recommended to the Board as a teacher of the Primary grade for the Boone High School next fall and winter term.

MILITARY ROAD THAT WOULD AID NATION

Carrollton Meeting next Saturday, Opportunity for Northern Ky.

We cannot refrain from again calling attention to the proposed Federal Road or Military Road, connecting Fort Thomas and Camp Knox, and pointing to a few of the arguments in favor of such a road. The importance of any road is based upon the number of people it will serve. In building county and state roads we give more attention to local needs. The Government, however, must consider each road as a part of a National system, planned to serve the greatest number of folks possible. It is never considered purely from a local point of view. When considered from a point of view, military or a regular National route of travel, I do not believe that there are 110 miles of road in the United States that will serve as many people.

From the standpoint it has half a million people on one end and more than three hundred thousand on the other, and some fifty thousand scattered along its right of way, and it will open up one of the most fertile portions of the Ohio Valley that has neither a railroad nor a Military Unit it connects Fort Thomas and Camp Knox, two very important army posts, and will make Camp Knox, as a Citizens' Military Training Camp, accessible to thousands of people, who have never considered the advantages. At present it is necessary for troops to be moved by barges on the Ohio river when they are moved from one place to the other. As a National Highway this road will act as a very important pivot for the tourists of America, connecting several important highways, acting as a road that will serve thousands of overland tourists who are headed South in the fall, North in the spring time, and East in the summer.

As a route for natural scenic beauty it has no rival east of the Yellowstone National Park. It is the shortest distance between Louisville and Cincinnati, two of the greatest cities in the middle West. We are informed that this route is Number Eight, of the proposed Federal Roads in Kentucky and there is no doubt that in the near future the Government will build this road; just how soon depends largely upon the fate of the Senators Ernst and Sackett, and Congressman Rouse and Thatcher in the promotion of such an improvement of the National Highway it will be an assured fact and at a much earlier date than if it is allowed to await its turn. As a Military Unit it is a necessity; as a National Highway it is the missing link in the North, East, West and South trails, and as a local asset it is much to be desired, and means everything to this section of Kentucky.

The Independent has contended from time to time, all that is needed to get action on the matter is for some one to take the lead, to interest those that should be interested and can get the attention of those in charge of National Highway plans. Some time last fall the business men here organized a Commercial Club. At that time we ventured opinion that if the Club did it would be due to the lack of exercise of something to do, and it was proposed that they devote their time and energy in the direction above mentioned.

During 1924 the Federal Government spent $17,000,000 on roads, while the budget for 1925 carries $80,000,000 for road building purposes. This money will be spent on the most important projects, and it's up to us to convince those in charge that our project is all important. If we continue as we have in the past, it will remain a small part of a large map with no cause for immediate attention.

SOMETHING TO CONSIDER

Before mailing your orders out of town just stop a moment to seriously consider a few points.

First—The citizens of this town make every effort to give employment to our people but principally because it brings money into the town from outside sources.

Second — This employment and circulation of money enhances the value of real estate, builds our churches and schools, improves our streets and public utilities, supports our public institutions, and makes the town a desirable place of residence.

Third—Every dollar brought into the town in this manner adds to the wealth, comfort and happiness of every man in the town.

Before mailing that order out of town remember that every dollar thus sent is gone forever.

Remember, your neighbor will take better care of you than a stranger because it is his interest to do so. His future depends on holding your confidence and friendship—and his right here to make good any mistakes.

By spending your money at home you help our merchants, our industries, our institutions, and you help yourself by making greater and better opportunities for your children.

tries, our institutions, and you help yourself by making greater and better opportunities for your children.

The dollar you spend at home circulates at home—spending it away from home is bidding it good-bye and practically nullifies all efforts to build up the town. While one group of loyal citizens are trying to get business and money for the town you are doing the opposite.

Don't mail that order until you have considered these things—and if you are a loyal bovine citizen you won't mail it at all.

Do Not Expect Too Much of Co-operative Marketing

There is an evident tendency on the part of some people to expect the impossible of cooperative marketing, according to O. B. Jesses, Chief Section of Markets, Kentucky Experiment Station. He says that cooperation can assist farmers in many ways in bringing about better methods of marketing. Organization, however, possesses no magic power over prices. It does not make arbitrary price-fixing possible. Cooperative marketing must sell in accordance with market conditions. Its real purpose is to get the full market value of the product, not to fix prices on some artificial basis.

"It is well to remember," says Mr. Jesses, "that a marketing or organization is the sales outlet for the individual members whose farms are the producing units. Acreage is determined by the members not by the association. In comparing a marketing association with a manufacturer's concern, this distinction must be kept in mind. The factory produces the goods it sells. The marketing association sells goods produced by the individual farms. The factory can adjust its production. The marketing organization does not adjust the production of its members directly. In case of nonperishables, a temporary over supply may be carried over by the association. However, this is not a solution for continuous overproduction. The members of a marketing association, therefore, should not expect their association to obtain profitable prices for them if more is produced than can be sold at such prices. It is still the growers' problem to adjust their production to market demand. The organization can aid them by supplying information, but the actual adjustment must be made by the grower."

FORD INVADERS WALL STREET.

Its not long since Wall Street attempted to squeeze Henry Ford in a little financial transaction, but he escaped the strangle hold. Since then he bought a bankrupt railroad for less than a dollar a share, and, notwithstanding the poe-hoos and predictions of Wall Street, has increased the value of the stock more than 100 times. Wall Street doesn't like this kind of efficiency.

More recently Mr. Ford entered the shipping business and is now successfully operating freight lines to Europe, Australia and South America. That's another bad example of efficiency.

Now Mr. Ford offers to buy almost half the fleet of 900 United States Shipping Board vessels that are rolling at anchor and only fit for junk. But again Wall Street protests, notwithstanding the fact that he promises to junk all but 25 or 30 of them. He is interfering with some of the favored ones that Congress protects.

Within the week it is announced that Mr. Ford has involved Wall Street by acquiring a banking house—and the old-timers of the gold-brick district express the same alarm as do the rum runners along the coast. There is nothing surprising in the fact that Mr. Ford should enter the banking business, except the fact that he has expressed some sound and sane ideas regarding the business that Wall Street, does not fancy, and he is looked upon as an interloper—a poacher on private reserves.

Back of it all, however, is the possibility that he may be a contender for the Muscle Shoals power franchise. If he should acquire this property he might revolutionize some of the ancient governmental graft games by giving the people a square deal. Wall Street will oppose such a horrible example, but under the law, it is up to President Coolidge to make the final decision. As a matter of fact most of the people of the United States would be pleased if the government would turn the management of the plant over to him without the payment of a dollar. It would be the best investment the government has made in a generation.

She spent most of her life in the Lord's service. She is survived by two daughters Mrs. Cora Blankenbaker and Mrs. Charles Tanner. Now the good old summer time is here to stay. Let's get ready to enjoy it. We have had most every sort of a booster week, so why not have a "Cut The Weeds Week?" Get out around your premises and take a survey of the weeds and bushes that grace—or disgrace—your yard and property, which furnish a hiding place for all kinds of varmints and are an eye-sore to strangers passing through. Have the weeds cut and trash hauled off and notice how much neater appearance it will present. Maybe we can't easily make Burlington larger, but we certainly can make it cleaner, and more attractive for us who intend to live here and make our home. Put the "Cut the Weeds Week" on your schedule and get busy with the scythe.

THE LETTER "E."
Someone has advanced the opinion that the letter "E" is the most unfortunate character in the English alphabet, because it is always out of cash, forever in debt, never out of danger, and in hell all the time. But we call his attention to the fact that "E" is never in war and always in peace. It is the beginning of existence, the commencement of ease and the end of trouble. Without it there would be no meat, no life and no heaven. It is the center of honesty, makes love perfect, and without it there be no editors or publishers, no Charlie, Jerry, Willie or Keith, and no devils or nevas.

SUCCESSFUL FARMERS
KEEP BOOK ACCOUNTS

What are some of the essential characteristics of a successful farmer? There are farmers in nearly every community who make a fair profit year after year, while other farmers in the same neighborhood have a hard time making ends meet. Why is this?

H. A. Ward, who is promoting the keeping of farm accounts for the Extension Division of the Kentucky College of Agriculture, says that "the successful farmer is the man who studies and knows his business. He handles his business in a business way. He keeps his farm accounts just as he does any other business man. He knows what farming operations make him money, and why. When I ask a successful farmer to explain some detail he often replies, 'Wait until I get my accounts; then I can tell you exactly.'"

"A successful farmer is usually found doing a good volume of business, and keeping down his expenses; his crop yields are above the average of the community; he is an efficient feeder of live stock, and he has his farm work so organized that he is efficient in the use of both man and horse labor. Most successful farmers have kept careful records for years, have long been studying their business, and know pretty well what operations are profitable over a period of years.

"Many unsuccessful farmers, on the other hand have only lazy ideas about the profitability of the various phases of their work. Asked about receipts and expenses, or about feeding stock, and they reply, 'I don't know about that, but I do know that I had $200 more at the end of the year than I had at the beginning.'"

"Farming is a serious and expensive business. It requires heavy investment in land, equipment and labor. It warrants careful book-keeping as does any other business. My observations are that most successful farmers realize these facts, and give considerable time to studying and managing their business, and to keeping careful accounts of all transactions."

OUR DEBT TO THE PAST

The present holds much of interest and much gossip, and the future great hopes, but we must go to the past for history.

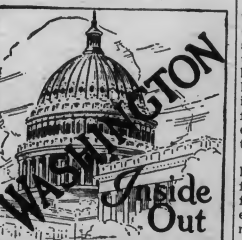

The world has been so full of thrills for ten years that the past has almost dropped out of sight.

The younger generation—perhaps no more than the youth of any other age—too often shows a silent contempt for the past.

Not all of the people who have gone before us were old-fashioned. They were up-to-date in their time, else this community would not have made the progress that it has.

It would not be as prosperous as it is, would not have the advantages that it now possesses, would be lacking in many of the essentials of modern life, if it had not been for the thoughtfulness of those who have passed on.

Our debt to the past is too great not to give it due recognition, and our debt to the future also is deserving of thoughtful consideration. The condition of this community fifty years from now depends in some measure on what we do today. This is something worth remembering in solving our community problems that arise from day to day.

WASHINGTON HAS derived a great deal of argument from the row that has been going on between the Carry-on Club, an organization of the members of the club out Princess Elaine von der Lippe-Lippe, who owns the house in which they have their headquarters. While she was away from Washington for a few days, some of the club members turned over the Princess' two-year-old daughter to the Dentention Home. Upon her return the Princess ordered the members of the club out of the house and tried to move in an organization of blind veterans from Baltimore. The Carry-on Club resisted efforts to put them out into the street, and obtained a temporary injunction prohibiting the Princess from interfering with them.

OPponents OF THE Volstead Act see some hope in the announcement of Senator Watson of Indiana that the Coolidge Administration will consider proposals for the modification and liberalization of the law should the present drive against rum smugglers and bootleggers fail to dry up the country and its sea-coasts. In the meantime, every agency at the command of the Government is using the Army-Navy League using the use of the Army and Navy is being used in the rum war. Coast Guard officials declare that the smugglers off New York have been routed and are now turning their attention to the Gulf Coast and the Pacific, while other agents move against the booze manufacturers and dealers in the Southern Mountains along the Canadian and Mexican borders.

THE ANNUAL migration of the Washington diplomatic family to New England is underway. Many of the Ambassadors who have been stationed in the United States for a number of years have permanent summer homes along the Massachusetts or Rhode Island coasts, where they flee from the sweltering heat of the National Capital. Varon Von Maltzan, the Great Ambassador, will take his family to Swmscott, Mass., having leased a house not far from that to be occupied by President Coolidge as a "summer white house."

FOREIGN DEBTS continue to occupy a prominent place in the press and in the minds of Government officials despite the fact that very little action is taking place on this side of the Atlantic in bringing the debtors to terms. The latest demand of the American Debt Commission for payment from France, Italy and other debtor nations has resulted in some activity in foreign capitals and it is the general hope in Administration circles that funding negotiations will be started during the summer. With the expectation that such will be the case, Secretary of the treasury Mellon who is chairman of the commission, has cancelled his plans for a trip to Europe.

THE FEDERAL TRADE Commission is being subjected to attacks both from within and without in connection with its new policy of holding in confidence all charges of unfair practices brought against business organizations until they have been proven. The ruling was made by a majority of the commission, but is being opposed by the minority led by Commissioner Nugent on the ground that the best interests of the country and business as a whole will be served by permitting all of the Commission's affairs to be open to the public. Senator Borah of Idaho has joined the fight on the commission with the statement that its attempts at secrecy have destroyed its effectiveness and that it should be abolished. An effort in this direction is expected in the next Congress.

PRESIDENT COOLIDGE plans to adhere to his economy program in his next trip westward by riding in an ordinary Pullman car instead of paying $5,000 for a special train. There have been many reports that the President has been prevailed upon to go back to the private car system on account of the danger involved in using a public car, but the White House is authority for the statement that the President feels there is little danger and that the inconvenience to himself and the official party is worth the saving that can be made.

SPRING FEVER

Spring fever is not a disease. It's only the popular name for a common human experience.

Everybody has it; no one escapes it. The tiller of the soil longs for the shade of the tree when they begin to leaf and the school boy pines for the old swimming hole as he watches the open window, the inviting shadows playing on the green grass.

If the youngster tires easily doing up the chores, mother, not recognizing the symptoms, promptly concludes that he needs a spring tonic. This is according to tradition. In the long ago well-intentioned mothers mixed up sulphur and molasses, sassafras tea, "yarp tea" dandelion tea or one or another of the old, home-made stand boys to feed to reluctant boys and girls. Today, looking with contempt upon such old-fashioned things as home-made remedies, the good mothers buy a tonic that comes already prepared to give.

Protesting that they are perfectly normal, the children make wry faces and swallow it by the spoonful, meanwhile making a mental reservation that spring tonics should never have been invented. However, the feeling of languor persists. A new warmth fills the air. Tonics notwithstanding, all of us feel a desire to "let down," to ease up on the job while the "outdoors" calls—and most of us would willingly lay aside our duties and yield to it.

Country Cleanliness

Cleanliness in the country is just as much to be desired as cleanliness in village, town or city, and pride in the appearance of his home and surrounding premises should be as natural for a farmer as a town or city dweller.

Country folks, however, are never inspired to clean up in the spring, as in the town and cities, where "clean-up weeks" have come to be annual customs which stir people to action, though they may not all have the desire to go through with the renovation process.

A clean country home is an inspiration to people traveling through the country. It means that those who live here are industrious and desirous of keeping their residences yards and surrounding property looking well, without having been persuaded or coerced by public opinion.

Most farmers take advantage of the opportunities they have to make their places of abode attractive with flowers. Plant life of the flower garden has an important part in satisfying rural life, and it likewise makes a trip through the country at this season especially enjoyable.

The average farmer has a genuine appreciation of natural beauty, although he may not always be conscious of the rare possession he has in the city the florists supply natural beauty in a more or less artificial form and large sums of money are spent annually to satisfy the universal desire for it. Country people have much of it right at their doors, and wild beauty is spread before them with a lavish hand.

We think of agriculture in terms of corn and credit, plows and prices, things economic in character and vital in carrying out farming, but after the day's work is over the farmer and his family can find real joy, relaxation and inspiration in the flower garden.

They can also keep the premises in such condition that there will be nothing to detract from the beauty that nature provides in the spring.

COMMUNITY PROSPERITY

The prosperity of a community is not measured by population but by its civic loyalty and commercial progress.

A handful of workers achieve more than a regiment of drones—and it is the handful who usually do the things worth while. But what great benefits might result if every man and woman could be listed among the workers?

A great foot ball coach recently declared that if he had a team of average ability who will work together, each with the other and all for the team, he could defeat any team composed solely of individual stars.

Individual ability counts for much—but it is mass co-operation of energetic determined men, imbued with civic spirit, home pride and community enterprise that builds a community. Such people do not mind their orders and do their shopping in some other town.

Men and women of Boone County be ye more than mere residents—be citizens. A home cannot be made beautiful. Neither can an office. Neither can a city. The more beauty there is in this world, the more happiness there will be. If we love beauty in all its forms and manifestations, we are bound to think beautiful thoughts, and live beautiful lives, no matter how much we have to contend with.

VERSAILLES GAS BLAST KILLS THREE

WHEN MATCH IS DROPPED THRU GRATING TO CELLAR, UNDER BUS STATION

Later Fire Threatens City, Destroying Several Stores—Score of People in Vicinity Injured—Tales of Origin of Blast Vary.

Versailles, Ky. — Willard Blackard, 83 years old, was the third victim of the Versailles gas blast. B. D. Nail, 45, lessee of the demolished building, la in a critical condition at the Woodford Memorial Hospital, suffering with a broken leg, broken arm, cuts and possible internal injuries. With the exception of Nail, the two surviving persons who were carried to the hospital are resting comfortably and all are expected to recover, according to Dr. S. A. Blackburn, one of the physicians working with the wounded. Next to Nail, Robert Taylor, 23, of Tennessee, la most seriously hurt with a badly burst and crushed head.

The three persons who died of injuries received in the explosion are: William Blackard, farmer of the Mortonsville neighborhood, died at the hospital.

Oro Moore, 47, farmer and fox hound raiser, died a few minutes after the crash.

William Tighman, 15, died of a broken neck shortly after the blast.

Besides the twelve injured persons at the hospital there were probably a dozen who received minor injuries from flying glass and falling pieces of debris which, was thrown 100 feet, up and down Lexington avenue. They received first aid treatment in the offices of downtown physicians and no record was made of their cases in the rush of administering opiates and draining wounds of the more seriously injured.

Besides the bus station, dry cleaning establishment and an empty room, all in the Nail place, which was owned by Miss Jo Carter, the interior of Martin's Shoe Store was wrecked. One end of the shoe store crumbled in the blast. Shelves on the side of the wall near the Nail place were hurled to the floor and shoes and dry goods littered the floor.

There were many narrow escapes. Several persons are thankful to vacate the scene a few seconds before the blast.

Several persons witnessed the blast and while they agree in the main as to the cause, several versions are given. Some say Moore struck a match and the head fell off into a grating of the cellar under the vacant store room. They say he did not have time to get away.

Others say that when the match fell there was a half a mile from the grating, and Moore, with a few companions, seemed to be watching when the gas exploded, rocking the down-town district. Some say the blazing match head rested for an instant, balanced on one of the rods of the grating and Moore attempted to step on it but knocked it into the cellar.

"I thought it was an earthquake," a man who lives half a mile from town said. "I thought it was the crack of doom," another said.

"I had just looked at the Court House clock," he said, "I saw some men standing in front of the bus station. Then I saw a blaze of blue, accompanied by a hissing sound, followed almost instantly by a tremendous boom and the building came tumbling down." Mr. Chandler was one of the first to come to the aid of the victims.

Taylor, with his face hidden in a mass of gauze bandages at the hospital, said that Chandler was the first to reach him.

"A pile of timbers were crushing the life out of me," he said, "and my face was on fire. I called for help and somebody pulled me out. He saved my life." He said it was Chandler who helped him.

The tremendous roar and shock was heard and felt throughout the city and persons as far out as two miles said they heard the noise. The wind-blown up and down Lexington street and on Main street were broken by the crash, and workmen were busy sweeping up the broken glass from the streets.

Fire, which threatened to break out among the ruins, added to the awfulness of the catastrophe but was quenched by the quick work of the Versailles Fire Department in applying a heavy stream of water to the ruins.

A score or more of volunteer workmen, under the direction of Mayor Keene Arnold, cleared away the wreckage of the establishment operated by Mr. Nail, which was nothing but a pile of dusty bricks and jutting timbers.

The ice cream and strawberry supper given by the Missionary and Helper's Circle on the church lawn last Saturday night, was a success both socially and financially.

Baccalaureate services were held in the Lutheran church last Sunday afternoon. The church was tastefully decorated with the class colors and flowers while the afternoon program included an anthem by the High School pupils, also an anthem by the Hebron choir. Rev. Walker Vance of the Madison Ave., Presbyterian church delivered a very interesting discourse to the graduates.

Washington experts figure that the total amount of alcoholic liquors smuggled into this country, added to the amount of domestic whiskey legitimately withdrawn from bond, is more than 12 per cent of the nation's pre war supply. Out of more than 100,000 samples of confiscated whiskey analyzed at Washington, not more than one tenth of one per cent was found to be genuine spirituous liquor.

Many of our fluent speakers are never at a loss for a word, but some of them run short of ideas.

Shortage of the necessities of life is complained of in homes that do not possess any flivver.

Just as the women folks are all 30 years old, so the men were always running only 20 miles an hour.

Flying Ebony, the Winner, Bred In Old Kentucky

Entire American Press Acclaims This Great Race

THE DERBY'S GROWTH

(Harvey Woodruff in Chicago Tribune)

LOUISVILLE, Ky., May 16.—(Special.)—Those who were among the 75,000 or more spectators at Churchill Downs this afternoon and who also were here for the first time even as late as a decade ago could not help reflecting on the tremendous growth of the Kentucky Derby.

It has been within the last ten years, almost within the last five, that Kentucky's Derby has become national in its interest and attendance. True, the Derby was a great event, a state institution, almost from its inception. The Blue Grass region, noted for its beautiful women, its thoroughbreds and its mint juleps, had the Derby for its own. Some of the more conservative even resented the intrusion of the great outside world, but business and breeding interests welcomed it.

So gradually the annual influx to Louisville on Derby Day swamped the accommodations. Additions and improvements at the track were made with seeming disregard of cost. Its facilities more nearly kept pace with the growth than anything else in Louisville, but even its 1,500 boxes are hopelessly inadequate to meet the demand. Col. Matt Winn, major domo of the huge racing establishment, told me that Chicago alone would take up half the quota of the Derby.

The Derby has outgrown Louisville. It is an oft repeated assertion. True, hotels, restaurants and transportation are overtaxed at Derby time. But the Derby is a Louisville institution. No other city for years could supplant the traditions and hospitality which the Kentucky Jockey Club has thrown around the event.

A STRUGGLE BETWEEN EAST AND WEST

(Branville Courier and Journal)

The race, witnessed by from 70,000 to 80,000 spectators, the greatest throng that ever witnessed a horse race in America, was decided under highly dramatic conditions. After a day of glorious sunshine, black clouds suddenly gathered in the southwest, threatened a deluge every second and post time was advanced 30 minutes.

About two minutes before the start a brisk shower started falling. The shower suddenly ceased, as quickly as it had started, but the instant the race was finished a terrific down-pour cut loose, soaking thousands to the skin. Costly wearing apparel, designed along graceful lines, lost its grace; colors literally ran riot, while the wearers scrambled for shelter that was nowhere available.

FLYING EBONY CROWNED

LOUISVILLE, KY., May 16.—Gifford A. Cochran has pride in his bearing this evening.

Flying Ebony, with Earl Sande, carried his colors to convincing victory in the fifty-first running of the Kentucky Derby here to-day and earned a place among the great races of the world. Flying Ebony, the champion of the race, with close to 70,000 men and women fairly raving and shrieking in response to emotions loosened without restraint.

With a rattle of thunder from the black piled-up clouds, which broke in a shower of rain as the horses started, the black son of the Finn-Princess Mary was the first to break the half, while Captain Hal, the pacemaker in the middle part of the race, beat Son of John a short head for the place. Four lengths back, Single Foot led the struggling, struggling pack.

So far as hundreds upon hundreds who fairly lost their reason for one brief minute were concerned, nine horses won the Kentucky Derby of 1925.

EARL SANDE'S SKILL

Cool judgment, rare riding ability, special, then an unexpected ability to stay a route by a supposed and scorned sprinter, won the fifty-first running of the Derby. Earl Sande, with the judgment and skill of a master, was responsible for the winning of Gifford A. Cochran's Flying Ebony.

A master hand also had trained and sent the son of the Finn-Princess Mary to the post. William Duke saddled his first Derby winner in America, although he has won the English classic a half-dozen times and for three different owners. He sent this year's winner out to pick up a rich stake of $52,500 without ever having worked him the Derby distance of a mile and a quarter. Flying Ebony won handsily by a length and a half. Captain Hal finished second, a head in front of Son of John.

MANY NOTABLES PRESENT

(J. B. Snodgrass in Philadelphia Public Ledger)

Today was a national day at Churchill Downs. Notables and persons of less importance gathered here from all over the land for this annual event. Leaders in political and financial worlds held forth in the clubhouse.

The wand of tradition, touched to a mere horse race on an afternoon in May, brought forth a scene of sport and laughter, of beauty and finery, of hopes and happiness and of a measure of disappointment.

In its coloring between fanciful and yet real, this Kentucky Derby in greater degree than any one of the fifty others in by gone years stood out as the grand premiere of all of America's playdays.

In numbers—the chiefest—the crowd excelled by thousands any other of the fifty derbies of its history. And never was Churchill Downs so beautiful. Its natural splendor, its pretty flowers and shrubbery, its well-kept lawns, enhanced by its costumes that embellished the entire enclosure, presented a dream picture.

In the clubhouse, grandstands, paddock and the field the vistas of vantage were measured by inches, coveted by the less fortunate and cherished by the more resourceful.

Enough automobiles to support an oil octopus were stowed away like toys in every possible inch of parking spaces far beyond. Automobiles were parked by States. Hundreds of automobiles lined up in the rows of boxes in grandstand and clubhouse were men and women known throughout the Nation. There was William Gibbs McAdoo and Mrs. McAdoo, daughter of the late President Wilson.

Mrs. William K. Vanderbilt, of New York, and the other box holder, Mrs. Vanderbilt, owned the great Saracen. Mrs. Payne Whitney, owner of the Greenlee Stable, and Mr. Whitney were here as well as Harry Payne Whitney. Gifford A. Cochran came to see Flying Ebony sport his silks while Marshall Field was here although his derby candidate, Stimulus, has failed to train.

SPEED AND SKILL

(Robert T. Small in Milwaukee Journal)

In a spectacular fifty-first running of the famed Kentucky Derby here to-day, the race was won by a length and a half, while Captain Hal, the pacemaker in the middle part of the race, beat Son of John a short head for the place. Four lengths back, Single Foot led the struggling, struggling pack.

Quadrant, the favorite, was far back and so was Kentucky Cardinal, another choice with the crowd. Flying Ebony earned $52,500 of the $50,000 purse and a gold cup valued at $5,000. John N. Camden presented in a few appropriate words to Mr. Cochran in the stewards' stand, as the crowd kept on cheering.

Racing The Sport of Kentuckians

(From the Louisville Courier-Journal)

THE crowd, termed by M. J. Winn, general manager of the Kentucky Jockey Club, as the greatest in the fifty-one years of Derby history, was cascaded and festooned at every available point at the spacious course. So variegated and radiant was the raiment of the throng and so vibrant its pulse that the lawns from high above must have looked like a gigantic garden of sweet peas in a gentle breeze. During the running of the Derby, when fluttering hats and programmes and form sheets were waved frenziedly by the animated crowd in frantic efforts to speed on the animals befriended, the scene from the lofty vista of an airplane must have been more akin to a windstorm's agitation of a peach orchard in bloom.

Each succeeding year space is added to Churchill Downs in an effort to care more comfortably for Derby enthusiasts. Many wished yesterday that the Downs had been built of rubber so that it could have stretched to a more commodious accommodation for all.

Derby Day is the choicest in the calendar of sports. No other magnet can compare. It is a day when a commonwealth is at communion, a nation at homage, and the world at attention. The Derby is a race where the crowd is for the horse and not for the money he carries. Tradition and sentiment overwhelmingly surpass the purse. Dozens and dozens of turf lovers come a thousand miles to see the sport of a few seconds over two minutes in duration. The memory, however, clings throughout life. No one can forget the Kentucky Derby Day. On it America seems to be keeping its eye on the prize. The pulsing thousands are aglow. The animals and their hearts pound with the hoof beats. The merit of modistes and the handiwork of haberdashers make the event an annual style show. Just as Minnie Gump said, "Derby Day is like a glimpse into fairyland."

The racing of thoroughbreds has been called the Sport of Kings. It is more. It is the sport of Kentuckians.

The ovation which Sande received as Flying Ebony charged past the winning post and as he later appeared in the judges' stand to receive the trophies that go to the winning jockey has seldom been equaled on this historic old track.

DERBY GREATEST EVER

(John E. Wray in St. Louis Post Dispatch)

We'll tell the world that the 1925 Derby was the greatest ever. This is notwithstanding that the 1924 event was the fifty-year anniversary of the inauguration of this, the greatest of American classics. Not only the swarming thousands at the track here this afternoon, numbering an estimated total of between 75,000 and 80,000, but conditions at down town hostilities and eating places helped to prove the management's statement in public attendance. The flying field here adjacent to Churchill Downs also bears witness. Yesterday within the space of two hours, 27 planes, army, navy and private, parked, and this morning there were no less than 42 on the grounds. The planes include the olive drab army flyers, the silver navy planes and even the tramp jennies of private ownership.

AMERICA'S BEST KNOWN

All Derby Crowds Surpassed

(Clarence H. Bradley in Chicago News.)

"All Kentucky Derby attendance records were surpassed today," said Col. M. J. Winn, general manager of the Kentucky Jockey Club. "Churchill Downs never held as great a crowd. They came from the four quarters of the earth, well dressed, orderly, enthusiastic lovers of the thoroughbred. Leaders of the financial, official and the social world from every State in the union are here today bearing testimony by their presence that the Kentucky Derby is the outstanding sporting event of America."

"It is particularly gratifying to receive the support of many thousands of our friends throughout Kentucky, who recognize and appreciate what the jockey club has done to promote the great thoroughbred interest of this State."

"The Kentucky Jockey Club is trying to make Churchill Downs worthy in every way of the generous public patronage it receives. The papers of the city and State and the entire press of America have made possible the fame and success of the Kentucky Derby."

airplanes be provided. This was done on a field adjoining the racing plant. This provision for the newspapers was necessary because of the distance of Bowman field from the Downs.

NEVER A GUY LIKE SANDE

(Damon Runyon in Cleveland Plain Dealer)

"Sande" there'll be another, Heady, and game an' true, Maybe we'll find his brother, A drivin' them horses through, Maybe—but say, I doubt it, Never his like again— Never a handy Guy like Sande, Bootin' them babies in.

Green an' white at the quarter— Say, I can see him now, Racin' them just as he wot, Workin' them up—how Green an' white at the home stretch Who do you think'll win? Who but a handy Guy like Sande, Kickin' that baby in.

Maybe we'll find another, Maybe we'll find his brother, With his brains above his ears, Maybe—I'll lay it in it, A billion bucks to a fin— Never a handy Guy like Sande, Bootin' them babies in—

LOUISVILLE, KY., May 16.—Riding as if he was hurrying home ahead of the fast on-coming storm, that broke soon after he finished, Earl Sande, the master horseman of these times, drove Flying Ebony to victory in the Kentucky Derby this afternoon.

Captain Hal, one of the hopes of Kentucky in the big stakes, was second, a length and a half away, and a nose ahead of Son of John, while Garland's Single Foot was fourth.

Flying Ebony, a coal black colt, belongs to Gifford A. Cochran, the champion millionaire from Kentucky, whose Coventry won the Freehats at Pimlico a short time ago.

The writer was one of a party that met Cochran's wandering disconsolately along a dusty road near Lexington Thursday.

"What do you think of your horse in the derby," Cochran was asked. "I don't think much of it," replied Cochran moodily. "I haven't a jockey. I thought Kummer would ride for me, but he's wanted in New York to ride a stakes horse."

For a man of all his wealth he was mightily depressed. "My kingdom for a rider," he might have said, "I don't think I could do it myself."

That same day Earl Sande arrived in Louisville seeking a mount in the derby which he won on Zev two years ago. He was originally scheduled to ride Borderland, but that horse was withdrawn.

A NEW TURF KING

(Robert E. Dundon in Louisville Sunday Herald-Post)

FLYING EBONY, a coal-black son of the Finn, a doughty horse in the new king of Turfdom.

With roses and gold, they crowned him Saturday afternoon. Crowned him in that classic cathedral of nature, a fair bit of Kentucky, Churchill Downs. And he won his honors right royally.

Out of a field of twenty contenders for that place, he emerged shortly before 5 o'clock, this new champion.

By a margin of two lengths he beat a gallant colt, Captain Hal, and a nose back of the second horse, finished Son of John, forcing the other to drive to the limit to outstay him for the place honors. Single Foot came fourth. Step Along was a good fifth.

WINNER KENTUCKY BRED

(Pittsburg Gazette Times)

The race was a traditional struggle between East and West. The triumphant Flying Ebony, one of the 11 Eastern thoroughbreds in the 20 engaged in the contest, is Eastern only in ownership. He was bred in Kentucky and is by the Finn-Princess Mary. The Finn was father of Zev, winner of the 1923 Derby, and like Zev, Flying Ebony also was a product of the same sire.

He lost the race, but he won $5,000, as second place money, and the honor of being the only Kentucky bred candidate, the only one of the heavy favorites to finish in the money.

A WONDERFUL DAY

(James O'Donnell Bennett in Chicago Tribune)

And now you have the real essential news data of a very wonderful, changeful and exhilarating day, of which the disgruntled—I mean the losers—are saying tonight, "nothing but a jockey won the race."

Well, let the disgruntled grunt. They can do no more, nor take away from a brave, judicious race horse his $53,000 in prize money, his $5,000 worth of gold plate and his glory that will ever stay as green as the Kentucky turf he honors.

Heaven above, what a get-away it was for the American classic of horse racing. The ancient poets tell us that the very gods of Olympia loved a race and understood a fine horse.

Well, if those crashest of thunder rolling in on Churchill Downs from the green and misty Kentucky knob and the stream of lightning from a darkening sky meant anything special this afternoon they meant that Olympians are still awake to the charms and color and glory of a supreme horse race.

Rain! They didn't hate it; they drank it. A sloppy track! They didn't mind matters over the race, but bent to their work, bent to it with the ardor that makes work joy. They bent to it the finest equine music there is in the world.

What a thud of 80 boots pounding their way around a mile and a quarter of wet brown ribbon.

The horses loved it and we, peering at them through the slats of rain loved it.

It was the supreme test of the day—this storm—the supreme test of the fine, valid open air lure of horse racing.

It was the supreme test because rain or shine a great horse race puts the gala note into life as nothing else does and it is not so consistently gay that a hearty people can afford to banish and bar a note like rain.

Whip and spur were little used throughout the race. Nerve won it, physical and spiritual nerve. Besides good jockeys don't like whip and spur. They don't like it because they love their horses and you can't be a successful jockey without love.

LEADERS IN FINANCE

(Philadelphia Inquirer)

Notable personages and persons less important gathered from all over the land for the event. Leaders in the financial world were here.

They held forth in the clubhouse, while the butcher, the baker and the candlestick maker were no less enthusiastic on the lawn below the grandstand.

In the clubhouse, grandstand, paddock and field the vistas of vantage were measured by inches, coveted by the less fortunate and cherished by the more resourceful.

The grandstand was taxed to its utmost by thousands, who came as early as 8 o'clock.

In the clubhouse the open spaces were only slightly less occupied than in the grandstand.

Enough automobiles to support an oil octopus were stowed away like toys in every possible inch of parking space on the grounds, in the streets of the section and open spaces far beyond. Automobiles were parked by States. Hundreds and hundreds of cars, indicating every shade of social status, carried thousands of spectators to the track from Churchill Downs. Taxicabs by the hundred were in operation.

TRUMPHE FOR SANDE

(W. J. McBeth in New York Herald Tribune)

Earl Sande enjoyed the triumphs of his second Kentucky Derby victory over the other race, barring the International classic, when he beat Papyrus with Zev. Earl rode to victory in the Kentucky Derby of 1923. Today's victory was the sweeter because this was a way it was an unexpected honor achieved by the premier jockey. Sande had his heart set on winning this year's Derby for business reasons, and as late as yesterday morning offered Jockey B. Bruening $2,000 and the 10 per cent fee in case of victory. That he won with Flying Ebony and retained the rich purse was a way it was an unexpected triumph.

The victory of Flying Ebony proved not only a great achievement for jockey Earl Sande, but also for the breeding genius of John E. Madden. Mr. Madden bred the winner of this year's Derby.

WHAT THE PEOPLE WANT

The indictment of approximately 200 public officials in thirteen larger cities, selected at random by a press association, for bribery or conspiracy to defeat the purpose of the prohibition laws, clearly shows the temper of the people.

In addition to the indictments covered by this survey, thirty other public servants have been suspended or punished in some other manner. Eighty-eight of the 200 indicted have been convicted and sentenced and the remainder have not been tried. Acquittals have been rare.

This plainly demonstrates that public sentiment is not in favor of temporizing with officials who are untrue to their trust, whether they be federal prohibition directors, mayors, sheriffs or just plain policemen.

It is the only way prohibition can be made successful. So long as public officials are in league with bootleggers and are allowed to escape the consequences of their acts, there is little hope of inspiring any respect for any law, much less the dry law.

This fault is not common to large cities. Small communities have not escaped this blight that has come from morally weak officials who could resist the temptation to make some "easy money."

It is becoming more apparent that persistent and flagrant violation of the prohibition laws will not be tolerated and those who are engaged in the illicit business are warned if they do not find a new calling before they come to the end of the road—for surely there is an end for all of them.

EVERYBODY RIDES

Mother Shilpin's prophecy, made in 1641, "Carriages without horses shall go," has truly been fulfilled to all the people of the United States, for there is one motor vehicle for every 6.4 persons and one passenger car for every 7.3 persons and one motor truck for every 69 persons.

Thus everybody rides. Those who have no car, have friends who do, and now and then they get an invitation for a ride.

Motor vehicle registrations in the United States reached a total of 17,591,981 at the end of 1924, according to an announcement from the federal bureau of public roads.

645 cars registered last year. Receipts from license fees were $225,492,000.

In view of these facts, it is little wonder that interurban lines are complaining about decreasing revenue and steam roads are removing local trains at such a rate as to handicap seriously, the mail service of small communities.

The time will come when the government will no longer be able to serve its patrons efficiently by dispatching mail exclusively by rail.

It is becoming more apparent that first class highways are essential to the life of every community and how to get them built well and at the lowest cost, for business and pleasure riding both, deserves the best thought of men in public office.

SIGNS AT CROSSINGS

It's difficult to justify the large road signs that mar the landscape, at best, and they become intolerable when they are erected at a railroad or interurban crossing so that they obscure the view of the track to motorists.

The chances that are taken in crossing tracks are great enough without having them increased by signs that might just as well be placed in another location, if they must be put up at all.

The average person loses his patience by having his view cut off and chopped up by innumerable wooden structures that spoil the beauty of the countryside.

They can be tolerated when they do not imperil life, but when they increase the risks of motoring, which are already high enough, they become a menace that require some summary action.

Though the law may permit signs to be erected at crossings, the people who own property thus situated might have enough consideration for the other fellow not to allow them to be erected.

CLEAN MOONEY

The government will print more paper money than ever before during the coming year, it is stated at Washington. If this shall make it possible to distribute more clean bills and fewer soiled ones, the change will be welcome in Kentucky and everywhere else.

It seems to make one feel richer to get paid off in clean new money. You feel somehow as if it would go farther, and somehow people to whom you pay it seem specially glad to get it. In the old world they used to get this feeling of cleanliness by using old coins very largely, though this practice has had to be partly discontinued owing to carrying much gold in their pockets, but they do appreciate the cleanliness of fresh new bills.

A roll of old and worn paper money, which may carry something of an order from passing thru many hands, seems to suggest the possibility that it may carry infection.

DO YOU KNOW?

THAT 21,000,000 letters went to the Dead Letter Office last year?

THAT 805,000 parcels did likewise?

THAT 190,000 letters go into the mail yearly in perfectly blank envelopes?

THAT $55,000.00 in cash is removed annually from misdirected envelopes?

THAT $12,000.00 in checks, drafts and money orders have never reached intended owners?

THAT Uncle Sam collects $92,000.00 a year in postage for the return of mail sent to the Dead Letter Office?

THAT it costs Uncle Sam $1,740,000 yearly to look up addresses on misdirected mail?

THAT 200,000,000 letters are given this service, and that it costs in one city alone $500.00 daily?

AND DO YOU KNOW?

THAT this vast sum could be saved and the Dead Letter Office abolished if each piece of mail carried a return address, and if each parcel was wrapped in stout paper and tied with string cord?

MORAL: Every man knows his own address if not that of his correspondent.

More gold bricks are prepared and sold in Wall Street than in all the balance of the nation combined. That seems to be headquarters for suckers, rural as well as hard-boiled.

When the spading days arrive, the most of us regret the days of our youth that we wasted when we could have been acquiring muscle.

THE RETAIL MERCHANT

The small retail merchant generally regards himself as a small cog in the elaborate mechanism that constitutes American business, but that does not appear to be the view of business itself.

What the latter thinks of the retailer was expressed by Richard F. Grant, president of the U. S. Chamber of Commerce in a recent address:

"The retail merchant of this great land of ours has a sacred trust in his hands, because he is the point of contact between business and the great run of American citizens regarding business is largely crystallized and molded and formed by the retail merchant because, as I have said, he constitutes the great point of contact between the citizenry of the country and business."

When the retail merchant realizes his importance in our present business structure, and that he is in business to satisfy human desires, he is much more likely to appreciate his responsibility to the people whom he serves.

By his conduct in the business world, people from their conceptions of business as a whole. Whenever a retail merchant engages in unethical practices or is guilty of dealings that will not stand close scrutiny, he injures the whole business structure.

His fellow merchants as well as himself suffer because the customer who suffers loses confidence in all business men.

The retail merchant who places the customer's satisfaction above his own profits will profit in the long run and is a distinct asset to any community.

Another "Bull" Durham advertisement by Will Rogers. Ziegfeld Folies and screen star, and leading American humorist. More coming. Watch for them.

What Good Does It Do You to Know Something?

Advertisements in all Papers and Magazines are all trying to appeal to the intelligent. Now this one is for the great majority. Reliable authority, in fact it was the Draft Boards during the War, figured out that the intelligence of the average Adult of this Country was that of a 13 year old Child. (Now that is giving us the best of it because a 13 year old Child is about the smartest thing we have in this Country), but the 13 year old Child they referred to was one who had been raised on the milk of human Kindness (which is mostly Water) and weaned on a Hard Boiled Egg. You know the smarter the Man the more dissatisfied he is, so cheer up, let us be happy in our ignorance. What do we care how little we know if we get what we want? "Bull" Durham needs no Literacy Test, it is with minority in quality, and with the majority in usage.

Military Highway Association Is Organized At Carrollton

Six Thousand Road Enthusiasts From All Points Along Proposed Project Met Last Saturday Committee Appointed

Approximately six thousand road enthusiasts gathered at Carrollton last Saturday to discuss and set to work plans for the proposed construction of a military highway between Camp Knox and Ft. Thomas.

Large delegations attended from every county along the proposed route, which includes Trimble, Oldham, Carroll, Hardin, Bullitt, Henry, Jefferson, Boone, Kenton and Campbell and Gallatin, which was represented by a delegation including 150 automobiles.

John J. Howe, chairman of the Military Highway Committee of the Carrollton Chamber of Commerce called the meeting to order about 1 o'clock in the afternoon from a bunting-draped platform in front of the Carrollton house.

Mr. Howe read a telegram from Gov. William J. Fields, regretting his inability to be present and declaring that the military road project had been "one of his pet measures" since the construction of Camp Knox.

After a few preliminaries, Mr. Barker, president of the Chamber, who in turn called on Mayor J. E. Gullion of Carrollton to welcome the visitors.

Mr. Barker explained that the purpose of the meeting was to make plans "to get the road." He promised that the route was not to be discussed nor was any money to be raised.

"It's a road we've got to have," he said. "We can't do without it in this section. We need it to show God's country to the rest of the people of the world."

"If the road doesn't go in front of your home, be it wherever it goes, Carrollton is going to be for it whether it goes through here or not."

Congressman Rouse Senator Ernst and Senator Sackett each promised to do all in his power in behalf of the proposal. Mr. Rouse, who represents the Sixth Kentucky District, is the author of a bill providing for a Federal appropriation to build the highway.

Mr. Ernst said "a long, hard fight" will be required if the proposal is to be made a reality. He urged his hearers to be prepared for a long continued effort, and if unable to obtain the road as a military highway, to work for it as a Federal aid project. He suggested that the association send a committee to Washington and he promised to co-operate with such a committee there.

Mr. Sackett, discussing the importance of good roads to the State's development, declared that today's meeting was "the best sign of the new Kentucky that I've looked at in years." Illustrating the conditions of bad roads he said that on a trip in Western Kentucky he had seen a farmer hauling grain a distance of only eleven miles through the mud at a cost which proved to be $1.34 a hundred pounds. The freight rate on the grain to the Atlantic Coast, he said, was 42 cents a hundred pounds. He compared the two figures to show how expensive mud roads are.

Speaking on behalf of the military at both ends of the proposed road, Colonel Merrill "heartily indorsed the project."

"We have to walk back and forth," he explained, referring to overland marches of troops between Camp Knox and Fort Thomas. The distance overland would be reduced 60 miles, he said, by the military highway as planned.

"Well, what are we going to do about it?" Mr. Barker asked after Colonel Merrill's speech, whereupon State Representative Wm. B. Bell of Oldham county introduced a resolution proposing the organization of the Fort Thomas to Camp Knox Highway Association.

Following is the text of Mr. Bell's resolution creating the new association:

Whereas, the great gathering of citizens from the counties of Hardin, Bullitt, Jefferson, Oldham, Carroll, Trimble, Henry, Gallatin, Kenton, Boone and Campbell in Northern Kentucky (Cincinnati, Ohio, here assembled, is a certain manifestation of the interest of the entire citizenship of these counties

LAST COMMENCEMENT OF THE 1925 SEASON

Hebron High School Closed Great School Year Last Tuesday With An Appropriate Program

The last of Boone county's commencement exercises was held at Hebron last Tuesday evening, with the High School auditorium, which seats approximately three hundred persons, filled to its capacity.

The music was furnished by the High School orchestra assisted by Prof. Well, their instructor, who rendered several beautiful violin and cornet solos. The class address, which was a splendid one, was delivered by Supt. Mark Godman, the State High School Inspector.

The members of the graduating class were Edwin Walton, Ina Ogden, Ralph and Alice Eggleston, to whom diplomas were presented by Prof. A. M. Yenley, of Florence, who substituted for Supt. Gordon.

The faculty of Hebron this year, consisting of C. V. Lucy, Mrs. Fowler, Chester C. Mridge, Jessie Gordon, Sadie Riemann and Mr. Tribble, have extended every effort for the success of this school and have given that community probably the most successful school year it has ever experienced as well as one of the foremost schools in our county.

REV. HOUSTON, FORMER BELLEVUE PASTOR, OCCUPIES LOCAL PULPITS

Rev. J. D. Houston, a Christian minister, of New York City, occupied the pulpits of the Christian churches at Petersburg, last Sunday.

On Sunday evening he preached in the Methodist church at Burlington. All three addresses were both interesting and enlightening.

Bro. Houston formerly worked in this county when a young minister just starting in his profession and still has many friends in Northern Boone county. He was instrumental in building the Bellevue Christian church many years ago.

In the proposed construction of a military highway connecting Camp Knox with Fort Thomas, and where, as it is necessary for the certain and speedy accomplishment of this proposal, that the energy, interest and influence of the many thousand citizens of these counties be unified and expressed in a concrete manner now, therefore, be it resolved that for the purpose of promoting the construction of a highway connecting Camp Knox with Fort Thomas, an association be organized to be known as the Fort Thomas to Camp Knox Highway Association with branch organizations in each of the counties above mentioned.

Be it further resolved, that the chairman of this meeting appoint an organization committee composed of five citizens from each of the above named counties, which committee, together with the chairman of this meeting shall meet at the court house in Carrollton, Ky., on a day to be fixed by the chairman of this meeting, and at said meeting of said committee, definite plans be made for the organization of the Ft. Thomas to Camp Knox Highway Association.

OLD BAPTIST CHURCH TO BE RE-DEDICATED

Ancient Church at Bullittsburg, Recently Repaired, To Be Dedicated On Sunday, June 21st

The historic Bullittsburg Baptist church, as remodelled, will be dedicated on Sunday, June 21st. Preparations are being made to, celebrate this event in the life of the "new-old" church in a manner befitting the place it holds in Boone county's history. Speakers will be in attendance who hold prominent places in the Baptist brotherhood, special musical numbers are being prepared, and basket dinner will be served in the same church yard, beneath the same trees, which have sheltered so many similar gatherings in years passed.

Rev. J. W. Campbell, pastor of the church, hopes that this will mark the greatest occasion the ancient house of worship has ever witnessed.

The Bullittsburg church was first organized in 1792, the first meetings being held in Bullitt Bottom (now known as the North Bend bottoms) but in 1797 was moved to the present site where a church building was constructed. Settlers from points all over Boone county and even farther, traveled by every conceivable mode known to that day and age, to this place of worship.

The membership of this little church divided in years that followed and, from time to time, formed other churches in Boone county, (and at even farther points in Indiana and Ohio) some of the earliest of which were Sand Run, Gunpowder and Middle creek. Members of Bullittsburg church united with a number of Middle creek brethren and founded Burleigh Baptist church on Dec. 13th, 1842.

The present building, which has but recently been remodelled, is more than 100 years old, and is as useful if there is any church in Kentucky which occupies a more unique and prominent place in her historical annals, than does ancient Bullittsburg.

LAWN PARTY IN HONOR OF MISS EUNIE WILLIS

At the Country Home of Mrs. B. C. Gaines, is Given by the Ladies of M. E. Sunday School

Miss Eunie Willis was the honor guest at a beautiful lawn party given by the ladies of the local M. E. Sunday school last Friday afternoon. The scene of the affair was the lovely country home of Mrs. B. C. Gaines, on the Petersburg pike.

Miss Willis was recently graduated as a nurse from the Deaconess Hospital, Cincinnati and on the occasion of her commencement extended an invitation to the ladies of the Sunday school, this event being a reciprocation of that courtesy.

Delicious refreshments were served, and about twenty-five guests, at which time Miss Willis was presented with a fountain pen by the members of the class of which she is the school.

She will go to Columbus, O., this week where she will spend three days taking the Ohio State examination for nurses.

BAN ON FRATERNITIES LIFTED AT GEORGETOWN COLLEGE

Georgetown, Ky., June 2.—The ban on fraternities at Georgetown College was lifted today by a large majority vote of the Board of Trustees. More than four years ago, following prolonged discussion, fraternities were denied the right to operate in the College. Up to that time the Beta Delta Chapter of Kappa Alpha and the Alpha Lambda Chapter of Pi Kappa Alpha had flourished. Since the opening of the College last September there has been extensive discussion of the matter among both students and alumni. The College publication, the Georgetownian, has been the forum for those on both sides. The student body was enthusiastic in its reception of the news. Both fraternities and sororities will now operate freely at the college.

SOME GOOD KENTUCKY COWS.

A Holstein cow owned by R. M. Barker, Carroll county, produced 5.88 pounds of butterfat in two days in April, according to the Dairy Division of the University of Kentucky, which supervised the testing. Another Holstein, owned by the House of Reform, Fayette county, produced 5.8 pounds in two days. A Jersey in the Experiment Station herd at Lexington produced 5.5 pounds, and two Jerseys owned by E. S. Bird, Kenton county, each produced more than 5 pounds in two days. Thirty-three Jerseys, 26 Holsteins and 3 Guernseys were tested in April.

CHECKS TO BE READY ONE WEEK EARLIER

Tobacco Money Will Be Sent Out June 13th Instead of June 20th To Members of Association

The distribution of nearly $12,500,000 to members of the Burley Tobacco Growers' Co-operative Association in the States of Kentucky, Ohio, Indiana, West Virginia, Tennessee, Missouri and Virginia, which was planned to reach them June 20, will be made a week earlier. Secretary and Treasurer H. Lee Earley, of the big tobacco co-operative announced.

Because of the fact that the distribution is to be a fixed percentage of the first payment on the crop when it was determined, the calculations required less time than on the recent final distribution on the 1922 crop and it was found possible to have the checks ready to be mailed next Saturday, June 13, and they will be in the hands of the growers in all parts of the district by Monday, June 15.

In connection with this distribution it will be necessary to write 165,000 checks, as some of the growers have assigned their interest in the crop on loans and advances from merchants, and in preparing the checks it is necessary to handle each eleven times in checking against ledger accounts and records, or 1,815,000 operations through which the checks must go before their final O. K. and mailing.

The Burley Co-operative has paid its members on their crops delivered to it as follows:

1922 crop	$49,426,619.31
1923 crop (including June 13)	$33,832,267.23
1924 crop, (first advance)	$15,262,105.73
Total payments to June 13th	$121,970,070.30

1923 crop is 58 per cent of the advance when it was delivered, this advance amounting to $321,412,827.36, and from this will be deducted only the membership fee of the grower, if he did not pay it on joining, and his proportion of warehouse stock charges, which is not an expense but an investment in the real property of the Association, which is valued at $6,500,000 and on which more than $4,000,000 has been paid.

TWO MORE ANNOUNCE FOR MAGISTRATE POST

E. J. Aylor of Bullittsville and F. L. McGlasson of Taylorsport Announce for Magistracy

This edition of the RECORDER carries the announcements of two more candidates for Magistracy. F. L. McGlasson of Taylorsport, announces as a candidate for the post in the district composed of Florence and Constance precincts. Mr. McGlasson is making this announcement after much importuning on the part of his friends, who desire a fiscal representation from that part of the county. He is one of Boone county's most successful farmers, a director in the People's Deposit Bank, besides holding, having held many other positions of trust and responsibility. If elected he will make a good official.

The other candidate for Magistracy is E. J. Aylor, who stands for re-election in the district composed of Bullittsville and Burlington precincts. Mr. Aylor is well known all over Boone county, and is not introducing to his constituency. He has been a member of the Fiscal Court for several years, a post which it is a sacrifice for any farmer to hold, but he has held it capably, doing what he thought best for his people at all times. Mr. Aylor is making this race after a great deal of urging from his friends.

There are now four candidates out in one district, two in another, and but one in a third, while in the three remaining districts there are no candidates announced as yet.

STRAWBERRIES IN WESTERN KENTUCKY

Strawberry growing offers excellent possibilities in many acres of western Kentucky if undertaken on a small scale, according to a new bulletin entitled "Strawberries and Farm Profits in Western Kentucky" issued by the Experiment Station at Lexington. "There must be adequate transportation facilities, however. There also must be co-operative effort. One grower cannot market his crop alone. The crop should be well cultivated. The harvesting season must be planned for. But these things when done wisely usually are rewarded." The bulletin sets forth data relative to soil and material requirements for strawberries, as obtained in a survey of 60 Christian county farms in 1925 and 1924.

WORLD WAR MEMORIAL IS TO BE DEDICATED

At Indianapolis, Ind., Will Be An Office Building And Used For Legion Headquarters Also

Indianapolis, Ind., June 8.—The first unit of Indiana's $10,000,000 World War Memorial which will be dedicated and turned over to the American Legion on June 17, is an office building for national headquarters, "will be one of the finest and most interestingly equipped structures of its kind in the country," declared Russell Creviston, national adjutant today.

"Great care and attention has been given to the equipping of the Legion's new national home" said Mr. Creviston. "The citizens of Indiana may well be proud of this first completed unit of their Memorial plan." The feature room in the building is the National Executive Committee room which is arranged in the form of a senate chamber with a raised rostrum for the national commander's chair. All desks and chairs of committee bear the appropriate seal of each state, territory and foreign country represented. Draperies of blue velvet and carpeting to match is the color scheme employed.

In the reception room of the executive suite it is planned to place cases which will contain rare trophies and souvenirs of the World War which will be open for public inspection. The original of "America," symbolic painting by Remi-Moh, official artist of the French Ministry of War, which was designed as an expression of America's rescuing the wall of the executive suite reception room on the third floor. The painting was presented to the American Legion under the patronage of the French Republic as the personal gift of the artist in 1922. "To your sons of free America, soldiers of the great war, I dedicate 'America,' were the artist's words in making the gift.

Four floors of glistening Bedford limestone, arranged in the simple stolidity of Grecian architectural style, give the building an exterior appearance of durability and stability together with an air of beautiful simplicity which has won the praise of all who have viewed the structure. The Legion building occupies the northwest corner of the Indiana War Memorial Plaza, which when completed will include five city blocks. The cost of the building is more than half a million dollars.

The dedication will be at 10:00 a. m., June 17. Governor Ed. Jackson will proffer the building, which will be accepted by James A. Dye, national commander of the Legion. A parade, in which all the state and national corps of departments of the Legion will appear, will precede the dedication ceremony at the building. Marcus Sonntag, chairman of the Indiana World War Memorial Commission, will preside. The program will be broadcast.

BURLINGTON GIRL SINGS FROM WKRC, SATURDAY

Quite a number of Burlington citizens listened over the radio last Saturday night, and heard Miss Bess Hall, formerly of Burlington, sing which was broadcasted from WKRC Kodel Radio Corporation, Alms Hotel, Cincinnati. The entire program was enjoyed by all those who heard it—the singing and music was very plain and distinct. Among the many listeners were Miss Bess father and mother. It was about 11 o'clock when the program ended.

As Result of Campers Brawl On the Kentucky Side of the River at North Bend Saturday Afternoon, Two Arrested

Three men giving their names as Geo. Simanson, Tom Liddle and Wm. Parsons, all of Addyston, Ohio, appeared in Burlington Monday morning for the purpose of obtaining warrants for the arrest of Edward Emery and Wm. Buffington, also of Addyston.

The men accused Emery and Buffington of criminal assault and robbery, stating that Geo. Simanson, a member of the party was the victim and judging by his appearance he certainly must have been, as his head was swathed in bandages which covered several deep wounds.

They say that while they were fishing on the Kentucky side of the river last Sunday afternoon on the farm of R. H. Crisler, of North Bend that Emery and Buffington approached Simanson while he lay asleep, knocked him senseless with a skiff oar, robbed him of his money and a ring, and which they hurried back across the river. The affair was witnessed from the Ohio side and when they arrived on that side a friend of the injured man was awaiting them with the Marshall. It seems that they had charges against them sufficient to hold them on that side of the river until they could obtain warrants for their arrest in Kentucky. From all reports they must have been bad actors as they made desperate attempts to get away from the officers after having resisted arrest.

The robbers however made a serious error when they got Simanson instead of Liddle, as Liddle had $40 on his person and Simanson had none. They were taken to the party who carried the coin.

Ed. Emery is well known in the north section of Boone county as his father Nelson Emery resided here for several years, while Tom Liddle, one member of the fishing party, is related to the Liddles of Lawrenceburg, Ind., who are known by many people along the Kentucky side of the river.

Deputy Sheriff Snyder went to Addyston with the warrants and returned the prisoners to the Boone county jail, where they will await trial.

After Emery and Buffington had been lodged in jail they told Deputy Snyder that the parties who had charged them, were "moonshiners" and further conveyed the information as to the location of the still and liquor. They evidently had the correct data as Snyder soon returned with the still and a gallon of liquor.

Emery and Buffington deny the assault and robbery.

SUNDAY SCHOOL ROOMS AT PETERSBURG ARE DEDICATED

The Baptist church at Petersburg, held an all-day dedicatory service at their place of worship last Sunday. The occasion was for the purpose of dedicating their new Sunday school rooms which have recently been added to the building. A large crowd was in attendance.

JOHN W. CLEMENS DEAD

John W. Clemens, aged 72 years, passed away suddenly at his home on Wells Street, Elsmere, Ky., Wednesday June 3rd. The remains were forwarded to his old home in Grant county Friday June 5th, where after appropriate services he was interred in Fairview cemetery near Williams-town. Undertaker Philip Taliaferro, of Erlanger, had charge of the funeral arrangements.

TENT REVIVAL

The tent revival being conducted in the Baptist church yard at Florence by Bro. O. J. Steger, of Latonia, is drawing huge crowds each evening, with ever increasing interest. Thursday night, June 11th, will be Burlington night. A large crowd is expected to attend from here on that evening.

The force in the county clerk's office was kept busy the latter part of last week mailing tags to owners of dogs in different parts of the county. This was caused by running out of tags, but the clerk now has a fresh supply on hand.

 Your Conversation *****
"ATONEMENT"

Instances of the combination of words to form new terms are comparatively rare in the English language. We have such an instance in the word "atonement." "Atonement" does not appear in the Bible, but is a religious term which has been invented to express the doctrine that the crucifixion has made possible the forgiveness of sin. "Atonement" is composed of the three syllables, "at," "one" and "ment." It means reconciliation.

Wisely and impatiently the city or town dweller's fancy turns to visions of vacation days spent in the country or in the wilderness where there is no need to be dressed up. The annual wanderlust finds her considering the wherewithal she shall be clothed for camping, hiking, fishing, mountain climbing or long motor tours. This question has been settled once for all by those who have worn the practical and slightly service suits designed for outdoor pastimes. A flannel blouse, a pair of khaki knickers that button below the knees, a soft felt or fabric hat and a sturdy topcoat of khaki or tweed make up an outfit that is equal to all sorts of outdoorings. An example of such a suit is shown here and it is worn with woolen stockings and laced sport shoes that match it in sturdiness.

DEAN JAMES E. LOUGH

Dean James E. Lough of the University of New York is head of the "traveling college" which is taking a large number of students to Europe this summer. The dean will also be director of the "around-the-world college" which will sail from New York in September with 450 American college boys on a 250-day cruise, studying and reciting en route. Their work will be accredited by lending universities and colleges.

THE ART PRESERVATIVE

Printing has commonly been called "the art of preservation." Perhaps some have not quite understood why such a term should be applied. They might get some suggestions by studying recent news from the excavators who are now finding such remarkable discoveries at Kesh in old Mesopotamia, illustrating the customs of the Sumerian people about 5500 years ago.

The relics of that time show a high state of civilization. It suggests that the people of those remote days were very much the same as those of present times, that relics are found of women's hand mirrors, vanity cases, manicure sets, etc.

In many respects it would be found that the manners of those times were equally advanced. How required so much sophistication, was blotted out, until the memory of its ways was almost obliterated?

The answer is, that they did not have the arts of writing and printing. They made records in those days, consisting chiefly of marks on blocks of stone and various kinds of material. But such records are clumsy and inconvenient to handle. Civilization did not become permanent until the arts of writing and printing became common, by which people could record their achievements and ideas on something of the nature of paper, which could easily be handled and passed down from one generation to the next.

Printing is still the great art that preserves every form of human activity. If people in Boone county would form an organization to accomplish certain ends, it is the art of printing that tells the story of it, and keeps it going. Without the records spread by the art of printing through the newspapers, enthusiasm for public causes would soon disappear.

MONEY NOT ONLY GOAL

Many contented small town people will tell their friends that altho they never have gotten rich in their simple homes, yet they would never go elsewhere if they had the chance. They find in the friendships of their home circles something far better than they could find elsewhere.

Kind, friendly, and sympathizing neighbors are something that money can not buy. It is a wonderful thing to have congenial people around you, use the good folks of Boone county. You are in Boone county. You are wonderfully ready with practical assistance. If things are a bit quiet and dull, you will find plenty of friends here who will do pleasant things with you. Many who have left the county and gone elsewhere never found anything to take the place of these conditions.

Its remarkable the punishment some automobiles can stand on the road and in the repair shop.

A reasonable degree of laziness seems a large portion of the recipe for happiness.

PULLING TOGETHER

Many of the faults of country towns have been due merely to the fact that the people in those communities would not harmonize and work together.

For instance, it has happened in thousands of these towns that where there would have been justification in starting one church only yet there were three or four. Or if two churches might have survived, there might be five or six. The result would be that little feeble organizations would struggle along, no one of them being a big and strong movement.

They would have paid meager salaries to ministers, with the result that if they got a good man, he had no inducement to stay there long. It would be such a struggle to keep up the church buildings, that these structures would have a decadent air, which does not help draw the people.

The same spirit is manifested in many lines of effort. If people wanted to get up social affairs, they would often organize them among some narrow little clique, while many who might just as well be included would be left out. That would promote lines of division.

Or if it was proposed to organize a movement for improved local government, lower taxes, etc., meetings would frequently be called of representatives of some one element only. Those who were not invited to join would feel that somehow the movement was aimed at them, or that their assistance was not wanted and they would fall into an attitude of opposition. Then the town would be split into factions, and the spirit of strife would fill the air, while the ends of the movement would often be forgotten.

Those old feelings are not much heard of now in a good town.

Waste nothing, as nature wastes nothing. Have you ever stopped to think of it? Not a single dead leaf is wasted; it goes to enrich the soil for future growth. Not a drop of water that is not used again and again; flowing down the river to the sea only to be caught up by the sun and showered down upon the grass and trees again. The law of God is the law of thrift, for the economy of God is one of striking features of the universe; and no man transgresses that law either in his personal or business affairs without incurring a penalty.

WAITING ONE'S TURN

It is a quite common thing, when one is waiting in a line before some ticket window or elsewhere, to see someone come up to a personal acquaintance pretty well up in that line, and ask such a one to buy the desired ticket for this late comer, when really such a one should take a place at the foot of the line and wait. But some folks always have a smart way of getting ahead of the general run of the public.

If a woman was hurrying home to look after a sick child or had some similar reason for haste, she could be excused for thus cutting in. But as a usual thing there is no such reason. The people who thus take advantage give an impression of bad manners.

It is the mark of ladies and gentlemen that would rather wait than show any trace of discourtesy. Those who are willing to take their regular turn can feel satisfaction at the thought that they possess better breeding. Of course many people will do these pushing things as a result of mere thoughtlessness, and the suggestion to such that they are not manifesting perfect courtesy may lead them to avoid these ways in future.

Money may talk but it never talks back.

BUSINESS TRAINING

Many of our young folks are thinking about getting into business. Some of them are dreaming if mingling to some bigger place.

If that is their ambition, how can they do any better, than wait their chance for a job in one of the stores in Boone county? Our merchants are always looking for bright young people. Boys and girls that go to work for them get a good all-around training. They learn the different parts of the business much better than they would in a big city store, where they would be put to work on just one thing. The result is that young people trained in our stores are given a splendid start on a successful career, which will fit them for achievement here or elsewhere.

CASH VALUE OF EDUCATION

A university professor made a study of the lives of a number of men in the light of their school training and arrived at the conclusion, which is open to debate, that a high school course has a cash value of $35,000 and a college course $72,000.

While we would not minimize the value of an education, it would be foolhardy for one past the school age, to become discouraged by these arbitrary figures.

They strike an average. No one should lose sight of the fact that a man or woman adequately equipped for life from the standpoint of an education, may be a dismal failure.

And men and women without any schooling of any consequence have attained great heights in life.

Nothing will take the place of hard work and strict application to the task in hand. While education is of great value, when properly applied, it is not the supreme thing in a successful life.

Moral advice will not always save the young crowd from mischief, but giving them a base ball and bat may divert their minds from the same.

If more business men would advertise their goods, not so many would have to advertise sales in bankruptcy later.

Now if the boys will show as much energy in building the cook-stove fire as they do on the camp fire, it will cheer up the home folks.

If this blockade of Rum Row continues, many citizens will have to drink water, but it won't hurt them one bit.

Fishermen not supposed to be getting much nowadays. Probably the fish have all read these newspaper articles about being buncoed.

BAD NEWS AND GOOD NEWS.

Bad news travels with the speed of a bird and good news like a snail. Let a man be converted to a church service or perform some act of kindness. Not much of a news item, but let him commit a crime and the news leaps by word of mouth from one end of the community to the other.

How thoughtlessly unkind we are sometimes to our neighbors and friends meet with misfortune! Troubles are bound to come to us all in some shape or form and what we say about friends and acquaintances today may apply to us tomorrow. News is no respecter of persons.

We are prone to regard the ways of others not our ways when we would be watching our own step. What folks say of one another frequently hurts more than anything that could have done. News, especially bad, grows and becomes exaggerated and distorted with peddling. When the news is good, it makes no difference what version is given to it. But bad news, given wings may bring sorrow and ruin upon people who are not deserving of a punishment beyond the penalty the mistake costs.

More charity for others will mean more charity for ourselves, and we will gradually come to take a keener delight in reporting something good of some person than something bad. Good is constructive; bad is destructive. Just before you are about to let out a bit of bad news, stop and think of the harm it may do. See if you can't think of something good to say in place of it. The chances are that you can—and will.

SOUND REASONING

Communities grow only in proportion to the support they receive from the people who make up the community.

Boone county has no chance to improve in quality and size by the inhabitants investing their money or buying the necessities of life in other localities.

People who cling to the misguided policy of "doing better" away from home often lose dollars in trying to save pennies.

The home merchant is honest and offers honest values. He might be otherwise, though he might be inclined to. He depends for his living from the community which he serves and he must give the community what it wants at a fair price.

When you are tempted to trade outside and buy something "just as good" at lower prices you should think twice before acting. If you are disappointed in merchandise bought at home, you can always get an adjustment. The merchant himself may have been cheated and he is generally willing to take the loss rather than have a dissatisfied customer.

But the out-of-town merchant is not personally interested in you. His only hope is to sell you once and he does not have to take precautions to preserve your good will. More than owing it to you, community trade at home, thus keeping your money in circulation at home, you should give the home merchant the first opportunity to serve you, from a sound economic viewpoint.

A DISGRACEFUL PERFORMANCE

William Jennings Bryan abruptly left the stage amid boos and hisses before concluding an address before Brown university students at Providence, R. I., who did not agree with his arguments against evolution.

Mr. Bryan was quoted as saying that he had paid his own expenses to Providence, to "bring his gospel of faith to Brown students," and when he was not given the consideration befitting one of his experience and ability, he can not be honestly criticized for retiring unceremoniously.

Mr. Bryan was chastened when a Brown student, during a question period, publicly admitted that he did not believe in the Bible. When another student stepped to the stage and propounded a question, the veteran political campaigner and public speaker declared he would have to retire "before this magnificent bubbling fountain of wisdom on my right."

However one may disagree with Mr. Bryan politically, his stand for the religion that has withstood the test of centuries is deserving of universal commendation. And the attitude of Brown student responsible for the inconsiderate treatment of Mr. Bryan should be severely censured.

For the welfare of the future generations, it is to be sincerely hoped that the sentiment of Brown students expressed at the Bryan meeting does not accurately represent the trend of college and university thought in the controversy between the fundamentalists and the evolutionists. If it does, there are many fathers and mothers who will hesitate to send their sons and daughters to college.

William A. Oldham, Arkansas Congressman and minority whip in the House of Representatives, is slated to succeed Clem C. Shaver of West Virginia as Chairman of the Democratic National Committee. It is understood here that Shaver will step down within the next month and that the election of Oldfield is assured. Oldfield is already chairman of the Congressional Campaign Committee, and probably will combine both jobs in the next congressional campaign. Under this leadership the Democrats will make a supreme effort to wrest control of the House from the Republicans. The Democratic party is now broke, the Oldfield will also be charged with the responsibility of raising enough money to finance the campaign. Shaver has expressed a desire to continue in the Chairmanship until the debts in the last national election are paid off. This he is now engaged in doing.

President Coolidge has been urged by some of his friends to take drastic measures against Americans in Europe, who, for their own glorification, have been advising the French people that the U. S. has no intention of forcing the payment of the billions of dollars of war debts owed by European nations. The president's attention has been called to an old federal law, enacted in the early days of the Republic, to prohibit American citizens from engaging in any activity with foreign powers which might obstruct the policies of the United States. The penalty is $5,000 fine and three years in federal prison. The Coolidge Administration is determined to collect foreign debts and much dissatisfaction has been aroused by the attitude of Americans abroad who have set out to hinder the Government.

Chairman O'Connor of the Shipping board has won out in his policy of getting rid of ships which the Government does not need. Scraping of two hundred ships has now been ordered by the board and bids for the sale will be opened shortly. O'Connor will endeavor to get Henry Ford and his associates to buy the ships, believing that much of the steel and other material in the vessels can be used in manufacture of automobiles. Ford is also expected to buy some of the better ships for trade purposes.

Governor General Leonard Wood of the Philippines has set out to raise a million dollars in the United States for the treatment and rehabilitation of inmates of the Filpino leper colony. There are about twelve thousand lepers in the Philippines and many marvelous cures of the dread disease are reported. The money collected under the direction of General Wood is to be used in building better homes for the lepers and to provide funds for expert technical assistance.

Secretary of Agriculture Jardine has issued an order for investigation of farming conditions in the Middle West. He will make a six week's tour of this region, stopping in many places for talks with farmers and stock raisers and to get their views with respect to what steps should be taken by the federal Government for the further aid of the agricultural industry. Secretary of Commerce Hoover will travel over the same territory a little later, but will give special attention to the drainage and reclamation developments in the mountain states and will combine this with a visit to his home in California.

The Amundsen airplane flight to the North Pole aroused keen interest in Washington, especially in view of the fact that a similar expedition is to be dispatched by the Navy Department, but with a giant dirigible instead of a heavier-than-air machine. The Navy's polar flight was planned more than a year ago, but never materialized. At that time only one ship was available, but now the United States has two—the Los Angeles and Shenandoah—either of which may be selected for the trip. The National Geographic Society of Washington is also sending an explorer to the pole in the person of Commander Donald McMillan, who will sail from Boston on June 7th.

BETTER MAILING

It was inevitable that we should have Better Mailing. There is no escaping, because anything so close to the people as the postal service would naturally reflect their weaknesses and be open to improvement.

The postoffice department has declared war on the "nixie," which in postoffice parlance is a piece of mail so carelessly addressed and wrapped that it can neither be delivered or returned to the sender. This was the object of Better Mailing week which was observed the first week in June.

The post office has the postal authorities hoped to impress on every one is that "every man knows his own address if not that of his correspondent." The same applies to women.

In other words, every individual can save money for the postoffice department by writing a return address on every piece of mail. The figures that the postoffice department has compiled are impressive. Twenty-one million letters could not be delivered last year due to insufficient address, no address at all or some other deficiency. One hundred thousand letters were mailed in blank space. Other short-comings of the public in this respect are:

That 805,000 parcels never reached the persons for whom the parcels were intended; that $55,000 in cash is removed annually from misdirected letters; that $12,000 in checks, money orders never reached recipients; that Uncle Sam collects $92,000 a year in postage for the return of mail sent to the dead letter office; that it costs Uncle Sam $1,740,000 each year to look up addresses on mail insufficiently addressed; that 200,000,000 letters annually require special attention because mailers are careless in the matter of addressing.

This is a waste that can be eliminated through cooperation of the people. Better Mailing week is used to concentrate attention on these facts. Practicing better mailing one will not overcome the trouble. It must become a habit to wrap parcels securely, address all mail legibly and correctly and put on a return address. Until then, the dead letter office will continue to be an institution and the taxpayers will continue to bear the burden of the needless expense that can be charged up to carelessness.

FACTIONALISM

The history of political parties demonstrates the danger of factionalism. Division in any organization, formed for political, civic or business purposes will bring disaster. It is too well known to require any argument, that a house divided against itself, can not stand, yet we see communities every day that are divided into cliques and factions that hinder their progress.

Business once taught that competition is the best means of giving service, and therefore the best means.

The same holds true with the working out of civic problems. If one man or group of men suggests some worthwhile improvement for the community, another group should not immediately take a position in opposition. The community that is so unfortunate as to have this condition existing is doomed to a bleak existence, with chances of getting ahead being practically eliminated.

And it should not be forgotten that a community is not bounded by the corporation line. A community extends to the most remote farm home that is linked with the town in social and business relationship. The problems of the rural section and the county seat or other trading center are not unlike in that each affects the other. Therefore their interests follow different lines is gradually being overcome, but occasional factionalism crops out, demonstrating that there are still many people who will not place community good above selfish individualism.

When we get the roads all paved, someone will be selling airplanes for a dollar down and a dollar a week.

DYING BOY TELLS OF PUNISHMENTINMATES SAY THEY WITNESSED FLOGGING CHARGED BY LOUISVILLE YOUTH

Subject Was Kicked and Struck, They Allege—Doctors Testify Carrico's Death Was From Disease, Not Cruel Treatment.

Lexington.—An investigation into the causes leading up to the death of the Good Samaritan Hospital here, May 23, of Thomas Edward Carrico, 18 years old, Louisville, an inmate at the Kentucky House of Reform at Greendale, was begun by the State Board of Charities and Correction and Maury Kemper, Commonwealth's Attorney, at the reform school.

Following a session lasting more than four hours, during which the testimony of two physicians, several inmates and the superintendent's stenographer was heard, the board adjourned until Maj. Mack J. Morgan, superintendent of the institution, will be heard.

The final statement of the Carrico boy, in which he gave a detailed account of a beating received at the hands of Lieut. F. Quinn, former military director and assistant superintendent at the institution, and subsequent punishment, was read by Mr. Kemper and the two physicians attending him testified as to the causes of his death and the absence of indications of undue punishment.

Several of the inmates, called to the stand, testified of witnessing the beating alleged to have been administered to young Carrico, and of beatings which they had received at the hands of Lieut. Quinn.

Dr. John Scott, Lexington, who treated the boy upon his admission to the hospital here, was the first witness called. He testified that he gave young Carrico a general physical examination, observed the condition of his whole body, made laboratory tests and came to the conclusion that he had died of chronic nephritis or Bright's disease and that his condition suggested that he had been suffering from the disease for several years. He said he was certain the boy had the disease for several months.

The only marks on the boy indicating any bodily harm received at the institution, Dr. Scott said, were two small bruised places, one on the thigh and one on the back. The bruise on the thigh was on the rear part of the hip. He said he did not believe that blows administered to him could have contributed materially to the advancement of his disease but that the exertion of long hours of standing at attention, if not allowed periods of rest, might have aggravated his condition.

Regardless of any treatment he might have received at the hands of Quinn, according to the physician, the boy "would have died just the same." The treatment he received at the reformatory did not cause his death, the doctor said.

The statement brought out the fact that Carrico was sent to the institution September 30, 1923, on a charge of breaking into a store and had been an inmate for twenty months when the statement was made.

His punishment at the hands of Quinn resulted from his hiding tobacco in the reformatory print shop, according to the statement.

"I went to the barracks January 5, 1925, for having tobacco," he said. "I got it from some other boys and hid it in the print shop. Another boy told Mr. Quinn."

"When they took us over there and beat us up they never laid hands on him. Mr. Quinn led me over there, (the barracks) and told me to take my clothes down. I took them off and he (Quinn) took his sweater off and told me to bend down and take hold of the bars. He hit me seventy-six licks with a strap four or five feet long and six inches wide. I asked him not to kick me but he kicked me as hard as a person could kick. He hit me three or four times with his fists on my face."

The beating lasted about twenty minutes, according to the statement. Carrico said he had been ruptured and was afraid Quinn would kick him in the rupture. He said Quinn told him he had to give him the tobacco and he did so.

Following the beating, according to the statement, Quinn locked Carrico in a cell for sixty-three days during which time he was forced to stand at attention, with his toes on a line and his arms behind him, from 9 o'clock in the morning until 7 o'clock at night with only twenty minutes for meals. He said he was supposed to get ten minutes of exercise every hour but sometimes did not get it. He said that Major Norman knew his treatment and that twenty-four cells were occupied at the time of his confinement.

Several boys testified they saw Quinn beat Carrico.

Georgetown Lifts Fraternity Ban. Georgetown.—The ban on fraternities at Georgetown College was lifted by a vote of the Board of Trustees. More than four years ago, following prolonged discussion, fraternities were denied the right to operate in the college. Up to that time the Beta Delta Chapter of Kappa Alpha, and the Alpha Lambda Chapter of Pi Kappa Alpha, had flourished. There has been extensive discussion of the matter among both students and alumni. Both fraternities and sportsmen will operate freely at the college.

PUBLIC WORK EXPECTED TO HELP UNEMPLOYED

PADUCAH, LEXINGTON AND LOUISVILLE MAIN FACTORS IN MUNICIPAL IMPROVEMENTS

Road Building, Sewers, Rail Shop, and City Hall To Be Built—75 Percent Of Work Figured To Be Finished During Present Year.

Louisville. — Highway construction and municipal improvements on a large scale throughout Kentucky during the summer are expected to absorb much of the present labor surplus in the state, a survey conducted by the United States Employment Service here indicates.

Road building contracts under way amount to $9,000,000 and another $2,000,000 will be spent for reconstruction and maintenance of highways in the state. Seventy-five per cent of the new work will be completed during the present calendar year if nothing interferes to delay the schedule, the employment service survey found.

Municipal improvements involving unusual amounts are under way in Paducah, Lexington and Louisville, the report said.

Paducah now has under construction a six million dollar railway shop and two locks and dams. Lock and dam No. 2 and lock and dam No. 3 each will cost about $3,000,000, and at Golconda, thirty miles above Paducah, dam No. 1 is under construction. A $900,000 expenditure for sewers and a $300,000 expenditure for an extension to the city water plant are contemplated. It was stated.

Lexington will spend $400,000 on a city hall and auditorium, the survey revealed, and $400,000 on sewers. Other improvements include installation of an incinerator costing $30,000, a sub-freight station valued at $20,000, and street improvements costing about $75,000. Small towns near Lexington plan municipal improvements which are expected to get under way soon.

In Louisville an elaborate system of grade crossing elimination will cost about $5,000,000, and another $3,000,000 is being spent in sewer construction already under way.

Repairs and reconstruction of city streets will amount to $1,000,000 and sixty new automatic traffic signals are to be added. A $1,000,000 tuberculosis hospital is being erected.

The city team will cost $300,000 and a new swimming pool to be built this summer is planned for $61,000. Waterfront improvements and extensions are under way, the school system is being enlarged and $250,000 trade school is to be established soon. Reports from Newport and Covington, Bowling Green, Henderson, Ashland, Hopkinsville, Madisonville and Frankfort assure a large amount of highway work and municipal construction work to local labor in each city. Some surplus now exists in each city, it was found.

RAIL PROJECT VETOED

Interstate Commerce Turns Down Proposed O. R. & C. Line.

Owensboro, Ky.—The news of the action of the official examiners of the Interstate Commerce Commission making an adverse report on the proposed Owensboro, Rockport and Chicago Railway was received with surprise and regret by some of the Owensboro promoters while others said they expected as much. Whether or not there will be application for a rehearing, was not indicated in Owensboro.

It has been pointed out that promoters must show the necessity for the railroad and the further fact that it will not become a pauper railroad but a safe investment for the stockholders.

It appears that the promoters have failed to convince the examiners on these essential requirements.

Circuit Docket Light In Scott Georgetown, Ky.—Circuit Court convened in Georgetown with Judge Ben Williams on the bench. The docket was one of the lightest in the history of the county. Most of the cases were defaults and common law suits with practically no cases of importance.

Mercer Women Jurors Honored Harrodsburg, Ky.—Judge Charles A. Hardin, presiding in Mercer Circuit Court, and Mrs. Hardin entertained the ten women who served on the grand and petit juries during this term of court with a luncheon at the Hotel Harrod.

Slayer Sentenced to Seven Years Cloverport—John Sipes, who was tried at the May term of Breckinridge Circuit Court, was given six years in the penitentiary when convicted of killing John Frank. He pleaded self-defense.

Boys Arrested In Marion Raid Marion, Ky.—Prohibition officers from Hopkinsville arrested two boys, Roy and Coy Gilliam, 16 and 21 years old, near Marion, six miles from Marion. The officers searched the motor for the boys were in and, it is reported, found twenty-five gallons of moonshine whiskey in the car. The officers took them to Hopkinsville. Herbert Cole also was arrested and lodged in the county jail by Sheriff James T. Wright. He is charged with deserting his wife and children.

MIDLAND TRAIL STARTS IN BATH COUNTY

WORK ON NEW ROAD WILL BEGIN AT OWINGSVILLE INSTEAD OF FARMERS

Allie W. Young, Morehead, Wins Fight Before Highway Commission After Lengthy Discussion—Fleming County Work Delayed.

Frankfort, Ky.—Behind closed doors, Allie W. Young, Morehead, won his fight before the Highway Commission to have the Midland Trail gap built from Owingsville toward Salt Lick instead of from Farmers toward Salt Lick. He had received less encouragement at a meeting two weeks when he proposed beginning at Owingsville instead of at Farmers, as the commission originally planned.

The minutes of the Highway Commission, which were released in a form chosen by the commission, said the proposition of Judge Young's delegation "was discussed at some length," "note" at the end of the part alluding to Mr. Young's visit read as follows:

"It was decided that construction of the Owingsville-Farmers section be started at Owingsville and extend as far as Ore Mines for the present, the remainder of the route to be selected later."

The department was instructed by the commission to inform Leon P. Lewis, attorney for the Kentucky Road Contractors' Association, that it believed it was within its rights by doing a Pendleton County project by force account. The department was instructed not to request a ruling from the attorney general on the matter. Mr. Lewis and Attorney General Frank E. Daugherty represent the commission and other State officials in a case now pending before the Court of Appeals, in which taxpayers are seeking an injunction to prevent the commission from using this year's road revenue to pay an old deficit of $3,500,000.

W. A. Duke, superintendent of equipment, was authorized to employ an additional clerk to assist him in keeping a file cost system.

S. M. Billiter of Billiter & Wiley, and J. S. Watkins, assistant highway engineer, disagreed over the methods and material used in construction of a project in Owen County. Mr. Billiter proposed that "snapping" would make a better base for the road than crushed stone. Mr. Watkins denied this contention. The name of E. N. Todd, State Highway Engineer, was not mentioned in this controversy.

The commission disposed of the disagreement by referring it to the engineering personnel of the department. Kenton County's proposition to reconstruct the Nicholson-Walton Road and the Piner-Bracht Road at the expense of the county, was accepted. Dr. H. M. Fultz, representative from Carter County, headed a Greenup County delegation that offered $100,000 of county money for the highway department to spend on the Greenup-Vanceburg Road. The road will be built three and one-half miles from Fullerton toward the Lewis County line and one and one-half miles from Greenup to Coal Branch.

A Fleming County delegation sought work on the Mayaville-Lexington Road in Fleming. Since the county has no money no work will be done, was the effect of the commission's decision. The minutes said: "The commission agreed that it could not do anything at this time inasmuch as the county of Fleming has no available funds and that it would be impossible for this project to be handled for another year."

SOMERSET LETS STREET CONTRACTS

New Paving To Be of Rock Asphalt And Concrete, Will Cost $200,000

Somerset, Ky.—The Somerset City Council awarded contracts for building permanent streets, concrete sidewalks and gutters in Somerset, which will represent an expenditure of approximately $200,000.

The Wilmore Construction Company, Harrodsburg, was the successful bidder on the greatest portion of the street work, which will be of rock asphalt. In the south end of Somerset, where the traffic is unusually heavy, concrete streets will be put down. This contract and the one for the concrete sidewalks, gutters and curbs, were awarded to the Foreman James Company of Obion, Tenn.

Work will be started immediately and the contract calls for the completion of the job in 150 working days. Sixty per cent of the cost will be borne by the property owners and 40 per cent by the city. The entire paving programme includes 74,000 square yards. Ten contractors bid on the work.

Fayette School Tax Rate Fixed Lexington.—The 1925 school tax rate for Fayette County was fixed at 30 cents on the $100 by the Fayette Fiscal Court. The rate is the same as was in effect last year. The rate is expected to produce approximately $145,000 available for the public schools of the county this year, based on approximately $20,000,000 worth of property taxable for this purpose. The action of the court was taken in answer to a request of the County Board of Education that the tax rate

KEEP UP THE MORALE

We have had a clean-up week in Kentucky. That does not signify that cleaning should be confined to one week. It should go on and on all summer for cleaning is a progressive movement.

A lick and a promise, the winter's collection of debris hauled away, and then complacently forgetting all about it—that is not a spring clean-up in any sense of the word.

If the morale of the home owner weakens, if the maintenance of epic and span premises is neglected, the one week's spring clean-up is little less than worthless.

Nothing wears out its welcome sooner than a cold wave when it's Billy, the young son of Mr. and Mrs. Grover Jarrell, who has been in a Cincinnati hospital for several months, was brought home last week.

It costs more to die than it does to live now. So take our advice and stay out of the hands of the undertaker if you don't want to be skinned and prodded.

Dr. Yelton fumigated the interior of the Farm Bureau last Friday in order to rid it of the fumes of the obnoxious gas left there by the gang of local loafers.

Mrs. J. B. Arvin left Sunday for a visit with her mother at Camp Bellevue. Her daughter, Miss Katherine, will spend her vacation in Louisville with her sister and other relatives.

Mrs. Eva Carver, of Petersburg, and formerly of Burlington, was taken to a Cincinnati hospital Monday where she submitted to an operation. At last report she was getting along nicely.

Since the meeting of the grand jury in April, twelve hundred owners of dogs have secured their licenses. There are about five hundred dogs that licenses have not been secured for.

Edward Easton, who lives down on Woolper creek, has harvested a nice crop of alfalfa hay—the first cutting. Mr. Easton believes in putting plenty of feed up for his stock.

A marriage license was issued last Saturday morning at the County Clerk's office to Charles E. Corbin, 27, son of J. L. and Lillie Corbin and Miss Myrtle Stephens, 21, the daughter of Wood and Edna Stephens, all of Florence.

Mrs. Edward Easton, of Woolper creek, sold to Dr. Yelton one day last week, a Mammoth Bronze turkey hen and thirty-two young turkeys for a handsome price. Since the frost nipped Doc's pole beans and morning glories, he has gone into the turkey business.

Mrs. Lillie Garr (nee Watts) formerly of Bullittsville neighborhood, but for some time has made her home at Erlanger, was operated upon last Thursday in a Cincinnati hospital for appendicitis. Her many friends in Boone county hope for her a speedy recovery.

Mrs. Irene Buchanan, (nee Alloway) widow of Sam C. Buchanan, many years a citizen of Petersburg and in the drug business, who has been in Norwood, Ohio, Thursday, June 4th. She is survived by several children.

The committee in charge of the dances at Florence Fair Grounds announces that last Thursday night 7:30 and end at 12:00 by old (Central Standard) time. They report splendid crowds each Saturday evening.

Another picnic at Harvest Home next Saturday evening. B. F. Zimmerman and H. L. McGlasson, who have charge of these affairs are making every effort to give those who attend good, clean entertainment and their crowds are increasing on that account.

In the death of Ex-Vice-President Thomas R. Marshall, last week, the nation has lost a highly beloved statesman, one who enjoyed the good will and high regard of people in all walks of life. Mr. Marshall served eight years as Vice-President during the two terms of Woodrow Wilson.

The Boone County Derby to be run on August 1, is not made up, as new entries are dropping in each week to contest for the different prizes. The primary is warming up with the weather, but so far the candidates are conducting their campaign on a high plane. Only three of the Magisterial Districts have candidates announced.

Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Elder went to a hospital in Cincinnati, one day last week, where they had their tonsils removed. Mr. and Mrs. Elder have been employed to teach in the Union High School this fall and winter, and will in a short time move with their family to that place. The citizens of Burlington regret very much to lose them, as they are splendid people.

It has been said that a gun is dangerous without lock, stock or barrel. Pretty much may be said of an auto. You never know what kind of a caper one of these animals is going to cut, nor when it is going to cut it and tumble down on you. Anyway, it is like a mule it is sure to kick you when you least expect it. If you don't believe this ask O. C. Hafer, of Hebron, who had to hike about half the distance between Hebron and Burlington last Friday morning.

The fine shower of rain which fell last Saturday, has revived the spirit of the farmers which had been running at a low ebb for some time. In some parts of the county the rain was heavy enough to produce a tobacco setting season. The drought which has prevailed in this county for the past month has caused destruction to pastures, meadows and growing crops. Stock water is scarce in many sections and many clinters are dry. If this drought continues much longer there will be more discouraged farmers than ever before.

SCHOOL EXAMINATIONS

It is a dread moment in the career of a student when he or she sits down in the examination room before a paper of tests, which must be passed if the student is to gain the desired promotion or secure entrance to some college or school. The best prepared student may feel the most nervous.

Many educators consider it as unsatisfactory method of testing their knowledge. But it does supply a measurement of ability of a student to pull himself together and make use of what he knows. A pupil who can pass good examination shows a resourcefulness that should help him think quickly and clearly in any emergency in which he may be placed.

Passing an examination ought not to depend merely on dates. Yet if a student is allowed to get by merely on ability to state a lot of remembered facts, like names and dates. Yet if a student is allowed to get by merely on general reflections, the tongue bluffers could spin a lot of "bull" without having done real work.

Easton Bros., garage has been given a coat of paint.

There is a demand for more hennies, but it men are said to be more common.

Awful quiet down in Washington nowadays, but anyway the clerks wake up once a day when it is time to go home.

INTERSTATE BUS TRAFFIC

Control by the federal government over interstate motor bus traffic is the next step in the solution of the transportation problem that has arisen out of the growth of motor bus for freight and passenger service.

Indiana has had some experience to show that control by the interstate commerce commission is essential, just as it has been in the case of interurbans and railroads.

The conflicting interests of states will not admit satisfactory settlement of the problem. This was made plain when Indiana truck drivers were arrested upon entering Ohio for driving without a license. This is especially serious for communities near state lines where trucks and buses are restricted in their operations unless some equitable arrangement is made.

A recent decision of the United States Supreme court has left states powerless to prohibit interstate bus operation and the interstate commerce commission holds that it is powerless to control bus transportation.

The supreme court says it is a matter for federal action. Therefore it is clearly the duty of congress to bring buses under control, as many states have.

NO PROXIES WANTED

No concrete plan as a basis for discussion of the settlement, question with France has yet been reached.

After reaching a basis for discussion, there would be tedious and long drawn-out conversations between representatives of the two countries.

At best, the French war debt dispute seems no nearer settlement than it did immediately after the war ended.

The French, we are told, want to find a formula that will reconcile the wide difference between public opinion on the question in France and this country.

The method of liquidation most favored in France is to make payments contingent upon the amounts received from Germany.

This is manifestly not in harmony with American thought on the subject. The United States intends to hold France strictly accountable for its war debt.

Shouldering the responsibility for payment into the shoulders of a German Government, even as feeble as the French, would be a feeble attempt to collect by proxy that would end disastrously for this country.

DELINQUENT PARENTS

Five school boys and five girls, some of them under high school age, were found guilty of delinquency in a big city juvenile court. They had participated in a "wild" party at the fashionable apartment of one of the boy's parents.

It developed that the mother of the fifteen-year-old host was in Florida and his father was out of the city on business.

The only error was that the children were found guilty of delinquency, instead of the parents.

Parents who permit boys and girls of this age to remain away from home all night, or permit them to have possession of their home without any supervision, are delinquent.

Such parents should be amenable to the law. If they feel no responsibility for the moral welfare of their children they do not deserve the privilege of rearing children.

The law says that men and women shall support their children and give them the necessities of life, but they may permit boys and girls to grow up as moral proverbs to prey upon society when they become mature men and women.

The county road force are improving the Bellevue pike greatly.

DELIVER CREAM OFTEN

Farmers complain of fluctuating weights of cream during the warm weather. Likewise they often notice an increase or decrease in the volume of cream in the can from one separation to another. These changes are caused by a certain yeast organism, says the Kentucky Experiment Station. The remedy is to keep cream cool and deliver it frequently, twice a week, if possible. Cooling cream and keeping it cool until marketed will control the development of these organisms and avoid loss and damage for the producer, the railroads and the creameries. Yeasty cream boils out of the can, causing a weight shortage for the producer. It besmears station platforms and baggage cars, and causes butter to score so low that it cannot compete with the product of other states. Keep cream cool and deliver it often.

SECTIONAL UNITY

It was a matter of very deep regret in past years, to many citizens both North and South, to see any remnant of feeling left over from the great Civil War that so sorrowfully divided the country sixty years ago. Fortunately that feeling has gone, and we are all glad of the many kindly expressions of sentiment made on our National Memorial day to indicate that those old differences have all been forgiven, and that we now have one country which is pursuing the same ideals.

It is a very fine thing when the Blue and the Gray unite in these Decoration day exercises, and join in lauding the valor and the spirit of self sacrifice that was manifested on both sides of that line. We have every noble country, but to preserve its unity and its mutual affection, we must all be tolerant of different sections, and not pronounce harsh opinions, in which we may deem to be their error.

QUICK—OR DEAD?

Is your child quick—or dead? This is the rather pertinent inquiry or a warning issued in connection with National Safety Week. The reason for it is: Of 19,000 persons killed by automobiles in the United States in 1924, 5,700 were children.

The assumption then is that the child that is not quick on the alert every moment of time spent on the streets, is of few years on earth.

Reckless autoists take this terrible toll of child life, and since they are not being curbed very rapidly, it behooves parents to use the greatest precautions in guarding their children against such an untimely death.

A study of statistics regarding this phase of automobile fatalities shows that the overwhelming majority of youngsters are killed while running errands or going to and from school. The loss of life among children playing in the streets is comparatively small.

No community escapes the blight of this ever present menace. Though accidents are less numerous in small towns, they are no less in proportion to population than in the large cities.

Though speeding, reckless automobile drivers may be punished, the vengeance of the law will not bring back the little life that might have been spared, had more care been exercised.

Work on the new bank building is progressing nicely.

During the war we had shortages of many kinds of staples, but now the principal shortage reported is that of cash.

That four legged boy who was born in Bulgaria recently will need them all dodging automobiles if he comes to this country.

JUNE STARS

June, the month of brides, is the one in which to look for the Big Dipper high in the western sky, with the end of the handle nearly due north.

Whether the dipper has any significance, appearing as it does in June, the accepted time for romance and marriage, is not known, but it must be acknowledged that a dipper might be considered in the light of household equipment.

However, the star gazers tell us that dipper as used in his connection is not related in any sense with the well known kitchen implement but that it gets its name from the fact that it is shaped like a dipper. The central star in this constellation is Botes, which is generally spoken of as The Herdsman and is also known as the Oxdriver, who is supposed to be driving the seven plough oxen, as the seven stars of the Big Dipper were also known, around the north pole of the heavens.

June nights are splendid nights for communing with the stars. The Big Dipper will form an interesting study for those who are interested in the starry heavens and like to gaze at them and let their imagination roam at will in trying to fathom the intriguing mysteries which they conceal.

Sensitiveness to Weather

A lady remarks, that when a certain friend of hers gets up in the morning and finds it is raining, she will stay abed all day.

A traveling salesman also says that he finds it very hard to sell goods in rainy weather. He thinks many men are depressed by such atmospheric conditions, and take a less hopeful view of their situation and will not buy.

It seems foolish for people thus to be influenced by exterior circumstances. Healthy persons at least should have such a natural confidence and buoyancy that any old weather would look good to their hopeful feelings.

"Carrying a state" may give a candidate the headache, as former vice president Thomas R. Marshall said recently, but failure to carry it gives him the headache.

Notwithstanding the general complaint of slow business reports from 253 of the most important centers, made to the Federal Reserve Board show that the total volume of business for the week ending May 20, 1925 was nearly fifteen hundred millions of dollars greater than for the same week in 1924. The largest increases are shown in New York, Boston, Chicago, Philadelphia, San Francisco, Cleveland and New Orleans, in the order named.

In Indiana the liquor buyer has been put in the same boat with the liquor seller, and they will have to sink or swim together.

NOTICE

Contrary to reports which are being circulated, I wish to state that I am in the race for Sheriff supporting the interests of no other candidate than R. Lee Huey, and I further wish to state that I am in to stay and expect to win. I take this opportunity of thanking all my friends for the support they have rendered thus far in the race.

TEN YEARS OF RURAL
ADVERTISING PAYSU. S. Rubber Co. Celebrates Tenth Anniversary of Rural Adv.

In 1915 there were 2,445,666 automobiles in this country.

It seemed a tremendous number. Some people were already talking about "the saturation point" being not far ahead.

But if there were some men who couldn't see the woods for the trees there were others whose faith never faltered.

It took a lot of vision for them to see that the true market for automobiles had hardly been touched.

It took a lot of courage for them to bank on the ultimate success of the automobile in that market.

They had both.

Back in 1915, the United States Rubber Company said "The real future of the automobile is not in the big cities but away from them."

It is not in short runs on city streets, but in mile after mile on country roads.

So back in 1915 the United States Rubber Company began to prepare for this movement—and to help it.

In 1915—ten years ago—the first U. S. Tire advertising began to appear in the "home town" papers.

Few people saw these papers in their true dimension.

Few realized the influence they had on what the people thought and did and wore and bought. Because few people realized the place they filled in the minds and lives of their readers.

The United States Rubber Company

As clearly as it saw that the development of the automobile would be in the smaller communities, it saw that the people in these communities would have to have tires to measure up to the service and tire merchants to sell them.

And it saw that in the "home town" newspapers it had ready to hand, the medium to help it place its merchandising where it would have to be in the new era of the automobile.

So ten years ago people began to read the first U. S. Tire Advertising in their "home town" papers—under the name of their "home town" dealer.

They have been reading it ever since.

They have seen these home dealers develop their little "side line of tires" into real business—always with the support of U. S. Tire Advertising in these local papers.

Co-incidental with the tenth anniversary of "home town" advertising by the United States Rubber Company, this company announces another long step forward in the perfection of automobile tires—the greatest since the introduction of the cord tire itself in its perfected Latex treated—Web Cord Royal Balloon Tire with the flat low pressure tread.

Today there are 16,000,000 automobiles in this country.

80 per cent are owned by men and women on the farms and in the smaller communities.

Where there was one U. S. tire dealer in the small towns there are hundreds today—real merchants.

What was only a vision in 1915 has come true in 1925.

IT PAYS TO ADVERTISE

Judge J. M. Lassing is thoroughly convinced that it pays to advertise. Last week he placed the following in our classified column: "Wanted—Good Jersey cow, not too old, fresh and gentle." Before the ink had set on the paper the cow had been purchased and delivered, but that did not end it with the Judge. Since the papers have reached over 3,000 subscribers he has received 2700 telephone calls from persons who have cows to sell. The Judge is in the market for a 125 pound hog, but he is afraid to advertise the fact.

THAT OLD SILVER DOLLAR

An editor has been inspired, after looking over his list of delinquent subscribers, to compose the following:

"How dear to our heart is the old silver dollar when some kind subscriber presents it to view; the Liberty head without necktie or collar, and all the strange things which to us seem so new; the wide-spreading eagle, the arrows below it, the stars and the words with the strange things they tell; the coin of our fathers, we're glad that we knew it, for some time or other 'twill come in right well; the spread-eagle dollar, the star spangled dollar, the old silver dollar we all love so well."—The Troy Times.

The total mileage of surfaced roads in the United States at the close of 1924 is estimated in a report just issued by the Department of Agriculture at 540,000 to 475,000. Approximately 40,000 miles of surfaced roads of various types have been built each year since 1921.

SUCCESS OF BUSINESS
UP TO THE FARMERSSays Speaker at Recent Meeting of Kentucky Bankers Ass'n

The business men of Kentucky must realize that their prosperity is dependent directly upon the prosperity of those engaged in agriculture, said D. H. Otis, of Wisconsin, director of the agricultural commission of the American Bankers' Association, at the recent meeting of 250 bankers at the Experiment Station at Lexington.

He pointed out that the 270,000 farms in Kentucky are capitalized at $1,500,000,000 against an investment of $270,000,000 in the industries of the state. The value of industrial products is listed at $395,000,000, or $100,000,000 less than those of agriculture.

Agriculture predominates with such large figures no one can question but that bankers, business men, and even professional men are vitally concerned with the prosperity of the farmers," Mr. Otis continued.

"Even with the large valuation of their agricultural products, Kentucky still has great opportunities for development. Kentucky is producing only 75 per cent of the food and feed she needs for her own use. She is sending out of the state annually $125,000,000 for food and feed. A large part of this might with improved methods be kept within the borders of the state."

Mr. Otis said that bankers are in a strategic position to influence the development of agriculture in their communities. "The banker may properly be considered the team mate of the farmer," he said, "and as such must work in perfect harmony. Economic conditions demand it. The work is too heavy for one. It requires a team. The interdependence of the banker and farmer is so close that self-preservation demands that they pull together. If they don't, we all fail."

"Whatever encouragements may have been, Kentucky bankers should not lose faith in the outcome of agricultural development. Conditions are improving. We must pin our faith to agriculture."

REV. A. B. WOOD IS ENGAGED AS PASTOROf Burlington Baptist Church
Succeed Rev. W. W. Adams

The membership of the local Baptist church has extended a call to Rev. A. B. Wood, of Louisville, who will be the regular pastor of the church, preaching here every Sunday in the month.

The church has been without a regular pastor since the departure of Rev. Adams some weeks ago, although Rev. Wood and one or two other ministers have occupied the pulpit from time to time. Rev. Wood is a very capable man and has made a splendid impression on the community, consisting of the number of times he has been here, and with the proper cooperation will, in all probability, be successful.

He will move to Burlington this week and will occupy rooms in Mrs. Bess Kelly's residence.

JOHN M. STEPHENS DEAD

John M. Stephens passed away at Lakeland Asylum Tuesday at noon and the remains were forwarded to Walton where they were received by Undertaker Philip Taliaferro and removed to the home of Mrs. Bessie Duvall of Elmore.

Funeral services were conducted Thursday afternoon at 2 o'clock at the Union Baptist church by Rev. A. J. Miller, after which he was interred in the Union cemetery.

THOSE WHO DROPPED OUT

As commencement time comes in schools and colleges, many students who had to quit earlier in their courses because of the need for money, or because of their own inattention or for various reasons, will feel sentiments of regret that they could not stand up with these young people and receive these honors.

In the majority of cases those who dropped out made a mistake. Yet they can console themselves with the thought that all mistakes can be retrieved if one makes the effort.

It is never too late to learn. Many who have missed a college or high school education, have made up for these lacks by their constant search for information. By wide reading, by seeking the society of well informed people, by attending lectures and discussions, they have finally become better informed than many supposedly educated people. But it takes persistent purpose to achieve that result.

Rock is being hauled and put on the Linburg and Hebron pike. This piece of road is badly in need of repair.

ERLANGER WOMAN DIES
AFTER SHORT ILLNESSMary A. Coe, Wife of Late Thomas
A. Coe, Passes Away June 10

Mrs. Mary A. Coe, wife of the late Thomas A. Coe, passed away at her home in Erlanger at four o'clock on Wednesday morning after a short illness. Funeral services were conducted at the Methodist church at 2 p. m., Friday by the Rev. Cardwell, assisted by Revs. Stone and Hall, after which she was laid to rest in the Highland cemetery.

Mrs. Coe was a daughter of the late Dr. Thomas J. Orr, one of Cincinnati's early physicians. She was a sister of the late Dr. Geo. B. Orr and a granddaughter of the late Philip and Hannah Grandin. The old homestead of the Orr's stood at the corner of Seventh and Walnut streets and was a landmark for many years.

Her six grandsons acted as pallbearers. Mrs. Coe is survived by three daughters, Mrs. Nelson High of Cincinnati, Mrs. Eugene Little of Ft. Mitchell and Miss Anna Coe of Erlanger, besides two sons Geo. and Walter Coe of Erlanger.

Undertaker Philip Taliaferro had charge of the funeral arrangements.

FRUIT CROPS WILL BE SMALLER THIS YEARCountry As A Whole Will Yield
Small Amount of Fruit

Only fair crops of apples, peaches and pears are now expected in the United States this year, Department of Agriculture crop officials declared today. Frosts in late May reduced prospects in many scattered sections, particularly in some of the central states, Virginia, Michigan and portions of New York.

The condition of apples on June 1 was nearly 10 per cent below the usual average on that date. The northwestern states expect more apples than were picked last year, but for the country as a whole the crop seems likely to be lighter, although much depends on the rainfall during the next few months.

Peach production shows a large increase in California where most of the crop is canned or dried, but in practically all other important states the crop is expected to be substantially smaller than last year. Even in Georgia, where many young trees are coming into bearing, the crop is expected to be less than 7,000,000 bushels compared with 8,333,000 bushels last year.

The pear crop also is reported on only fair this year. California alone among the important producing states expecting materially larger crops than in the preceding season.

CONSERVATORY STUDENT TO SPECIALIZE IN VIOLIN

Miss Mary Louise Renaker, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. B. Renaker, Burlington, has entered the Cincinnati Conservatory of Music where she will further her studies in music and will specialize in violin.

In addition to the regular work that she will take up at the conservatory, an opportunity to listen to many concerts and splendid performances will also be afforded her during this summer in the city of Cincinnati.

The Cincinnati Conservatory is one of the largest and best known musical institutions in the country and musicians of both national and international reputations are on its faculty.

Miss Renaker will study violin under the direction of Miss Etelka Evans while at the conservatory.

GOING BAREFOOT

About this time in many families, the kids used annually to plead for a chance to go barefoot. It was so cool and delightful in hot weather. If they came to a stream of water, they could plunge in without having to waste their valuable time removing shoes and stockings. They could make wonderful time running over the soft country roads and grass of those days.

There were sorrowful times when the kids used to get slivers in their feet. But as a whole the children liked it, and the parents were not indifferent to saving in shoe leather.

Many parents who went that way as children would be fearful now that they would be regarded as suffering from poverty. If they sent their offspring out that way, we have to keep up appearances, and the essential usefulness of our doings has to give way to style. However, it would be hard on the shoe trade if this fad returned, and modern streets and walks might produce many sore feet.

The state road crew is making rapid progress with the Florence and Burlington pike.

BIRTHDAY SURPRISE IS

The guests present were as follows: W. L. Kirkpatrick and daughter, Miss Georgie, Mr. and Mrs. Fitzhugh Tanner, Mr. and Mrs. H. L. Tanner, W. P. Beemon and family, Harry Dinn and family, Mr. and Mrs. F. E. Eason, Mr. and Mrs. William Snyder, Geo. Bradford and family, Mr. Owen Aylor, Mrs. Annie Beemon and family, Etta, Laura, Joshua and Clint Beemon, Stanley Easton and Everett Hayes.

The guests had a delightful day and enjoyed every minute of the time until late in the afternoon when all departed wishing Mr. Ross many more happy birthdays.

FATHER'S DAY WILL BE OBSERVED SUNDAYDate For National Observance Definitely Settled as June 21

The mix-up of the dates for the national observance of Father's Day has been definitely settled for June 21st.

At Christmas time we go about wishing every one a Merry Christmas and best wishes for a Happy New Year. On Mother's Day we acknowledge the fact that her life is one eternal sacrifice to her children. But there's a father.

Nobody needs father any more than they would a battered old cash register that was only good for a touch when you needed it. Many a dad has grown despondent and a little bitter as he looks at his children to whom he has given his very life's blood and who give him very little in return. Everything he makes goes to the family. Took on extra work to send the boys and girls through college. He may be a little shabby but the girls have new party frocks. Life isn't very gay for him. No romance. No thrill. So far as he can see he is just the children's father and a money-making machine.

But suppose on this day his wife told him how she appreciated the never-ending work, the never ending sacrifices he makes to keep her and the children safe in the home nest. He would purr like a cat if his girls would tell him how much they love him, and if the boy would say he was the best man he ever knew. It would make his heart sing for joy and hedge the rugged path with roses. Surely on this day we might well express our love and appreciation for his thousand acts of kindness to us.

Who is it wears the patch work hose and seldom goes to picture shows that his girl may have fine clothes, It's Father!

Who is it wears last summer's hat and thinks his boy may be a sports rider. And thinks it's quite all right at that. It's Father!

Who is it buys the bread and meat who keeps the shoes on our feet and then gets shoved in a back seat, It's Father!

We've Mother's Day and Poppy Day, and lots of other holidays. But almost all are Labor Days, For Father!

Get out his slippers and easy chair. Caress and smooth his rumpled hair. And let him know you're glad he's there—Your Father!

Today wear a flower red (A white one if the dear soul's dead) And reverently bow your head. In thanks for such a Father!

BARNYARD GOLF

L. C. Weaver and Albert Pettit the local champions in the noble pastime of "barnyard golf" (better known as horseshoe pitching) journeyed down in Rabbit Hash neighborhood last Sunday afternoon and Oth Hubbard, the "champs" of that vicinity in a series of games. Weaver and Pettit came out victorious, winning 16 games to their opponents 10. The four men obtained 89, 88, 82 and 68 ringers respectively. The local boys now claim the county championship.

C. Weaver and Dr. Yelton are the champion marble "Getters" in this section, and if there are any in the county who think they can beat them, broadcast the fact over the radio.

JUDGE N. E. RIDDELL
SEEKS RE-ELECTIONPresent County Judge Announces
This Week For Re-Election

In this issue of the RECORDER may be found the announcement of N. E. Riddell for County Judge of Boone county.

Judge Riddell needs no introduction to the voters of this county as he was born here and has spent his entire active life serving its people in some capacity or other. Judge Riddell's first political venture was in 1904 when he was a candidate for County Attorney with Hon. D. E. Castleman, now of Erlanger, as his opponent. This race was one of the most spirited campaigns ever conducted in this county and is still recalled by all who were voters at that time. Judge Riddell was victorious and since that time has not had opposition for public office.

On account of physical ailments it would have been his preference to retire from public life at this time, but he has yielded to the urgent demands of those who have the best interests of the county at heart when he makes his announcement.

He has served the taxpayers of this county most capably and unselfishly and his record speaks for itself.

FORTY HEAD OF JERSEY
CATTLE TO BE SOLDBoone County Jersey Cattle Club
To Stage Big Sale, June 22

The Boone County Jersey Cattle Club will hold the second annual sale of fancy Jerseys at the Florence Fair Grounds next Monday, June 22. This sale was well attended last year and highly successful in every way, and everything points to a bigger and better sale this year. The members of this club have improved the class of their cattle each year until they are recognized all over the country as being the very best.

Forty cattle will be sold representing the herds of S. B. Ryle, Grant J. W. Scott, Florence, H. Ryle and son, Grant, Hafer Bros., Hebron, Robt. Hafer Hebron, E. Y. Randall, Petersburg, Ryle Bros., Grant, J. L. Kite Burlington and W. G. Kite, Burlington. Some will also be sold from the herds of J. V. Hood, Vinton, Ia., and Mrs. Fannie Rouse of Crittenden, Ky.

Col. D. L. Perry, of Columbus, O., who is reported to be the best cattle auctioneer in the country, will sell the cattle.

AUTO TURNS OVER BUT OCCUPANTS UNINJURED

Monday about noon J. S. Cason, daughter and son, Miss Dorothy and James, left Burlington in their auto for Florence and just at the edge of town the machine went over the bank turning completely around, upsetting the occupants out, but fortunately all escaped injury. The auto was badly wrecked. They returned to town and Mr. Cason, who was anxious to catch a train, secured another machine and immediately left for Florence again. Just how the machine turned over and headed in the opposite direction from which it was going is a mystery.

ARRESTED IN LOUISVILLE

George Boyd, charged with forging the name of Howe Cleek, of the Beaver Lick neighborhood to a check for $300.00 was lodged in the Burlington jail, Tuesday afternoon by Sheriff Hume, who arrested the young man in Louisville and brought him to Burlington.

Edwin R. Duncan, of the U. S. Navy arrived home Tuesday to visit his parents, Dr. and Mrs. E. W. Duncan.

THIRD JUNIOR WEEK
IS VERY SUCCESSFULBoone County Boys and Girls Gain
Prominence at Lexington

The third Junior Week held at the University of Kentucky was the largest and best ever witnessed. Over 500 boys and girls from practically every county of our commonwealth attended with their Home Agents, County Agents and Local Leaders. Boone county was represented by fourteen boys and girls. Mrs. J. W. Early of Petersburg and Mr. and Mrs. R. J. Matson, our boys and girls received many compliments during the week, and proved themselves an outstanding group. They furnished all the music for the week, which was reported very good.

Following are some clippings from the Lexington Herald:

Music Is Feature

"The famous Boone county farm boys' and girls' orchestra, under the direction of Mrs. J. W. Early, furnished music at the morning convocation. Miss Kathryn Clure also, of Boone county played the piano while the 400 boys and girls sang club songs and also a piano solo."

History of Orchestra

"Billy Elder, of the Boone county orchestra, gave a history of the orchestra at the morning convocation, where the musicians entertained the club members. He also presented the members, who are Sue Bristow, Roy Bachelor, Harold Weaver, Hubert Townsend, Laverne Sullivan, Wm. Townsend, Paul Hafer, Dorothy Jane Hood, Viola Graves, Harold Aylor, and Kathryn Clure. Mrs. J. W. Early is director."

Harold Weaver and Paul Hafer played a saxophone and violin duet, and Viola Graves a piano solo, at the morning convocation.

The musical ability of the Boone county delegation helped the Mohawk tribe win the singing contest. Conducted by Mrs. Susan K. Slaughter Wednesday evening. The 425 juniors were divided into four tribes. The winners were directed by County Agent R. J. Matson of Boone county, assisted by Mrs. Early. Fannie Berkshire, a Boone county girl, led the Mohawk tribe in the singing of "America the Beautiful." "The Kentucky Junior Clubs" and "Smiles." Ten gallons of ice cream comprised the reward for the winning singers."

Mr. Matson our County Agent has led the winning tribe for the last two years.

Laverne Sullivan and William Townsend put on a Farm practice Demonstration "Fitting the Dairy Calf for Show" and won twelfth place among 22 contestants for which they won $10 in money. They also competed for the free trip to the National Dairy Show at Indianapolis and came in second place. Shelby county won first and the free trip.

Ava Lou Hudson of Walton was given a free trip by the L. & N. Railroad. Ava Lou has been an outstanding Club member, winning twelfth among 240 boys at the Live Stock Judging Contest at Louisville State Fair and first among girls contestants. This year she has sold enough sheep and lambs to pay her first year through college.

Harold Aylor, the crack fiddler of the Union Club was given a free trip by Liggett & Myers Tobacco Co. He has been a winner in the poultry show for several years but promises to be an even better musician than a poultry raiser.

The RECORDER wishes to congratulate these boys and girls for the good work, as it is to them, that we must look for the future agriculture of Boone county.

WORKING ON TAX BOOKS

The County Clerk and deputy are busy making out the tax books for the Sheriff. When the taxpayers pay their taxes next fall they will discover that the size of their tax receipt has been also increased in size as heretofore. If a fellow is fortunate enough to get two or three of them he will have enough to paper a good sized room. Nothing like getting all you can these days for your money.

HER 92ND BIRTHDAY

Mrs. Lavinia Kirkpatrick and daughter Miss Bess, were visiting relatives in Milan Indiana, last Sunday. Mrs. Kirkpatrick's mother Mrs. Utz was celebrating her 92nd birthday anniversary. Mr. and Mrs. Lou Schields, of Florence, also accompanied them on the trip. There were about thirty children and grandchildren of Mrs. Utz who were present at the celebration.

34 KILLING CASES UNTRIED IN BELL COURT

NO MURDER HEARINGS DURING ENTIRE TERM OF THREE WEEKS

Judge's Order Book Fails to Show Why Trials are Passed—Many Get Continuances.

Pineville—Thirty-four men and women, accused of murder, went untried at the last term of the Bell Circuit court. Not a murder case was tried during the three-week term.

Nearly half the indictments were more than two years old. Several were five or six years old. Some of the cases had been on the docket more than four years without trial.

The court orders, in most instances, fail to show the cause of continuance. In some cases, the absence of Commonwealth witnesses, in other cases the absence of defense witnesses, are set forth as grounds for continuances.

A study of the murder indictments reveals a "system" by which prosecution is "worn out" in the court. Absent witnesses and lack of preparation on the part of the Commonwealth are contributing factors.

For instance, two of the murder cases have been continued time and again because the court had failed to notify the Governor of Judge J. J. Forester's disqualification.

Notable among the murder cases which have been pending several years is an indictment against T. I. Green. While Judge Forester was serving as Commonwealth's Attorney a Bell county grand jury indicted Green in February, 1919, charging murder.

R. B. Golden, who became Commonwealth's Attorney in January, 1922, was attorney for Green before that time. Since Mr. Golden took office the Commonwealth, so far as the order book shows, has never been ready for a trial. At least, there has never been a trial of the case during Mr. Golden's tenure in office.

Another case which has attracted wide interest because of the long delay is that of John Rooney, indicted on a charge of murder. Rooney has been in jail at Pineville and Middleboro since August, 1922, awaiting trial. Because Judge Forester was Commonwealth's Attorney when the indictment was returned it is necessary that a special judge be appointed by the Governor.

Mr. Golden was also interested in the Rooney case before he took office as Commonwealth's Attorney, having been employed to assist in the prosecution. Rooney has been denied bail, and has waited nearly three years in jail. Two convictions against Rooney prior to his last trial, in August, 1922, were reversed by the Court of Appeals.

Isom Alder was indicted February 6, 1919, on a charge of murder. More than six years have passed and Alder has never been tried. For more than two years Alder was a fugitive, but during the last four he has been under the jurisdiction of this court.

Eljah Lewis and Harvey Miracle were indicted on murder charges in June, 1922. After the case dragged two years without trial, Mr. Golden, in June, 1924, dismissed the indictment against Miracle. The indictment against Lewis is still pending, and there has never been a trial in the case.

The oldest indictment among the batch is against J. D. Colson, returned May 27, 1914. For several years Colson was a fugitive, but was finally located and brought back. One day while Colson was in the jail at Middleboro, as the jailer started to open the door, a fire alarm sounded out in town. The jailer went to the fire, leaving the keys in the door. Colson reached through the bars, turned the key, threw them out of reach of the other prisoners, and left. He has never been located since.

POISONER AROUSES BARREN

Bodies of Animals Strawn on Banks of Creek—Citizens Seek Offender.

Glasgow—Residents along Fallen Timber and Skeggs Creek are indignant over the wholesale poisoning of dogs and wild animals in that section. The bodies of the animals are found lying along the banks of the creek. Efforts are being made to find out the person or persons who spread the poison.

A local paper says: There is a heavy penalty for crime such as this. But in this instance the poisoner himself should be made to eat a big dose of the stuff he is putting out and his body should then be hauled out on the bluff to rot with the bodies that strew its surface. To make matters worse, it is a great place where sportsmen go to fish and swim.

Governor Grants Pardons to Two. Frankfort—Two pardons, recommended, it was stated, by the trial judge and Commonwealth's attorney, were granted by Governor W. J. Fields. Arley Selver, 18 years old, sentenced to sixty days and fined $300 for selling liquor in Harlan, was pardoned on condition that he refrain from further violations and join his father in Colorado. Both father and son are afflicted with epilepsy. "Tom" Selver, 21 years old, was sentenced to sixty days for petit larceny, for which he was pardoned.

DAIRY FACTS

CARE AND FEED FOR COWS WHEN CALVING

Cows that are to calve should be provided with a comfortable and well-bedded stall. It is imperative that the cow be moving freely before calving time. Laxative feeds such as a mixture of two parts bran and one part linseed meal should be fed. If the cow still remains more or less constipated give a drachm of epsom salts, or a dose of one quart of linseed oil. A number of troubles which usually occur about calving time can be prevented by proper feeding and care before freshening.

During calving time the cow should not be disturbed except in the case of abnormal birth. During the first days after calving she must be protected from cold and her drinking water should be given at a lukewarm temperature. The vitality of the cow is very low at this time, and careful and thorough berthing is necessary. The feed must be rather limited in amount. Good quality legume hay, a little silage, and bran makes make a satisfactory ration at this time. Watch the high producing cow for milk fever, and if it occurs resort to the air treatment.

A little time is all that it takes to figure out a good balanced ration. It will be found to be a good investment of time when the increased milk flow is measured. Cows in milk need plenty of protein and mineral matter. These can be obtained within the limits of economic production.

A good cow is a good worker, and a good worker needs plenty to eat. Alfalfa hay at will, silage, and grain in accordance with the amount of milk given should be fed. Each cow should be fed individually. A herdman can estimate the amount of milk and the condition of the cow. The grain can be increased as long as the milk flow increases. If the cow starts to put on flesh, it is an indication of too much feed.

Succession is necessary. This can be obtained by corn silage in winter and a permanent pasture in the summer.

If the grain mixture is too heavy a bulky feed like wheat bran or dried beet pulp should be added.—B. W. Fairbanks, Colorado Agricultural College.

Warning Against Buying Inferior Dairy Cattle

From many states there are now coming warnings against buying inferior dairy cattle for unreliable parties. The good price of dairy products, coming at a time when farm prices in general were depressed, has been largely responsible for the increased demand for dairy cows. The work of testing for tuberculosis is also responsible for considerable demand to replace animals reacting to the test. In Illinois approximately 1,000 dairy cattle are being tested every day, of which some 58 head react and have to be killed. Other states report similar progress.

Unscrupulous cattle dealers, in order to profit by the brisk trade, are buying culls in the stock yards and shipping them back to the farmers. According to M. H. Peterson, head of the tuberculosis eradication department of the Illinois Agricultural Association, "many unsuspecting farmers have bought diseased animals 'plugged' so full of tuberculin that when they are tested for importation into the state, there is no apparent reaction."

Nebraska recently issued a warning signed by prominent farmers and agricultural authorities against the crooked dealer. Fred Ferguson, dairy expert of Iowa, not long ago sent a similar warning to be posted in every bank of Iowa. Closer contact with farmers and local breeding associations will help. Those entering the dairy business for the first time can well afford to pay a neighbor or friend they know is reliable and is acquainted with the business, to help them buy animals. And by all means, make sure of the reliability of all parties selling cattle before buying.

High Temperature Tends to Encourage Bacteria

Even with reasonable precautions to exclude bacteria from cream, a considerable number will always be present. If the cream is left uncollected these multiply rapidly, soon spoiling the cream. Dr. H. W. Conn of Connecticut has found that one bacterium in milk kept at a temperature of 50 degrees Fahrenheit for 24 hours will multiply to seven, while one bacterium in milk kept at a temperature of 70 degrees for 24 hours will multiply to 700. At higher temperatures the increase is correspondingly greater.

Oats for Dairy Cows

Oats are considered, especially when mixed with other grain, as the best feed for dairy cows. Grain alone is not good feed. A good grain ration to feed dairy cows consists of 200 pounds ground corn, 200 pounds ground oats, 200 pounds bran and 100 pounds oil-meal. Give each animal 1 pound of the mixture for every 84 pounds of milk produced. Oats alone will not dry up a cow, in fact a few fed oats will do better than she would if not so fed.

A POETIC ACCOUNT OF JUNIOR WEEK

Here is a contributed account in poem and blank verse from the pen of Mrs. J. W. Early, of Petersburg, depicting the experiences of the Boone county tribe at Lexington last week.

Mrs. Early directed the orchestra. And was leader in general, ably assisted County Agent R. J. Matson and wife.

The second and final installment will appear next week. The first follows:

Some fifteen of us via truck, men or less of us in the air according to luck; Roughness and smoothness but mostly gladness characterized the trip; singing and laughter the following after of Mr. Matson and wife, and stopping to sip, down o'er the bridges, up o'er the ridges; the smellin' of clover, the almost turnin' over, the whirling and passin' the constant akin, just where we were, Boone and Kenton, and then we went on to Grant and Pendleton; finally stopped at Paris. (Harrison) it began to dawn upon us that we'd left the hills behind and that straight ahead of us the road was very fine; the blue grass fields like ocean when stirred to quiet motion invited us to Lexington where in seventeen seventy five the Pioneers, hunters made their camp and called it Lexington; the flags and banners flyin' all over town we thought were for us, but found out later we were the drop in the bucket proverbial, as they did not even know us; we would sorry for bed and room—we could none too soon dreamless rest, then breakfast; and we were ready for the day with the band to play a merry tune from old Boone, I mean the band and not the tune; now convocation and organization, the boys and girls demonstration, the assignin' of classes to lads and lassies fill the day; but when the sun sinks low in the west, and if you ask me which time is the best why I'll say it is when the girls and boys begin to play; to play is fun for a dozen or one, but when there are four hundred or more then its fun and fun galore; and then supper, afterward vespers and then wherever we are, the same old skunks are chasin' the same old gang is racin' to get out of reach; folks are the same skunks are the same, whether up to Lexington or down at Pete, there I have given myself away and I'll not have anything more to say today.

BRACKEN PRINCE

Kentucky's great saddle bred premium winner and producer of Show Horses will make the coming season at Harold Gaines' Horse Farm at $20.00 insuring a living colt.

Columbus could be written about Prince. Will state a few outstanding facts. He is a full brother of Kate Hamilton, Kentucky's great show mare. Also sire of Helen Brannon, for which $9,000.00 was refused before her death. Prince's colts attract attention wherever shown and show marks of Prince.

A great opportunity to breed to a Real Saddle Stallion. For further information write or see Harold Gaines, Burlington, Ky., or Will S. Norris, Union Stock Yards, Cincinnati, Ohio.

HOW ADVERTISING STRIKES PEOPLE

It is always useful in trying to please the public, to note the kind of thing that seems to interest people. Our attention was called recently to a booklet issued for advertising purposes by the merchants of a certain prosperous city. In it were a large number of taking notices of various stores and services. One of the features of the thing consisted of extracts from various letters that had been written to the compilers of the pamphlet, describing how the advertising had helped the writers of such communications.

Here were among the remarks of "Your book is a real help to me, because it tells 'where and how and what.' 'I keep this book and use it for future reference when I shop.' 'I find that we really can get good service and bargains in this town as you say.' 'Before making purchases the first of the month, I wait for your booklet to come to help me.' 'My husband and I are trading with all the merchants in your book. It tends to strengthen the customer's belief in the merchant.' Two lines of thought are suggested by such testimonials. First, that advertising has a very great power over the public mind, more so than the average person realizes. A constantly increasing number of people are influenced in their buying habits by advertising.

Second, while any form of advertising that is truthful and intelligent will help a lot, there is no form of publicity that helps more than newspaper notices. The merchants of this county can get just the same results as followed from the publication of the booklet described above, from advertising in the Recorder. The newspaper is always ready to perform this service without delay. The merchant who wants to attract public attention can get the same right off by using the home newspaper.

YOUR HOME TOWN'S LACKS. All communities have defects. Nothing to cause alarm about that. The only question is as to whether people will continue to growl about those faults, or will they take hold and do something to remedy them?

Suppose you see something that ought to be done in your town. You are convinced that it would be practical for a place of this size. Will you just continually find fault about that thing, while doing nothing to remedy it? Or will you quietly suggest the idea to some one of the organizations of the community, to some committee or meeting of such organization? Tell the people you would be willing to work to improve matters in such a respect. If we had more people doing that, we would remedy many defects that could be removed.

SMALL TOWN CENTERS. Small town centers today are up against quite a problem. Such a center might get about all the trade of the surrounding territory 20 or even 10 years ago, before automobiles became so common. But today, many of them are losing quite a part of that trade, because the country people will take their automobiles and drive through these villages to some good sized city miles beyond.

Also the competition of the mail order business is felt by many small town merchants.

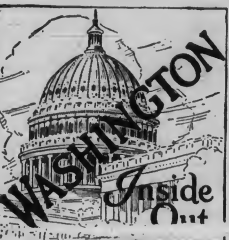

Much can be done by appealing to the spirit of home town loyalty. People can be shown that it is poor policy for them to send their money out of town if they can possibly help doing so.

Yet the predominating means by which the small town business men make good, is by convincing the country people that they do not better at their home stores.

It is less expensive to do business in the small town centers than it is in the larger places, so that the small town stores, if intelligently and efficiently run, should be able to make low prices. They can argue that it is in the larger places that they are in their own neighborhood, where it is easier for them to gain satisfaction if they get stuff that is not right.

But the merchants in these towns must depend more upon advertising than anything else to hold the trade that is in danger of going through to some bigger place, either by automobile trips, or by mail order purchase.

The mail order houses and city stores have built up their business as the result of advertising. The small town merchant must play the same game. He can not expect the people in the back country to patronize him, unless he proves that it is economical to buy of him. He has the goods and his prices are right, but he must demonstrate those truths to the people.

Naval Officials who were expecting to get large appropriations from the next Congress on the basis of threatened war in the Pacific are beginning to change their view since President Coolidge's address to the graduating class at the Naval Academy warning against any jungle talk on the part of officers of the Navy Department. The President believes that the Navy should be a great instrument of peace as well as war and that its functions should be taken care of with the least possible outlay of federal funds. The Navy's latest drive for funds is for the purpose of building additional bases in Hawaii. The reason given is that this American outpost should be made impregnable against capture by Japan in the event of hostilities in the Pacific.

The Government's biggest wartime ship-building establishment—Hog Island in Pennsylvania—is to go to the scrap heap along with two hundred ships which the Shipping Board has decided to sell. Bids for both the ships and the Hog Island Yard are to be opened at once.

Disturbances in China, in view of their similarity to the Boxer uprising are causing considerable concern among officials here. American lives and interests are guarded by American warships and Marines but reports to the State Department indicate that the communistic influence, suspected to come from Russia, is playing a leading part in the trouble with the possibility that it will be difficult to quell. All of the powers, including the United States, which have representative in China have united in formal demands on the Chinese authorities to extend every protection to foreigners. It appears from this distance, however, that the Chinese officials are having their hands full in even insuring protection for themselves.

While hoping there will be no strike in the anthracite coal fields this fall, Government officials are keeping a close watch on conditions in Pennsylvania, where the miners are understood to be preparing to ask a substantial wage increase at their next meeting the latter part of this month. Every effort will be made by the Department of Labor and the Coal Commission to adjust any differences which might arise so that a shut down in the coal mines may be prevented.

Secretary of the Navy Wilbur is bad again with the President—this time because he tried to get the President mixed up in a commercial moving picture being made at the U. S. Naval Academy. When the President heard about the plans he summoned the Naval Secretary and told him flatly that there was nothing doing—that he had no desire or inclination to be a movie star. To placate the movie people, with whom he had agreed to produce the President, Wilbur has to go to Annapolis himself and pass out a dummy diploma to the movie actor taking the part of a graduating midshipman. The separation of Colonel George Harvey from the editorial staff of the Washington Post was marked by the Administration's quick turn down of his suggestion that debt funding negotiations between the U. S. and France, be held in London. Harvey made the suggestion in one of his editorials, and the understanding was that he was sending up a balloon for the President. A different complexion was put on the situation, however, as soon as members of the American Debt Commission and the President advised the plan. Harvey left the Post, which had edited since his resignation as Ambassador to Great Britain, without announcing his future plans.

The world's first successful airplane will be placed in the National Museum here under an agreement being worked out between Orville Wright and officials of the Smithsonian Institution. Wright has balked against sending the plane here because the Museum already had the Langley plane designated as America's heavier-than-air machine. Langley made his flights in Virginia while connected with the Government here, but Wright insists that his brother and himself were the first to develop a real airplane which would carry passengers.

VICTORY FOR "BELL RINGERS"

House-to-house sales canvassers have been the bane of local tradesmen all over the country. They introduced an element of competition which was regarded as even worse than that of the big mail order houses. They paid no rent or taxes in the communities in which they operated, which gave them an advantage over the local storekeepers who did, and other things being equal, could and sometimes did undersell the latter. In a number of cases producers of household necessities intended to make merchandise made use of the canvassers and so gave the latter a recognized standing. But, the more this was done, the harder it made the competition for the local dealer.

To meet the objections of local shop-keepers, many cities and towns adopted ordinances intended to make the way of the canvasser difficult. The usual plan was the requiring of a special license and furnishing of a bond, things that were not demanded of the local dealer.

In a typical case of this kind which came before the Supreme Court of the United States, an appeal was adopted by the City of Portland, Oregon, a decision was rendered declaring such ordinances unconstitutional because discriminatory.

The result of the decision, it is said, will be to render invalid ordinances of 480 cities in 38 different States, and permit direct selling to more than $300,000,000 a year.

HOPE AND FEAR

The timidity of business men is one unfortunate feature of the present business situation, according to E. H. Gary, in his address as president of the American Iron and Steel Institute. He felt that they become too much alarmed when minor recessions appear.

No doubt the trouble is largely that our business men so dread anything like a repetition of the disastrous experiences following the deflation of 1920, that they often go to the extreme of caution.

The bubble that was blown up in 1920 was bigger than anything the American people ever knew before or are likely to again. That wild career of joy-riding will not return now. Those days when millions of people stopped asking the prices of goods will not occur again at present. Business men will not overstock themselves as they did at that time. Even if there are setbacks, they will be minor affairs. Here in Boone county there will be plenty of business for those who are energetic and hopeful.

Country Town Satisfaction

It is never worth while for a country town to feel that it must have all the city privileges. It has a multitude of advantages of its own, so it can well afford to be satisfied if in some respects it lacks the things that cities have.

It can get along very well if it does not have theaters and shows and dances and rounds of feverish gaiety every night. Those things pall on the taste. But it has comfortable homes, intimate friendships, pleasant society, enjoyment of natural beauty, wholesome food promoting physical health, etc. These are the really good gifts, and we should rejoice in such things and let the unattainable go. For if we reach out for things that big cities have, many substantial gifts now in our possession would slip away.

Police authorities in England are looking for a barber who has married a dozen well-to-do women the past two or three years. No one knows his right name. Some of these women married this Don Juan every two days of courtship, and all of them admit that they knew nothing about him. Women, as a rule, puts her whole stock of youth and beauty and joy into her marriage, but many of them pick a husband with less care than they use to buy a pair of shoes. A woman of mature experience advises: "Never marry until nothing else seems worth while"—but what's the use of advice?

THE ARMY OF THE UNEMPLOYED

By THOMAS ARKLE CLARK
Dean of the University of Illinois.

CLIFFORD was wanting to leave college, though he was doing well and was only in the middle of his junior year. His mother was a widow, he explained to me, and she was working hard. It was not that her work was unpleasant, or that the task she was performing was an undue tax upon her strength. Clifford did not like the idea of her working. It was a humiliation to him, and he felt that he should himself go to work at once and so be able to support the two of them.

"How old is your mother?" I asked. "Forty-eight."

"Is she well?"

"She is quite well and strong, and she doesn't mind working, only I don't like her having to do it. I'd rather she had nothing to do."

He had the idea that a person with nothing to do would be more respectable and happier than one who has a regular task to perform. Unemployment brings leisure, he argued, and leisure begets contentment.

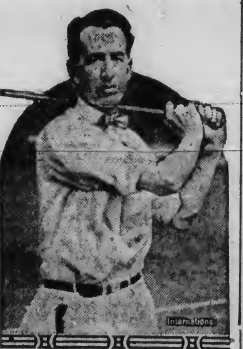

Quite the contrary is true. I know that many people look forward to the time when they will be through with their work, when they can give up business and retire to a life of ease and contentment and happiness, but such people, if they realize this ambition, have nothing to do, seldom find in complete leisure the joy and the contentment which they anticipated. I have known a few men who after a life of activity in business or in a profession gave up their work, retired and settled down to do nothing. They were in most cases unhappy and longed for the old activity to which they had been used. They had too much time to think, and thinking grew tiresome. Most of them, having no active interest left in life, folded their arms and died—died with a longing for something to do. The unemployed are seldom happy, whether this condition is the result of circumstances or of their own deliberate choice.

I sat for a time not long ago in a hotel filled with widows and maiden ladies, and wives without household obligations except to sew on a few buttons. They were waiting for an insertion for a guest towel or to knit a sweater to be laid away in tissue paper. They were to a woman gossip and critical and like a bunch of cats, ready to scratch over the first blow thrown into their midst. Not one of them was really happy, though each might have been had she had some definite and regular thing to do. They were all strong enough to work; some of them felt, perhaps, that they would have lost local prestige by doing so; some had no ambition. For none of them, unfortunately, was there any economic necessity, and so they continued in unemployed discontent.

Clifford's mother kept her job and was happy, and he finished his education.

KENTUCKY SCHOOL SYSTEM PRAISED

NEW INSTITUTIONS ARE GIVEN ACCREDITED RATING BY COLLEGE BODY

Requirements Listed—Of 2,000 Teachers in State, 80 Per Cent are College Graduates—425 More College Graduates Expected Soon.

Frankfort—There is much that is satisfactory and "a great deal more about which one should be encouraged in Kentucky's educational progress, J. B. Holloway, State High School Supervisor, and secretary of the accrediting committee of the State College Association declared here.

The committee had just finished its year's work and he announced the official list of accredited secondary schools of Kentucky. He reported excellent progress.

"There are about 2,000 teachers in the high schools of the State," he said. "More than 80 per cent are college graduates. There are 425 graduates coming from the colleges of the State, who will be available for new positions, and to take the places of those who are not graduates, thereby giving the non-graduate teachers an opportunity to complete their college courses."

There are fifty AA schools, eighty A schools, 170 B schools listed among the white public high schools. There are five A schools and five B schools listed among the negro schools.

There are seven AA schools, forty-five A schools and fourteen B schools listed among the private secondary schools of the State.

New AA schools for the year are: Public white high schools, four: J. M. Atherton, Louisville; Flemingsburg; Murray; Lancaster. Private secondary schools, one: Science Hill Academy, Shelbyville.

New A schools for the year are: Public white high schools, twenty-one: Albany, Benton, Bloomfield, Brooksville, Cadiz, Clarkson, Corbin, Dry Ridge, Hardinsburg, Knott County High School, Hindman; Knott County High School, Pippinsville; Liberty, Lynn, Groves, Munfordville, Paintsville, Pembroke, Russell, Shropshire, Slaughter, Van Lear, Warsaw.

Public colored high schools, two: Dunbar, Mayfield; Western, Owensboro.

Private secondary schools, four: Annville Institute, Annville; Altan Drew, Pine Ridge; Richmond School, Louisville; St. Stephens, Glasgow.

The Kentucky members are Prof. M. E. Ligon, chairman, University of Kentucky; Professor Crooks of Centre College; Prof. J. C. Lewis, Owensboro, and Prof. Holloway.

AA schools are those with teachers whose minimum scholastic attainments are equivalent to graduation from a college of the Southern Association; with laboratory and library facilities; under regular reported inspection.

A schools have an academic scholarship of teachers, two-thirds of whom have records equivalent to graduation from high school and two years' college work, with equipment for teaching science valued at $300 at least and 300 volumes in their libraries.

Princeton Blast Probe Is Failure.

Princeton—The Caldwell County grand jury finally adjourned here returning fourfold indictments. None charge complicity in the dynamiting of the courthouse. Numerous clues and rumors regarding the dynamiting outrage were ferreted out but the evidence was insufficient to warrant the finding of indictments. A reward of more than a thousand dollars has been offered for the conviction of the guilty in the dynamiting crime, $500 of it being offered by the Caldwell County Fiscal Court.

SAILLESS SAILING SHIP FOR FUTURE

New Invention Relies on Air for Power.

Berlin.—The sailing vessel of the future will be without sails if the new invention of Dr. Anton Flettner, known as the Flettner rotor, proves to be all that is claimed for it.

Instead of wooden masts, rigging and sails, the new equipment will consist only of metal masts, resembling smokestacks, revolved on their axis by a motor. Experiments with a 650-ton hull, fitted as above set forth, have shown that with one-fifth of the weight of the customary masts and sails the rotor ship can develop 15 times the wind power of the ordinary sailing vessel. The rotor ship does not have to be hauled out of the harbor by a tug—it starts the minute the cylinders, driven by a small Diesel motor, begin to rotate. This motor can be handled by one person on the bridge, and all the crew formerly necessary for sailing can be dispensed with. From an economic standpoint the inventor claims that from 30 to 80 per cent can be saved on fuel if the rotor device is installed.

The Hamburg-American line has ordered the construction of a 10,000-ton freighter which is to sail with rotors instead of sails, and the whole shipping world is inquiring into the adaptability of the invention to passenger ships.

The principle on which the new ship is based has been explained by Herr Freudenberg, Doctor Flettner's right-hand man, as follows:

Air Course Studied. "Supposing a current of air strikes a smooth cylinder, such as a smokestack or the cylinder of our rotor, what will happen? The air will pass to the right and to the left of the cylinder about evenly. Now suppose one-half of the cylinder were covered with some rough surface, such as sandpaper, what would happen?"

Current, following the lines of least resistance, would pass off toward the smooth side and only very little of it toward the roughened side.

"In other words, the air current will go where there is least resistance to it. Suppose next that we begin to turn the smooth cylinder by some mechanical means, such as a motor."

As it revolves, one side of it, the disappearing side as you look at it from the front, will be moving in the same direction in which the air current is moving, while the other side will run counter to the air current. Naturally the air, following the lines of least resistance, will pass off toward the side where the cylinder turns with the wind.

"It follows that if the cylinder is turned faster than the velocity of the wind there is absolutely no friction on the outside for the air, and the whole current will be deflected to the one side with such vehemence and with such crowding together of current that suction ensues on the side revolving with the wind, while on the side coming up against the wind a pressure against the cylinder is produced."

"This combination of suction on one side of the cylinder and of pressure on the other forces the ship forward and sails can be dispensed with."

Steel Supports Cylinders.

The revolving or rotating cylinders are mounted on strong masts of steel. In the case of the experimental ship, the Buckau, the steel masts projected above the deck for a distance of 40 feet, while the cylinders which are set upon the pivotal masts, like hoods, were 25 feet higher. They revolved about the pivots on ball bearings and turn noiselessly. The motor, using only 2 per cent of the power that would be needed to drive the ship with a propeller, can turn the cylinders at the rate of about 110 revolutions a minute. In the case of a sailing vessel therefore 98 per cent of the power is produced by the wind acting upon the cylinders, while only 2 per cent is contributed by the small motor that one person can attend to.

The rotor ship can be made to reverse its direction by merely reversing the motor. To turn the boat about, one cylinder is made to turn in one direction and the other in the opposite, just as in rowing one turns by pulling at one oar and pushing the other.

The fact that the changes of speed or the reversing of the motor can be done instantaneously, makes it possible for the new ship to ride a storm quite as easily as it moves in clear weather.

The Flettner people look upon the rotor ship as a mere beginning along the road of gaining energy from the air. Some day the wind may be giving heat, light and power, Doctor Flettner observes. He is therefore at work on the construction of a windmill or wind tower which, if perfected, will mean that the American farmer can reduce his coal bill to a minimum, and take energy out of the air. It will mean, the inventor declares, that flying across the ocean will become a simple thing, for instead of running the risk of getting out of fuel the aviator will draw his energy from the wind.

Radio Saves 700 Vessels

Neah Bay, Wash.—Between 700 and 800 vessels received information as to their location in foggy and stormy weather during the past six weeks by the radio-finding station on Vancouver Island. Nearly 200 requests came from captains who had ventured almost on the verge of shipwreck on the rocky reefs, proving the worth of the radio.

Col. Perry, one of the greatest auctioneers in the world, will cry the sale. Plan to hear him.

THE VENTURING SPIRIT

As many men grow older, they seem to lose willingness to take any kind of risk. They become so over cautious that their ability to make progress has stopped.

There are so many who are taking foolish risks with money all the time, that a general demand for a more venturesome spirit would no doubt do more harm than good. Those who lose money because of taking risks still exceed in number those who lose by too great caution.

But there is a strong tendency for people who at the outset were only reasonably cautious, to lose all initiative as they go on, so that their power for achievement has ceased. Faith is still necessary, and one must not fear misfortune so much as to lose all power of action.

Should The Gentle Sex Have a Voice In Political Affairs?

As it is near time for the Boone county election I think the above title an appropriate subject for my usual writing for these columns—a subject which has occupied the minds of the intelligent thinking class, and discussed with—to them a clear, positive elucidated and simple reason—by some, without apparent around the election polls—the atmosphere would be a little purer for them to breathe in, and well—there wouldn't be quite as much moonshine consumed—with the accessories of animal fighting and killing—as in the good old days of exclusive man power—so this class is boldly against all gentle sex aid and pure law enforcement—I hear that there is a gentleman neighbor friend who says he is not going to vote to support any of the Electoral candidates with the ladies—because the Bible is against it—which says that man is the Ruler over women, and she must be subject to His will, and he doesn't believe in women voting of taking an active part in politics anyway. I think my friend, if you will get out that old Bible and analyze the meaning of that quotation in its true sense you will see—that while the woman is to love, honor and obey the man, she is to look out for and protect her children too—and what greater protection could she give them to cast a vote for a good, honest, honorable and true officer of law to fill the vacant office, to protect her children—girls and boys—from others who are in crime—who if they do not commit crime upon them—will instigate a desire or an appetite in them and make them try to emulate and do even a worse crime against the Commonwealth of the State?

So then—we can easily see that "it is good" for men and women to get into the political field in the interest of securing the right kind of men in the political office—chairs—and if the ladies are qualified to fill the sedentary office chairs—without infringing or marring their "woman's modesty" which are their greatest charm and "hale" in if there are offices in this field we know that are unfit for women's gentle nature—there—you can protect not only your own loved boys and girls—but those of your neighbor and friends who are dear to you too—I think your action in this for such a reason—would be "backed" by your family Bibles. Where it censures and warns women to keep silent in the churches, is because no good comes from it. Take it in the sense of right and wrong—is it right for the mother of your boy to have all the care and trouble in raising him until he is that age—that he has the greatest desire and ambition to "run wild" into everything "good" or "bad"—and then tell her that she shall not have a voice in who is going to rule over him in the office in the political field?—I'll let your conscience answer this. So girls, you have a chance to do a great good now in aiding to select good, honest officers who will be an honor and glory not only to the community—but the county whom you will be proud to designate in the sense of possession—as our county officers—so use it.

Ransom Ryle, one of Boone county's stand-bys and all around good fellows, who follows the plow and kills tobacco worms when the sun does not shine too hot, left home one morning last week, just as Old Sol was peeping above the forest trees in the East, in order to believe the neighborhood about three miles away, to a cultivator with which to do a full day's work, requesting his good wife to have breakfast ready when he returned. He reached his destination in ample time and hooked to the cultivator and started for home, but his old neighbors learning he was in the neighborhood, were watching for him along the route, and being a man of a great deal of general information he was detained until the shades of evening had gathered over the earth, and the sun was disappearing behind the western hills, when all at once it dawned upon him that the day had about gone, and when within about one mile from home he unhooked from the cultivator which he left along the roadside and jumping astride of Old Dobbin, beat it for home, which he reached in time to help kill the cows and partake of a hearty supper which his better half had kept over from breakfast and dinner.

The average bill for electric lights and appliance operation in the American home is $25.00 a year.

The same home spends $95.00 a year for tobacco, and $88.00 a year for gasoline, $50.00 for ice cream, and $48.00 for candy.

If there is any moral to this, it is use more electricity—for the benefits of a well lighted and fully appliance home are not luxuries.

As a rule the newspaper is only a mirror of community life. It may be full of crime news and rank reading matter, but that is what you evidently want. When they are on the front page it is because more readers want them there. The new-age editor endeavors to give the people what they desire. He doesn't pose as pastor of the flock nor as a Sunday School teacher—he's just the mirror of your ideals. If that were not true he wouldn't be in business.

The number of people who hold decided opinions one way or the other on the subject of evolution, leads one to believe that schools and colleges have specialized in the subject for many years. The fact is, however, that most of us are talking about something we know very little about. The only way to acquire a simple understanding is to read some of the best books on both sides. After weighing the evidence your opinion may be just as sound as the other fellow's.

A new species of "safety-razor" hogs is said to have been cultivated in a southern state, but the hog we are most interested in is the guy who insists on keeping in the middle of the road, who pays no attention to crossings or intersections and always makes the other chap take the ditch on a narrow road. At this time of the year the road hog flourishes.

Where Scopes Case Will Be Tried

This is the county courthouse at Dayton, Tenn., where will be held the trial of John T. Scopes for violation of the Tennessee law forbidding the teaching of the theory of evolution in the public schools.

The cry of the business man that the government keep out of business has been cast into the air.

That business men representing an output of more than thirty billions dollars annually, have desks in the Department where they are conducting inquiries and seeking government aid. Farmers have evidently set a bad example in this particular.

Bill Bryan asserts that there is no such thing as evolution. Because men act like animals does not prove that their ancestors were animals, or because they drink ass's milk does not prove that man descended from the ass, nevertheless and notwithstanding the number of suckers who nibble on false oil and mining stocks also has been cast into the air.

This is a day of "fads." Last fall somebody started the yellow slicker craze. This was soon followed with all sorts of animal figures painted on the back. Then a dog collar was worn close around the necker at the throat. Then the more radical girls who rolled 'em for a while decided to go the limit and go barelegged, while the boys go hatless. Just what the next fad will be is hard to pre-dict—but it's got to be something startling to even interest the merry youth of today.

BULLITTSBURG CHURCH RE-DEDICATED SUNDAY

Is Quite A Contrast To A Similar Occasion That Was Held 106 Years Ago

Old Bullittsburg welcomed some three or four hundred twentieth century guests last Sunday, June 21st. The occasion was the re-dedication of the church as repaired and remodelled.

The ancient walls of this old structure, which itself is past 100 years of age, must have noted in this gathering quite a contrast to some of those it has witnessed in the past, for out in the old church yard the sacred silence was broken by the roaring of dozens of motors—six cylinder Buicks, Hudsons, Nashs and others of more or less magnitude were parked alongside of some old hitch-racks on which "Old Dobbin" was once free to rub his nose and rid himself of torturing flies.

On the inside modern electric fixtures were appended to the walls and ceilings where at one time a tallow candle was the only source of illumination. The notes of a modern piano could be heard in accompaniment to the verses of hymns, where at one time it was regarded as a sacrilege to play an organ—yes, those ancient walls must have noted quite a contrast to the assemblies of more than a hundred years ago.

The morning service was opened by the singing of the doxology, followed by invocation by the pastor, Rev. J. W. Campbell, after which were rendered other services. The choir including a beautiful vocal solo by Mrs. Flossie Campbell-Martin and a male quartet by Messrs. Berkshire, Riley, Campbell and Martin. Rev. Sleet, of Cincinnati, delivered the morning discourse and it was indeed splendid. Then the benediction and lunch.

In the afternoon were other musical numbers, an address by Rev. J. A. Lee, of Glenoco, followed by the dedicatory prayer by Rev. W. A. M. Wood, then dismissal. During the afternoon service a short history of the church was read by Rev. Campbell, which disclosed the fact that the church was organized in 1794; a building erected on the present site in 1797, and the present building constructed in 1819, which makes the Bullittsburg organization 131 years old, and the present structure 106 years of age, which, judging from appearances, is good for another century.

STATE ESTABLISHES NEW COLLEGE COURSE

New Four Year Course In Commercial Field At University

The following letter was received from Dr. Frank L. McVey, President of Kentucky University which is self explanatory.

Mr. R. E. Berkshire, Editor Boone County Recorder, Burlington, Kentucky,

My Dear Mr. Berkshire I take pleasure in calling your attention to the recent action of the Board of Trustees of the University of Kentucky.

In line with the calls for instruction in the field of Commerce and Administration the Board of Trustees has established a new college. This college will be open to students in Sept. The curriculum is four years in length and presents subjects in Accounts, Economics, Commerce, Business, Insurance and Administration.

The purpose in establishing the college at the University is to give opportunity to boys and girls of Kentucky to prepare themselves for industrial and business openings. Kentucky is going ahead industrially and the University of Kentucky feels the obligation to make provision for such training. The purpose is to make the instruction thorough and effective, and to that end, the staff has been increased materially and enlarged quarters provided for the new college. The curriculum is well worked out and the instruction will be maintained on a high standard of excellence.

Those who are interested are invited to address Dr. Edward West, University of Kentucky, Lexington, Kentucky.

Very Truly Yours, FRANK L. McVEY, President

Mr. Edward Johnson of Liberty, Indiana, spent the week-end with J. T. Stephenson and family, motoring his way through to Florida. He is a nephew of Mr. Stephenson's. Miss Marie Stephenson accompanied him as far as Paris, Ky., for a few days stay.

FLOATING DISTILLERY RAIDED BY OFFICERS

Sheriff and Deputies Locate and Raid House Boat Which Accidentally Burns

Sheriff B. B. Hume and deputies Snyder and Uitz raided a moonshine shanty-boat near Taylorsport last Wednesday evening.

It seems that Sheriff Hume and Snyder had a warrant for a man on a certain described house boat to answer another charge and Tuesday morning while hunting this man they discovered another house boat, but upon nearing it they smelled mash and knew that it would be useless to attempt to capture the operators of the outfit in day light they returned to Burlington intending to attempt a capture that night.

A heavy rain prevented their returning Tuesday night but the next night Sheriff Hume with deputies Snyder and Uitz returned to the scene secured a skiff and rowed out to the "floating distillery."

Luckily for the owners however they happened not to be home, but there were 15 barrels, some filled with mash, and a complete distillation outfit on board.

"To make a long story short," as the old expression goes, the boat accidentally caught fire and burned clear to the water line before the officers left the scene.

Editors Note—For definite information concerning the fire call at Sheriff's office.

SUMMER SCHOOL MUCH LARGER AT GEORGETOWN

Attendance One Hundred Per Cent Greater Than Last Year

Georgetown, Ky., June 20.—Enrollment in the third Summer School of Georgetown College which opened Wednesday showed an increase of approximately 100 per cent over that of last year, which in turn was more than 100 per cent larger than that of the first year.

Of the 122 students enrolled for collegiate work, seventy-one have been in attendance at the regular sessions of the college, while forty-one are new registrations. In addition there are twenty-two students in the preparatory department.

According to Judson A. Tolman, director of the Summer Session, college credit will be given in the eight departments offering college work and provision has been made whereby the student may receive three full semester hours' credit.

Classes have been arranged so that each afternoon as well as the entire day Saturday may be devoted to recreation. Swimming, boating, hiking and tennis are the popular sports.

A seven day chautauqua program will be given on the campus during the summer season. The Georgetown Assembly, under the direction of the Rev. C. W. Elsey, D. D., of Lexington, will hold its meeting in the college from June 3 to July 23.

PLAY IS POSTPONED BECAUSE OF ACCIDENT

Miss Emma Nixon Is The Victim Of "Unfortunate Calamity" Friday Afternoon

The play entitled "A Fortunate Calamity," which was to have been staged by the Petersburg Circle Girls last Friday evening, was necessarily postponed to an indefinite date, due to an "unfortunate calamity" which befell one of the characters on the day it was to have been played. Miss Emma Nixon, one of the leading characters, was accidentally thrown from the running board of a machine, driven by Mrs. Walter Gaines and fell with such force that her collar bone was broken and she was otherwise bruised and injured very badly. It is thought however that she will eventually entirely recover.

Miss Emma was a member of the 1925 graduating class of Petersburg High School and intends to enter Transylvania this fall. She is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Nixon.

POUND PARTY

The members of the local Baptist church completely surprised their new pastor Rev. A. B. Wood and wife last Saturday evening with an old fashioned "pound party." Immediately following prayer meeting service, Rev. Wood and wife were summoned to the basement of the church where a table in the center of the room was laden with "pounds" of every thing. Bro. Wood is said to be seriously contemplating the opening of a wholesale sugar house since the party.

Formerly our national motto was "In God we trust," but now it seems to be "Let George do it."

KENTUCKY BOY WINS NATIONAL CONTEST

Spelling Contest at Washington Won By Frank Neuhauser of Louisville, Ky.

Frank Neuhauser, eleven-year-old school boy of Louisville, Ky., is the national juvenile spelling champion because he was able to spell "gladious" after Edna Stover, 11 of Trenton, N. J., had spelled it with a "y" instead of an "i." Young Neuhauser won the title at Washington in the finals of a national contest sponsored by newspapers. The $500 he received, along with a gold medal, will be used for a college education, he said. About 2,000,000 school children were entered in the contest in sectional contests.

The nine finalists laughed at the easy words pronounced for them during the first half hour of the spelling bee. At the end of that time all were taking the hurdles easily and then Almeda Zennington, Houston, Texas, fell out on the word "Skithlath." "Cosmos" proved the undoing of Mary Coddens of South Bend, Ind., and Loren Mackey of Oklahoma, State champion, failed on "Propeller." Ten-year-old Patrick Kelly, orphan of New Haven, Conn., stumbled on "Blackguard," and "Statisticians" baffled Dorothy Karick of Detroit. Then Mary Daniel and Helen Fischer tripped on "Valuing" and "Moribund" respectively, and the contest was between the first and second prize winners.

Frank Neuhauser, winner of the national spelling "bee" at Washington contested by two million public school children, is only 11 years old, will finish his graded school work next year and will enter high school while still 12 years old. All admit the fact that he lost a full year of schooling as a result of a long illness of two years ago.

CATTLE BRING GOOD PRICES AT FLORENCE

Boone County Jersey Cattle Club Sale Held at Florence Tues.

A splendid crowd attended the Boone county Jersey Cattle Club sale at Florence Fair Grounds last Monday. Prominent cattle owners and breeders from many points in Kentucky, Indiana and Ohio were present and participated in the bidding, which was spirited.

Lunch was served at 11:30 a. m., by the Union P. T. A. and it is reported that they made a neat profit for their efforts. Music was furnished by the Hebron and Union orchestras, and their efforts were highly appreciated and contributed much to the success of the sale from the standpoint of entertainment.

The record price for the sale was paid for Fancy Eva L. 434.881, belonging to E. Y. Randall, Burlington. This cow was purchased by Joe Morris, of Westerville, Ohio, for $250 and it is reported that he afterwards resold her for $375, altho this report has not been confirmed.

Other individuals bringing $200 or better, were Jolly's Sweet Maiden #215 owned by J. W. Scott, of Florence; Majesty's Fairy of Grove-land, $205, owned by Robert Hafer, of Hebron; and Baronette's Darling $200, owned by Mrs. Fannie Rouse, of Crittenden, Ky.

There were 35 individuals sold, sold, including calves and heifers, bringing a total of $3640, an average of $104 per head.

BURGLARS CAUGHT AT ERLANGER SAT.

Man and Wife Are Arrested and Placed in Jail For Robbery

Deputy Sheriff Thomas Percival of Walton, received a telephone call Saturday evening notifying him of a robbery which occurred at the home of Eugene Foltz on the Dixie Highway near Richmond.

He caught the parties so charged just as they were crossing the railroad in Erlanger. They gave their names as Chas. and Lettie Myers, man and wife of Asheville, N. C., and said that they had walked the entire distance, having just run out of money, which they gave as their motive for the house-breaking.

They obtained from the house two suits of clothes, one pair of shoes, and $10.75 in money. Upon searching the culprits the officer also found four watches, two razors, one bracelet and a 32-caliber revolver. They were lodged in jail at 8:30 p. m., Saturday evening, where they will await trial.

Campaign For New Burley Sign-Up To Be Inaugurated

PETERSBURG DEFEATED BURLINGTON SATURDAY

Petersburg 13, Burlington 1, Came At Hebron Won By Hebron By Big Score

Burlington journeyed to Petersburg last Saturday where they engaged that team on the village greenward in a hectic struggle. We think "hectic" is the correct word here because we heard all the Burlington rooters exclaim "oh, heck" at numerous intervals, and it was fitting and proper that they should, for they had traveled roughly and far to see their favorites licked by the top-sided score of 13 to 1. The "one" was a home run by Roberts in the first inning, which almost caused Mathews, Petersburg center fielder, to break his neck.

Ruth, a veteran of twenty seasons, hurled the pellet for Petersburg and "Pete" Brady started for Burlington. Brady stayed long enough for John Leasing, Jr., to get his uniform on, but the score was rather lop-sided before John could perform this feat. Leasing fanned 12 batters in the five innings he pitched, and the game might have been much more interesting had he started in the box.

The two teams met at Burlington next Saturday, with better base ball on the part of the locals at least in order.

Hebron "threw the hooks" into the Bellevue club at Bellevue last Saturday in real one-sided fashion according to "Hebron." Both clubs were "shootin'" for "Little Joe" with the Bellevue club unable to make the point, as Joe Brady opposed Joe Bullock in the box, with Brady having one of his worst and Bullock one of his best days in his pitching career. Only four balls were hit to the out field off the Bullock delivery, while Brady was wild and ineffective, which is unusual for him. These two clubs will engage each other again at Hebron next Saturday when a lively contest is expected.

MORE DAIRY COWS ARE NEEDED IN KENTUCKY

16,316 More Dairy Cows Are Needed In Kentucky By 1930

Sixteen thousand three hundred and sixteen more dairy cows will be needed in Kentucky by 1930, according to the Blue Valley Creamery Institute. This number will be required to take care of the normal needs of the state's growing population unless Kentucky farmers adopt the double-barreled policy of breeding only from pure-bred sires and then feeding their progeny balanced rations.

An average cow produces about four thousand pounds of milk a year, containing 160 pounds of butterfat, the Institute states, or just about enough to meet the requirements of a family of four with milk, butter, cheese, ice cream and condensed milk. A daughter of a high production sire, fed in accordance with the methods advocated by the state agricultural college, will produce around six thousand pounds, and her offspring under the same conditions in turn should find it impossible to bring her production to the eight thousand pound mark per year.

Should Kentucky farmers adopt the advanced practices outlined above, only about half of the 16,316 cows would be needed to supply the state's dairy products needs five years from now, says the Institute, basing its conclusions on figures from hundreds of cow test association reports. Not only would the smaller number of quality cows make twice as much clear profit per cow above feed costs, but their owners would still have a ten-dollar gold piece per cow over for good measure.

WATER MAIN IN SIGHT FOR CITY OF ERLANGER

We are informed by one of the Erlanger citizens that city water is almost assured for Erlanger there being only about ten thousand dollars yet to be subscribed to assure the water main to Erlanger. This certainly will be a long stride forward in the uplift and business activity of the whole community adjacent to Erlanger. Let us hope that we all may encourage our neighbors and that eventually our little town of Burlington may also see her way clear to extend the main to Burlington, which we consider a possibility.

Directors Predict Minor Changes In the Contract, Achievements Are Reviewed

Lexington, Ky., June 17. — The Board of Directors of the Burley Tobacco Growers' Co-operative Association met in special called session today and voted unanimously that a campaign for a new sign up would be inaugurated when and as soon as, necessary arrangements could be made and perfected. There was a general discussion as to the existing contract and it was agreed that probably there would be a few minor changes in the present one.

The accomplishments of the Association were reviewed in its four years of operation and it was shown that the Association had stabilized the tobacco market and had already paid to its members an average of approximately 17 cents per pound net on the 733,000,000 pounds of tobacco received to date and still has on hand of the 1923 and 1924 crops approximately 165,000,000 pounds. It was the general opinion of the Board that when this 165,000,000 pounds is sold and the outstanding obligations of the Association paid, further distributions will be made to the members on both crops and the net average paid to the members on the entire 733,000,000 lbs., received to date would be brought up to 20 cents or more per pound, and in addition to this 20 cents net average paid the members they will have paid for in cash over $4,000,000 for receiving plants, leaving only a little over $2,000,000 yet to pay on them.

This was considered a wonderful showing and one to which every member of the Association should want to with pride. Conditions were compared at the present time with conditions that existed when the Association was formed in 1921, the banker members of the Directory stating that the conditions of the banks was better now than at any time since the War.

The Directors agreed that it would be necessary for those who had not heretofore joined the Association to do so in order that the present satisfactory prices on tobacco be maintained.

The officers reported the financial standing and status of the Association in excellent condition and that all payments had been made on the tobacco warehouses properties and that the same would be fully paid for and belong to the members within the period of the contract.

It was said that additions had been made to warehouse properties as they matured and that the same would be fully paid for and belong to the members within a period of the contract.

It was said that additions had been made to warehouse properties to the extent of several thousand dollars and that all the said properties were in better physical condition than when taken over by the Association.

The Directors said that in addition to the large sales recently made negotiations were pending now for more sales in the near future.

CHURCH CELEBRATES 100TH ANNIVERSARY

Salem Baptist Church Celebrated 100th Anniversary Sunday

The membership of the Salem Baptist church celebrated their one hundred anniversary last Sunday. This old church was constituted on March 20, 1825, with a membership of one hundred. Uncle Lewis Conner was the first pastor of the church after its constitution. In 1873 they rebuilt, and the present structure was the result.

There have been several interesting controversies between the members of this organization, one of them resulting in a legal tilt, a record of which may be found in the Circuit Clerk's office.

The present pastor Rev. Harvey Adams, of Middletown, Ohio, delivered the centennial address last Sunday.

THE MOONSHINERS AND BOOT-LEGGERS

There are now confined in the county bastle seven prisoners—six men and one woman—four for violating the prohibition laws, two for housebreaking and one for forgery. If the moonshiners and bootleggers would heed the advice in the two paragraphs below, from the Mountain Scorchers, one of the newest of Kentucky's newspapers, the jails in this country would be empty. The editor of the Scorchers says: "You all know it is a violation of the law to make, sell, give or even buy it. He is an enemy to his community, an enemy to his wife and children, and an enemy to himself. He sees no future for himself or family; he has no reverence for God, nor consideration of his rights or others. He may run riot for awhile, but finally he will be caught, and then, having had his dance, he will begin to pay the fiddler. Boys, stop it for heaven's sake, for the sake of your neighbors and neighbors' children, and for the sake of your family and yourself. Stop this dirty business, and be men."

THE GLORIOUS FOURTH

The question no longer is, "How many fine crackers does it take to make a Fourth of July?" Rather it is, "What'll we do on the Fourth?" Gone are those reckless, glorious Fourth of July! The places that permit the old-time bang of the cannon cracker are growing less and less and the day has lost all its glamour for boys. But when they grow up, with all their hands and arms, and eyes and feet and legs intact, they will probably be thankful that someone was so thoughtful as to think enough of their welfare to save them from themselves. The youngsters do not exactly comprehend what it's all about, they can be taught, and when they reach the age of discretion, they will come to understand the day's significance.

CONSOLATION

Farmers who complain about the unfavorable spring should console themselves with the knowledge that the best harvest in the country have adjourned or are about to adjourn the bright and cheerful month of June. From the point of view of science it is perfectly reasonable and absolutely accurate to say on a beautiful sunny day in early June. "This is regular suicide weather."

The Ambition for Ownership

One of the most normal ambitions of this world is that which cherishes by the people who would like to own a home place and a little land of their own. It promotes every kind of healthful development. The people who accomplish this purpose avoid much expense. They become practical, so that they do for themselves many things that in different conditions would cost them much money. They do not have to shout for a plumber or carpenter every time some little thing about the house goes wrong. Furthermore, it is much cheaper to bring up a family, where one owns his home and has some land around it. Much of the expense for these youngsters can be saved by the home garden and poultry yard, the children can do much of the work on the same.

The chance of realizing the benefits from home ownership are much better in country towns and rural districts than they are in the cities. Real estate tends to grow more costly as towns grow bigger. Also people's employments are commonly more insecure in city environments. There are millions of people in cities who believe that it is good policy for everyone to own his own home. But they are unable to realize that ideal, because they do not know positively that they will have regular work where they are. They feel that they must be so foolish to think that if their job slacks up next week they can pull up stakes and go some where else.

So they continue to pay high rents and high prices, just because of the insecurity of their work. Millions of these people envy the conditions enjoyed by farmers and the dwellers in country towns. A little vine clad cottage in such a place, with the steady employment which is usually found in a country town, seems ideal to them. Millions of them wish they had never left such conditions which they enjoyed in youth but were foolish enough to give up.

SWIMMING DANGERS

In the good old days when swimming was a little harder of, no one ever feared the refreshing water of the old swimming hole.

But the present is different. Contamination may lurk in streams and small rivers, especially following a long drouth, when there has been no rainfall to flush the streams and cleanse the water.

Due to the lack of rain that has been general over the country, rivers are lower now than they have been for years, even during August when they reach the lowest level. This should be warning enough to those who are tempted to venture into the water for a cooling swim.

There are few streams that are not contaminated with sewage which is not readily carried off when the water is sluggish. And it is in this that the danger lies. If they do not receive sewage, there are other ways by which disease germs, such as typhoid, may be developed when the stream is not swift moving and cleansing itself.

Parents will do well to persuade their children to remain out of the rivers and small streams until conditions are improved with rain.

MOTORS JOIN TOWN AND COUNTRY

Motor transportation has revolutionized the life of the farm, given employment to hundreds of thousands in the automobile and allied industries, and formed a new unit in the transportation systems of the country.

The centrally located school reachable by motor transportation from a large surrounding area has largely contributed to the solution of the problem of adequate equipment and adequate instruction for the rural children.

On the 6,500,000 farms of the U. S. there were in 1924, automobiles to the number of 4,200,000 making the total automobiles in use by farmers almost equal to two-thirds of the number of farms in the country.

Marketing and distributing practices have undergone great changes through the use of the motor car. The 870,000 trucks in use on farms have quadrupled the economic range of the choice of markets, enabling the farmer to take advantage of more favorable prices at a greater distance.

The employment of hundreds of thousands in the automobile and allied industries, the growth of the tourist business, the building of good roads all over the country, and the development of suburban home centers are other factors due to the motor car development.

The state revenue agent of Miss. is directing nationwide attention through auto audits to recover a total of $12,000,000 from big corporations who are alleged to be violating the anti-trust laws. It is growing more and more evident that the education of this nation is to "skin" the government. "Bootlegging" is not confined to illegal liquor business—it means anything and everything illegal. The term should be applied where it fits.

PUBLISHING INCOME TAXES.

Since the supreme court has declared that income tax publicity is legal, the question has become an important one for the next session of congress to settle. Some senators have announced that they will attempt to have this part of the law repealed and others will insist on it being retained. So the stage seems to be set now for a legislative squabble.

Some good arguments might be made in favor of income tax publicity, but they are few. It was the avowed intention of congress by enactment of the statute to drive tax dodgers from under cover. And it is also reasoned by some that, since taxation is a public function, no secrecy should exist regarding the amount of taxes paid.

To offset these, which may be termed good reasons, is the fact that injustice may be done by the mere publication of income tax payments like many other things in that it doesn't explain itself.

It's possible to conceive that a relatively poor man might pay a large income tax through stroke of good fortune which would not come every year. And it might happen that another man in much better circumstances financially, would pay a comparatively small income tax due to losses caused by a run of poor business, or for some other reason.

Both returns might be honest, yet the people who did not understand the situation in each case would doubtless be unfair. Manifestly no list of income tax payments means much unless accompanied by explanations which explain them. Justice can't be done any other way.

COST OF EDUCATION

Many parents who are putting their young people through college, are sighing with relief to think that the bills for one more year are paid. They may wonder how they can ever get these young folks educated at the present scale of expense.

The costs involved in college training are mostly necessary. Teachers must be well paid. Commonly board and rooms are not very high, because the buildings were largely given by private benefactors. More young people will have to earn a good part of the money for education. It is becoming a big problem to arrange plans by which a good part of them can do this.

WEAVER AUTOMOBILES

A weaver automobile will scarcely be a drag on the market. It would even be more popular than a certain type of machine that the jocksmiths never tire of ridiculing, yet it is not an impossibility. Take the word of practical chemists, who said at a meeting of the American Chemical Society, that an automobile which will never wear out, may some day be constructed. A group of chemists are now engaged in studies in an effort to produce metal alloys which will be impervious to corrosion. Their aim is also to perfect metal alloys that will need neither painting nor plating. If such alloys can be developed, then automobiles will last indefinitely.

If this dream comes true, it will be a great boon to the people of the United States in overcoming a menacing economic waste. The countless thousands of cars that are "junked" each year are a heavy drain on the resources of a country, even though it be as fortunate as ours.

FINDS "LOST GRAVE"

Westerville, Ohio, June 22—The "lost grave" of the Rev. Hanby, author of "Nellie Gray," famous song of Civil War days, was discovered in an old cemetery here recently by R. C. Baker, commander of Dan C. Stone, Jr., Post of The American Legion of M. V. V.

The grave, known to be in this vicinity, had long been sought in vain. Commander Baker's long training in the Ohio Archaeological and Historical Society enabled him to locate the grave after a comparatively short search.

Following Mr. Baker's discovery members of the Westerville post of the Legion declared their intention of restoring the grave plot and making it one of the points of interest here.

Law enforcement is simply a question of law observance. There should be no distinction in the class of lawbreakers—a thief is a thief; a pirate is a pirate; a smuggler is a smuggler; a bootlegger in men, money or marbles is a bootlegger still—and all should be treated alike if justice is to prevail.

The National Association of Building Owners and Managers report that more than one-tenth of the people ride in elevators of office buildings every day. In other words it is estimated that elevator passengers number 14,000,000 each day. When airplane landing places are provided on the roofs of office buildings as is now contemplated, this figure will be largely increased.

STATE GETS DEED TO OLD FORT HILL

WAS PRESENTED TO VANCE PRATHER, FORT THOMAS, AT HARRODSBURG

Site Was Stockade For Lewis and Clarke Expedition in 1774-1775. Two Other Deeds Also Accepted, Near Pineville and Elkton.

Ft. Thomas, Ky.—Kentucky at last has joined a large list of states that have beauty spots worth remembering and worth saving, in the words of Vance Prather, Fort Thomas, secretary of the Kentucky State Park Commission.

Mr. Prather at Harrodsburg received a deed to the first strip of the Pioneer Memorial State Park, Old Fort Hill.

"Out of this stockade went the Lewis and Clarke expedition to the Northwest, in 1774-1775," Mr. Prather said. "Within this stockade the early Kentucky pioneers fought and lived and laughed awhile. Some went on to 'age' the state and 'cast their lives and their fortunes'."

The Harrodsburg Chamber of Commerce invited members of the commission, Dr. Willard Rouse Jilison, chairman, and State geologist; Dean Thomas P. Cooper of the University of Kentucky, and Mr. Prather, to dinner when the first section of the Pioneer Park was deeded and presented to the state through the commission. Judge Samuel Wilson, Lexington, made the presentation address.

Two deeds have been accepted by the commission, deed to 2,000 acres near Pineville and deed to eighty-three and three-quarter acres near Elkton in Todd County. Formal ratification of the Todd County tract has been made by Dr. Jilison and Dean Cooper, following Mr. Prather's announcement of the gift at the national conference on state parks at Skyland recently, when the park was officially credited to Kentucky's record.

The tract will provide a large camping and resting place and afford tourists the opportunity of seeing the Lincoln Shrine and Jefferson Davis monument in one day, Mr. Prather said. "Kentucky has remembered the significant Lincoln shrine near Hodgenville, and has remembered the leader of the Gray, only a few miles away at Fairview, in the Jefferson Davis shaft, rearing its obelisk 353 feet high, the tallest single concrete pile in all America," he said.

"Kentucky wishes its children, its boys and girls, to know and love and enjoy the outdoors of the state, and to call them all by name—not the botanical, Greek or Latin names, but the common names."

PROSECUTOR'S KIN HELD

Stone's Ball Fixed at $7,500—Also Faces Charge of Shooting Policeman.

Smithland—W. D. Stone, brother of County Attorney Ed Stone of Crittenden County, was held to the Livingston grand jury under bond of $7,500 by County Judge L. E. Roberts for alleged complicity in the robbery of $16,800 in cash and Liberty bonds from the Bank of Carversville. Sheriff G. B. Dunn announced that a warrant would be taken out for Stone, charging him with shooting with intent to kill. It is alleged that he shot Bradley Chittenden, 26 years old, of Joy, a member of the posse that wounded Stone twice in the leg, effected his capture and recovered the bank loot.

Paving Held Up in Madisonville—Madisonville, Ky.—The City Council's permanent street paving programme has been halted for the second time this year by the issuance of a restraining order, pending a decision of Circuit Judge Ruby Laffoon on an application for an injunction, which was filed by several citizens against Mayor James D. Sory, Councilmen E. B. Hamblitt, E. B. Hardin, James D. Overall, R. E. Moore and James A. Franceway, restraining them from accepting bids or awarding a contract. When the bids were opened for the construction of about six miles of streets in the residential sections of the city, the White Construction Company, Chicago, had the lowest bid. No award was made.

Warren Man Is Electrocuted—Bowling Green—James Russell, 28 years old, was electrocuted here when he came in contact with a high tension power wire while going to visit a neighbor about a block away. From the burns on his right hand, it is believed that he found the wire dangling across his path and attempted to remove it.

Bracken Mill Destroyed by Fire—Augusta—The flour mill at Germantown, this county, was struck by lightning and destroyed by the blaze which followed. About 100 barrels of flour and considerable wheat was stored in the mill. The mill, a three-story frame structure, belonged to and was operated by the Germantown Milling Company. The loss is estimated at $20,000 with $12,500 insurance. The Brookville Fire department, six miles away, responded to the alarm and helped save adjoining property.

"HUMBLE PIE"

Even Battle Creek enthusiasts would hate to be confined to a diet of "humble pie." Eating humble pie means going through the motions, at least, of humility. When the English nobility bring down a deer the lord and his friends dine from the choice steaks of venison. The huntsman and retainers are served a pie made of the "humbles" or less desirable portions.

Correctly Carbed for Summer Outings

The long vacation is here and many kids and lassies are going to spend much of the summer out of doors. After long months in school they are entitled to freedom and all most of them ask—if they live in the country—is liberty to do as they please. They are always find plenty of amusement. Our children are going to the country for the summer or to the summer camps that are becoming so popular. These camps, under the supervision of competent leaders, are fine for the children and for their parents—who need a little respite from responsibility occasionally.

A practical and good-looking outfit for vacation in the country is pictured here. It includes knickers and a blouse that may be made of either woolen or cotton goods—or both. Heavy cotton twill, denim or khaki will serve for the blouse, or they may be made of tweed or homespun. Baggy breeches, cloth, saten or other substantial weaves will serve for the blouse—or the whole outfit may be made of serge.

A soft felt or fabric hat, strong hosiery and sport shoes will see the most athletic of little maids through her vacation.

SMOKE STACKS

In every community there are people who are always doing ill. There are those who are forever serving and giving and those who only ask and take.

There is no community that does not have those citizens who ask much from the community and give nothing in return. They are loud in the demand for "more smokestacks," but want the other fellow to take all the chances while they sit on the sidelines and grab the benefits. His is a purely selfish loyalty.

It is an unhappy and unfortunate community that does not have the other type of citizens who are untrusting in their efforts to help the home town. He never ceases to be solicitous of others and has a genius for doing at the right time those little acts which mean so much to the recipient. He is always ready to bear his part of any civic burden that a majority decided upon. He knows that no chain is stronger than its weakest link, and believes that community success, as a business proposition, is only possible through community loyalty. He does not measure his interest by any per cent of individual returns but as a whole. It is men of this character that supply the "smokestacks."

The total number of Boy Scouts in the United States is 601,130, besides 166,354 adult leaders. The Cheyenne, Wyoming, scouts have invited brother scouts from all over the world to attend the twenty-ninth annual frontier celebration during this month.

Suggested that a census be taken of those who can sing, but one of those who think they can sing would be much more numerous.

Experience Does Count

Our many years of funeral directing have given us a rich background of experience and a service that we are proud to offer. Funeral directing is a profession and art, and to be well done it must have a firm foundation of experience as a guide. That—we are able to offer.

COMMUNITY POWER

It's the water over the wheel that makes power—in the community as well as the mill.

If only for selfish reasons you should spend your money in Boone county.

The dollar you spend away is a dollar gone.

The dollar you spend in Boone county is a dollar that adds power and production in your home county—it's a dollar that grids a better grid of better advantages for you.

Self-interest will show you why you receive most for your home dollar.

First—In increase in property values. This not only applies to city real estate but to farming lands in this vicinity. As a town grows and develops farm property increases even in greater values. The history of every town in the nation proves that suburban property and town property increase in proportionate values and their interests are equal.

Second—In direct benefits—better schools, churches and public institutions.

Third—In supporting the community that supports you. You can't "have your cake and eat it too" is a true saying. Every man should patronize the institution in which he is financially interested.

There are practical as well as loyal reasons why you should spend your money in Boone county. The prosperity of industries, merchants, banks and professional men means your prosperity.

WEALTHY TAX DODGERS

Secretary Mellon recently asserted that "With new tax-exempt securities issued at the rate of one thousand million dollars a year, and with other means of escaping income tax, the wealthy need no guardian." There's no question about the wealthy being able to take care of themselves, but in view of his admission as to tax-exempt securities for the wealthy, it is difficult to understand why they demand further exemption as provided in his proposal sur-tax reduction. The basic principle of all taxation is that a man shall pay in proportion to his interest in civic or national cooperation and affairs. It protects and makes his wealth possible. Why pass the expense on to the 90 per cent of consumers? Wealth does not carry with it a license or tax-dodging.

CHILDREN BEAR THE BRUNT

According to the records of the Department in New York City, 36,000 dependent children are cared for outside of their own homes. Of this number 30,000 are in public institutions and 6,000 are in licensed "boarding homes," similar to that conducted by the Volk woman who was indicted on charges of manslaughter and substituting one child for another.

Under the pressure of life in the metropolis many fathers and mothers are brought face to face with the necessity of abandoning the care of their children to other hands. Every tragedy that the human family is subject to—children out of the environment in which they naturally belong, casting them on the mercy of the world. The records of the agencies through which they are placed show that the primary causes come under the headings of poverty, illness, insanity, marital infidelity, illegitimacy, lack of moral responsibility and death.

And now it is charged that many of these children are adopted into "homes" when life or them is little less than slavery. It is a sad, sordid picture of the seamy side of our social life with results far more damaging in the long run than indiscriminate immigration.

UP-TREND IN FARM LAND

If you have been farming for the past four or five years without any real success; if you are becoming discouraged over the chance of realizing any profit by tilling the soil; and if you are making plans to sell out and get into something else, just pause and think this matter over carefully. Then make up your mind to hang on for another year at least.

For farm lands are rapidly recovering in value throughout the country. A special inquiry brought to light the following facts:

Farm lands reached their lowest point in ten years at the beginning of 1925, with an average price per acre for the entire United States of $68. The past few months, however, have seen a rapid rebound from this low price because values have never been lower in recent years in preparation to income, and values are based upon possible or average income per acre in any given territory.

The Brookmeyer Economic Service basing its prognostications upon these facts, advises people to consider farm land at present prices, an excellent investment. And this advice will tend to create a far more active market for farms during the next few months than we have seen in this country before for some time.

Backing up these statements issued by the Brookmeyer Service are opinions of Federal land bank and farm loan officers, farm organization leaders, and farm land real estate men.

Throughout the country confidence in future possibilities of farming is on the upward incline. So whether you plan to continue on the soil for the rest of your life or not, you had better hang on to your place for a little while longer.

"Good farm land will increase from twenty-five to fifty dollars per acre during the next 12 months," is the statement of a prominent Chicago banker dealing in farm land mortgages.

Now you know how much land you have. So sit right down and figure what profit you can make by farming through one more year at least.

The State Governments

President Coolidge in his Declaration Day address remarked that the states are "today the backbone of the nation."

There are sharp differences of opinion as to how far the federal government should be called in to make up for the lack of the various state administrations. But anyway, the state governments could be relied on to meet most of the modern problems, much time and effort would be saved to our people, and the regulation would be more in accordance with the needs of the various sections.

It is a difficult thing for a group of men assembled in Washington to legislate for the needs of 48 states. Each member of Congress is supposed to know the needs of his own section fairly well, but when he attempts to handle matters for sections far distant from his own, he often bungles such matters quite badly. The big nation wide problems must still be handled by the federal government, but the more the states can rise to modern demands and handle their problems in a modern way, the better our government will run.

As the president has well pointed out, when the state governments neglect their proper duties, there is a tendency to run to Washington to get action. The states have omitted to take. The remedy for such conditions is to send our best men to our state legislatures and to fill our positions of state administration so that they shall look at the problems of Kentucky in a big and intelligent way.

It is a high responsibility to take a position in our state government. Our best people should be willing to give this service, so that we can solve our own problems without looking so much to the federal government for help.

LOVE FOR THE FLAG

June 14 is being widely noted as the anniversary of the date when the American flag was adopted. Some unimaginative persons in Boone county may say that while they favor respect to the flag as the national emblem, they do not feel that warm sentiment of emotion that it is said they should experience.

But if those folks had to go to some foreign land and remain there a good many years, they would find out what the stars and stripes really mean to them. Tears would come into their eyes as they thought of the land whence they came, and they would realize the blessings that American citizenship brings. The red, white, and blue would seem a beautiful expression of noble sentiment.

As we go along performing daily duties, we scarcely realize that our country means so much to us. If we were kept away from it, our hearts would yearn with longing to return, and deeper meanings would seem more glorious than any work of painter's art.

Medical authorities are asked how to avoid excessive perspiration, but there are some who would better off financially if they perspired a little more.

Mrs. J. J. Davis of Graves Ave., after spending six weeks with relatives at Henderson, N. C., has returned home, bringing with her her sister Miss Gertrude Hoyl for a month's visit.

COUNTRY TOWN CHILDREN

One of the blessings of conditions in a town like Burlington is that there is commonly a close companionship between parents and children. The children are more contented to stay at home, and are not tempted to spend so many evenings wandering about the streets and going to foolish shows.

In the typical country town home the children like to be with their parents and get ideas from them. They listen respectfully to what the older people say, instead of acquiring a contempt for them because they do not ask the latest slang.

Of course there are some who are restless, and who cherish foolish plans, but the majority are not that way. The respect which most of them have for their parents incites them to develop worthy lives, and is one reason why country bred young folks usually come out so well.

Home Town Appearance

Some people in country towns always seem to think that they can maintain any kind of ugly looking building on their premises and that they will never suffer any unfavorable results from it. But it has always been true that the people who have unattractive buildings repel business and create an unfavorable impression. Many people have of course, done business successfully in unattractive buildings, but they could have done better still in modernized ones.

Whenever a business man or farmer improves the appearance of his buildings, he creates the impression that he is efficient and successful, and that people will do well to trade with him.

KEEP CLIMBING

Watch an aeroplane some day as it soars and climbs toward the zenith accompanied by the roar of its powerful motor. Smaller and smaller it grows. Faster and faster becomes the hum of the motor. Higher and higher the pilot climbs. Then silence. The motor is stopped.

Sailing gracefully as a hawk the machine seems to remain in the heights for a time. How beautifully she tucks the curves. How cleverly the pilot holds his elevation.

But like everything in his world she must either climb higher or drop lower. Gradually she begins to grow larger and larger until finally she points her nose toward the earth and gracefully alights again on terra firma.

The life of a man and the life of a community may be likened to the flight of this machine. When you stop the motor of individual effort or community initiative, you immediately begin a descent to a dead level of mediocrity.

If you desire to improve your opportunities year after year, you must devote your leisure time to the intellectual or mental pursuit which will make you more efficient. If you want Boone county to stand forth as a better county than the average, you must do your part to create more community spirit. For individual effort and community enthusiasm are the motors which keep the man or his city constantly climbing to higher and better things.

PICNIC SPIRIT

The picnic season is now here. In innumerable households they are making sandwiches and packing away the doghouse for such excursions. The men do not always see why the food tastes so much better, and they may think a dinner served off a hot cookstove is more appetizing. But if they had to prepare that dinner, they might think differently.

The many women who love nature ardently feel inspired by the charm of rural scenes and beauty spots, and the basket lunch has a favor never attained by the finest cookery set out on a prosaic dining table.

The men can obtain deep satisfaction from their ability to make a fire and conduct the various acts of camping. The hold which the picnic spirit has on our people would suggest that simple and natural pleasures are still enjoyed, and that you do not have to spend a lot of money to have a good time.

The slow pay debtors might be considered very smart if times did not come up when they need to borrow money again.

ADVISING THE GRADUATES

The young people who are leaving the schools and colleges have not so far complained because no one was giving them any advice. Their teachers, the ministers, the newspapers, and various authorities, all unite in offering counsel.

To which some of them may remark that the courses they have studied consist very largely of advice, and they would like to be free of the same for a time.

However, considering the radical change of occupation that will come to them, at least to those who have finished their studies, perhaps they will not be too important of such suggestions.

One thought that they should have foremost in their minds, is that they should not feel that their education is finished. It has only begun. It is now up to them to attend the school of experience, which will teach lessons that no text book can impart. When they stop trying to learn the lessons of that school, they stop growing.

The graduating classes know a great deal now, and if they know half as much in a year from now, they will be more fortunate than most of us were at the same age.

MISSOURI WALTON,
Press Reporter.

Henry B. Sleet, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Sleet, of Beaver Lick had one of the narrowest escapes on record recently. When young Sleet went in bathing on one of the recent hot days he suddenly became exhausted, and when his comrade Howard Feldhaus went to his rescue he had his hands full to save himself. He gave it up and left young Sleet, as he went down the last time, thinking he was gone.

A young contractor working near by the name of Barnschlegel, from Newport, came to the rescue. He went into the water and was under for a space of two minutes before he returned to the surface with the apparently dead man.

He was taken to St. Elizabeth hospital in Covington where he remained five days before it was thought safe to bring him home. He has now apparently entirely recovered.

Mr. Barnschlegel is being congratulated as a real hero.

TIMELY AGRICULTURAL NOTES

Jersey Cattle Sale—The sale of Registered Jerseys held at the North Kentucky Fair Grounds last Monday was a big success. Some excellent individuals went thru the sale and some real high producing cows.

Only two were sold out of the 55 state and many stayed in Boone county. This speaks well for our cattle and for the outlook of the purebred dairy business in this section.

Lime Crusher

Word from Clell Coleman states that the state machinery will either be repaired or replaced by new in the near future, that the lime crusher work can be completed. Several other counties are very anxious to get the crusher at this time.

Poultry Meeting

There will be a poultry meeting of those interested in the winter poultry show Saturday night June 27 at the Farm Bureau office at Florence. All are invited. Meeting will be called at 7 o'clock.

Cow Test Meeting

There will be a meeting of the North Kentucky Cow Test Association at the Covington Y. M. C. A. Wednesday July 1st at 1:30 standard time. All members should plan to attend this meeting.

Agricultural Engineer

Mr. E. A. Welch, Field Agent in Agricultural Engineering will be in the county on July 2nd.

Supt. Of State Reformatory At Frankfort, Ky. Resigns

Resignation Follows The Rebellion
On Part Of 800 Prisoners

Superintendent H. V. Bastin, of the State Reformatory at Frankfort, resigned his post at the head of that institution last Thursday. His resignation followed a strike on the part of about eight hundred of the inmates who claimed that they had been furnished impure food. There are about fourteen hundred convicts in the prison.

Milton F. Conley, recently appointed commissioner of public institutions, immediately started an investigation and invited Governor Fields to enter the institution which he did. In a short talk to the prisoners he explained to them that they were entitled to good wholesome food but that in exchange for that they must be loyal to the State and their superiors in the prison.

The Governor said, "Every man who labors is entitled to wholesome food, and while the state cannot afford to give you a banquet every day you are going to have in the future, plenty of good substantial well cooked food. The prisoner has rights but he must not abuse them."

These statements on the part of the Governor were greeted with cheers and hand clapping from the prisoners, who pledged their loyalty to the state officials in return.

The chief executive announced that John B. Chilton, superintendent of the Eddyville prison, would serve as temporary warden at Frankfort until the State Board of Charities and Corrections could exercise the proper diligence in selecting a competent successor to Mr. Bastin.

Mr. Bastin is a Republican from Garrard county and has worked for the past four years. The board of charities and corrections is non-partisan.

MILITARY ROAD MEETING

Agreeable to the published announcement those interested in the building of a Military Highway between Fort Thomas and Camp Knott met at the Court House Wednesday afternoon when D. B. Wallace of Walton made a report of the meeting recently held at Carrollton when an enthusiastic gathering formed a permanent organization with R. M. Barker as Chairman and John J. Howe as Secretary and requested County organizations to be organized and the action of the district meeting ratified. On motion Judge J. E. Riddell was elected Chairman of the Boone County organization and Ben Riey as the Secretary, both being unanimously elected.

On motion the election of the district officers was unanimously ratified.

The next meeting of the District Organization is to be held at Carrollton, on Saturday, July 18, and on motion, Judge Riddell, as County Chairman appointed all the citizens of Boone County as delegates to the Carrollton meeting and especially those who are interested in the building of a government concrete highway through Boone County to connect Fort Thomas and Camp Knott.

The meeting then adjourned.

N. E. Riddell, Chairman

BULLITTSBURG CHURCH

You look so charming, fresh and new that one who does not know would never, never guess that you were built so long ago.

More than a century you've stood just where you stand today. A shining light upon the road. To show lost men the way.

To many who have long since passed to their eternal rest, you were the home church till the last.

The place that they loved best. Now children and grandchildren of those who have lived and gone, are giving you their deepest love. Your work they'll carry on.

Dear Old Historic Church may you Long stand to show the way. That leads to all that's good and true. To those who go astray.

And may your garments always be White as the spotless snow. From worldly stain and soil free. Your light a steady glow.

GREAT GAME PLAYED AT HEBRON SATURDAY

Burlington Walks Away From Petersburg at Burlington Saturday

Hebron and Bellevue played one of the "kind you read about" last Saturday at Hebron. The game was quite a contrast to the one the two teams played the week previous at Bellevue, as this one was cleanly played throughout, except that the one and only run was scored as the result of an error.

Bellevue captured this one as aforesaid by the 1-0 shut out route, while the week previous Hebron brought home the bacon 9-2. This should make their next game a holy contest affair.

The "two Joes"—Brady and Bullock, opposed each other again with Brady showing marked improvement over his previous effort, while Bullock was even better than ever. Bellevue garnered but three hits off his delivery, while Hebron obtained five off Brady.

Petersburg presented a very poor defense against Burlington last Saturday, and as a result the locals ran the game was about as one-sided and uninteresting as the one the week before at Petersburg except that it was chalked up on the other side of the book. The final score was 17-6 with a total of five home runs registered by the local team. Kelly, Smith, E. A. and obtaining one hit, while Shelby Acre drove out two.

Lafayette was in the box for Burlington and did very well with a sore arm. McGuire, however, and Jarrett finished for Petersburg. A four run team was minus the services of two or three regular players, including two pitchers.

HIGH SCHOOL STUDENT WRITES STORY OF TRIP

Account of Junior Week at Lexington by B. H. S. Girl

(By Kathryn Clore)

The purpose of Junior Week is from Boone county for that purpose. Counties come together and learn from each other new ideas to carry out in their club work.

There were fourteen boys and girls from Boone county for that purpose.

We went from Florence by truck. It was 2:30 p. m., June 7th, when we left Florence. Mrs. Early, of Petersburg, went with us as chaperone. Mr. and Mrs. Matson followed in his car. We had quite a jolly time going down. When the truck arrived at the University campus we were tired out. It was 7:40 when we reached Patterson Hall.

Boone county delegation was about first to arrive.

On Monday morning we were assigned to groups, each group met at a different place to listen to lectures by many interesting and helpful subjects. In the evening we were assigned to tribes and the different tribes contested in games.

There were more than 500 boys and girls from almost every county in the state.

Each morning all met at the gymnasium for music which was furnished by the Boone county orchestra.

Each evening at 7 o'clock every one assembled on the campus for vespers service. After this we went to the beautiful building to see pictures and other entertainments.

On Thursday afternoon we hiked through the business-section of Lexington. We went through Lafayette Hotel, Lexington Herald and a large department store. Then we went out to Transylvania College. We also noted several of the old historical places about Lexington.

Friday afternoon every one went to Frankfort. There was a special train of eight coaches which we went in.

We went to the new Capitol where Gov. Fields made a short talk. This building is very beautiful, one of the prettiest capitols in the U.S. Then we went to the penitentiary. This was interesting but not enjoyable.

Last we visited the old capitol. This building was converted into a museum. There were many wonderful old relics there. After staying here a while we took the train back to Lexington.

On Saturday morning our truck came for the Boone county bunch. We left about 11 a. m., and had another good time returning. We all reached Boone about 8 p. m., Saturday evening having enjoyed one of the biggest treats of our lives.

We are very grateful to our County Agent and wife and Mrs. Early, who helped make it possible for us to enjoy such an educational week.

BODY OF DROWNED MAN FOUND AT CONSTANCE

Charles Hutson, of Cincinnati, Who Was Drowned Friday, Found

A body believed to be that of Charles Hutson, 20 years old, 3603 Eastern Avenue, Salesman who drowned in the Ohio River late Friday, when a canoe in which Hutson and John Vearil, 18 years old, were riding upset, was taken from the Ohio River near Constance, Ky., late Monday by the owner of a houseboat. Vearil saved his life by swimming to shore.

Identification was established through a chain bearing the name of Charles Hutson, 3603 Eastern Avenue, and the lettering on a sweater he wore at the time of drowning.

The sweater on the body of the man taken from the river bore the insignia "F. C." Fenwick Club, to which Hutson belonged. A blue shirt which Hutson wore when he went canoeing also was on the body.

The body was taken to the undertaking establishment of Hugenberg & Glimmer, Sixth Street, Covington, where it is being held pending the arrival of Hutson's relatives.

Recovery of the body ends the search for the last of the four river victims who drowned last Friday.

INDEPENDENCE DAY

The day when the United States declared independence from Great Britain will always be considered as one of the great turning points of history. The theory then expressed had been held by philosophers for many centuries. But when they came to work it out, their plans always had so many faults that they broke down and had to be abandoned.

At the time the U. S. declared independence, kingdoms and empires seemed the permanent method of government for all time. But the ideas proclaimed July 4, 1776 have so profoundly affected human destiny that republican forms of government have now spread over the world.

It is significant that the world has made more progress in science, education, and general enlightenment and prosperity, since democratic government was first put on a practical basis by the American patriots, than it did in 1,000 years previous to that time.

HOWE STRONGER THAN EVER.

That the remarkable race of our fellow townsman, Hon. John J. Howe for the Democratic nomination for United States Senator last year, has made an impression in political circles, is indicated by the following excerpt from an article in last Saturday's Cincinnati Enquirer:

"The presence of Attorney John J. Howe in Covington in the interest of the proposed Military Highway between Camp Knott and Ft. Thomas calls to mind the remarkable race made by him last year for the Democratic nomination for U. S. Senator."

When asked what his political plans for the future were Mr. Howe refused to make any statement but it is being whispered around that should he start again, some of those who before were uninterested in his candidacy will be found backing him to the last ditch."—Carrollton Democrat.

CURRENT STOPS AT CRITICAL TIME

The high tension current was suddenly cut off from Burlington Tuesday morning. Of course this dealt a knockout blow to the Linotype, which partially accounts for the dearth of news this week, as well as the absence of the items of several of our county correspondents.

SILVER CUPS WILL BE AWARDED BY LEGION

Rewards for Excelling in Increase in Legion Membership

Louisville Ky., June 28—Awarding of handsome silver cups to the three Posts in the State excelling in membership for the current year, will be made at the Seventh Annual State Convention of The American Legion of Kentucky to be held in Mt. Sterling, Ky., August 31, September 1 and 2.

The cups standing twenty-four inches in height and mounted on 4-inch ebony bases were presented to

Frank D. Rash, and will be awarded to the three Posts in the State showing the greatest percentage increase in membership during 1925 over that of 1924. "For this reason," said State Adjutant T. H. Hayden, Jr., "the 181 Posts of the Legion in Kentucky are falling all over one another in vying for the highest possible percentage of membership in relation to their average of 1924. The result of their effort is evident in the fact that J. Franklin Bell Post No. 100 Dawson Springs Hospital Post No. 169, Dawson Springs and Norman Barnes Post No. 70, Covington, lead in the contest with an increase of 377, 204 and 136% respectively, over last year."

Presentation of the cups to the successful Posts will be made by Judge Henry DeHaven Moorman, Hardinsburg, Judge M. K. Gordon, Madisonville, and Ulric Bell, Washington, D. C., the three senior Past Commanders of The American Legion of Kentucky.

BOAT RACES TO DRAW LARGE CROWD SAT.

Picnic and Contests at Harvest Home Complete Entertainment for 4th

Saturday, July 4th will be a gala day on the Ohio River at Rising Sun, when the motor boat races will take place there. Rising Sun is the home of J. W. Whitlock, who has gained national fame with his motor boats in years past, and he is responsible for the staging of an affair of this magnitude at Rising Sun.

While there will be seating room for about 2000 persons on the Indiana side it is predicted that there will be as many people to view the races from the Kentucky side of the river. The high hills on this side will offer an excellent point of vantage.

Besides the boat races there will be swimming contests and numerous other forms of amusement.

The committee in charge of the Harvest Home concession this year has arranged quite an entertaining program for Saturday afternoon and evening, July 4th. There will be dancing both afternoon and evening with feature contests of various kinds, including fat men's race, old men's race, women's race, baby show, prize walk and various other contests. They are expecting a large crowd.

Free drawing for many cash and merchandise prizes will take place at 6 p. m. These prizes have been donated by business houses in Cincinnati, Covington and many towns in Boone county.

License was issued at the County Clerk's office Tuesday for the marriage of Wilbur Loudon and Mary Ann Merrick, both of the Waterloo neighborhood.

Mr. Lupton is a son of Mr. and Mrs. Jesse Loudon, while Miss Merrick is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Merrick. The young couple are to be married at Bellevue on July 4th.

CENTURY EXPANSION CAMP'N FOR COLLEGE

Georgetown Student and Assistant Now Working in Boone County

Georgetown, Ky., June 26—R. E. Lee former student of Georgetown College and N. A. Boyajin, are assisting in the Century Expansion Drive of the college this summer. For some time now they will work Boone, Kenton and Campbell counties.

The Century Expansion Campaign which was launched last spring provides for the erection of a number of new buildings on the campus as well as other needed improvements. It will culminate in 1929 when the college celebrates its one hundredth year of service as a factor in Christian education.

READ THIS—AND SAVE YOUR BREATH

We sometimes talk a great deal about something of which we know nothing, and not only sometimes but oftentimes. Now take the popular and much debated subject of evolution—the evolutionists say the anti-evolutionists are ignoramuses, and the "anti" say the other folks are "damp-phools"—so there you are.

The truth of the matter is that ninety-nine per cent of the people know nothing whatever about it—we frankly admit that we don't read the following editorial from the Louisville Post entitled "Let us inform ourselves."

"Not since the Tennessee anti-evolutionists have we seen a more sensible comment upon the whole vexed problem than the following from the editorial columns of the Boone County Recorder, published at Burlington, Ky."

The number of people who hold decided opinions one way or the other on the subject of evolution leads one to believe that schools and colleges have specialized in the subject for many years. The fact is, however, that most of us are talking about something we know very little about. The only way to acquire a simple understanding is to read some of the best books on both sides. After weighing the evidence your opinion may be just as sound as the other fellow's."

If this excellent advice should be generally followed there would be no anti-evolution laws, no hickering between men of religion and men of science, and a wider understanding of one of the most interesting and important branches of modern learning.

It does not at all follow, however, that those who have heretofore failed to do what the Boone County Recorder now advises intelligent people to do should be classed as ignoramuses. That is an objectionable term that is freely and foolishly applied by those who have specialized in certain branches of science to those who have been busy with other things. We cannot all be specialists, and none of us can keep up with everything. The book of knowledge has grown so large in the last few decades that many of us are forced with regret to permit certain things to pass us by unnoticed. And this is true with practically everyone.

The best bi-product of such a law as that passed in Tennessee is that its passage will undoubtedly stimulate thousands of men and women, to do exactly what the Boone County paper suggests. Heretofore few except extremists have spared the time to get at the facts. Unquestionably there are scientists who are atheists, and a few of these have been foolish enough to try to use scientific discoveries to attack religion. Equally it is that there have been religious zealots who would deny established facts, just as men like them have denied that the world was round.

But the great majority of Americans are not extremists. Our countrymen are capable of reaching intelligent conclusions upon all matters about which they have informed themselves. This controversy has grown acute, and the only remedy is a somewhat dissemination of knowledge.

Let us not be fugitives from information."

Mr. Lee Myers and Miss Agnes Carver were married at Latonia last Wednesday afternoon.

Miss Carver was born and reared in Burlington, where she has a host of friends. She has resided in Petersburg for the past six years when she has been one of the ablest members of the Petersburg school faculty.

Mr. Myers is an automobile salesman from Walton, where the young couple will make their home.

Large Tearing Car Crashes Off Of Bridge On The Dixie Highway

A party of six in a large touring car crashed thirty-two feet from a bridge to the railroad track last Sunday afternoon just south of Walton on the Dixie Highway.

Miss Ann Guery, 20 years old 1005 Ann Street Newport, Ky., was killed instantly, while the other five members of the party were seriously injured.

The injured: James Kenetzer, 18 years old, Erlanger, Ky., driver of the automobile.

Miss Margaret Sutton, 21 years old, 1503 St. Clair Street, Covington.

Miss Catherine Sutton, 17 years old, same address.

Benjamin Browning, 19 years old, 106 Locust street, Erlanger, Ky.

Harry Hamilton, 19 years old Riverside Drive, West Covington.

Miss Guery was crushed to death instantly beneath the machine, while Margaret Sutton suffered a fracture of her right wrist, bruises of her right hip and possibly other fractures. Miss Catherine Sutton, her sister, received a fracture of her right shoulder and serious bruises, while Browning had his left leg fractured. Kenetzer and Hamilton, who received injuries about the head and possible internal injuries respectively, were taken to St. Elizabeth hospital, Covington, where they were treated.

The body of Miss Guery was removed to the undertaking establishment of Edwards & DeMoise while the other three members of the party were taken to Booth's Memorial Hospital.

The accident occurred just at the south end of Walton, where the road takes a sudden sharp turn just as it crosses a bridge over the Southern Railroad. The driver did not know of this curve and evidently lost control of the car, and it crashed through the railing on to the track below.

Mrs. Oscar Chandler who witnessed the accident from her front porch, knew of a train being about due and had presence of mind enough to immediately call the station agent and have the train stopped; otherwise further fatalities might have occurred.

SHERIFF AND DEPUTIES BUSY TUESDAY NIGHT

Raid Big Still On The Dixie Highway and Capture Two Men

Sheriff Hume, with deputies U. Z. Snyder and Percival made the biggest haul of the current "moonshine season" early Tuesday evening.

Two stills of fifty gallons capacity each were located on a farm one mile north of Richmond on the Dixie Highway, formerly known as the Johnny Powers farm. Two men giving their names as A. J. McCormick and H. Fink, of Cincinnati, were caught at the scene of the operation. Twenty-seven barrels of mash were also found in the house. Fifteen gallons of liquor were found near the still which was brought to the court house by the officers.

Judge Riddell fixed bond for the two accused men at two thousand dollars each, in default of which they were placed in jail to await examination. This brings the total to eight now in the county bastle.

VAGARIES OF JUSTICE

It may be true that the Goddess Justice is blind, but occasional events indicate that the lady is also dumb. Many a man has been convicted, pleaded guilty to bootlegging, has been discharged because the family needed his support. While this plea does not apply to other criminals, it seems to be a favorite before certain courts. The opposite extreme is recorded in the case of a young widowed mother who pleaded guilty to bootlegging as a means of earning money to support her child, but was sentenced to serve a total of 35 years for the state.—Justice—"even handed justice"—seems to be a visionary thing.

ELIZABETH BURNS, DEAD

Mrs. Elizabeth Burns died at her home in Petersburg last Monday afternoon June 22. She was 65 years of age and a widow of the late Jas. Burns who preceded her to the grave several years ago.

She is survived by four daughters and two sons all of whom are well known in this section of the county.

Claimed that few of the college graduates are ever heard from again, but anyway they make some noise when they come around for class reunions.

The country is apparently turning out enough easy chairs for all needs but many of us would like to see more benches produced.

Fact it is too hot to work in the garden does not prove it is too warm to play seven sets of tennis.

WORK

Bishop Hughes of the Methodist church, addressing an audience of Chicago business men a few days ago declared that the idea that the world began an Eden where there was no work, and that the goal of our aims should be a heaven where there is nothing to do but rest, is all wrong. The old idea of a future state of existence was that it would be a state of eternal rest. Modern wide awake people would get tired of such a place in about one month. Men and women were made for labor. Jesus Christ said: "My father worketh hitherto and I work." Work is the universal law, and those who seek to avoid it stand very little chance of being saved.

Some thinkers believe the principal goal of human endeavor should be very short hours of labor, four to six hours a day. It is doubtful if people would be as happy as they are now. The human mind needs some steady occupation, and if it does not have it, it rusts out.

ACCURATE INFORMATION

The quality which the "man in the street" often lacks, but which the educated man has, is the habit of going to headquarters for information. If the average man wants to know about a certain thing, he asks his next door neighbor, or some one he meets on the train, and he accepts such offhand opinion as reliable. If one wants to accomplish results, he must seek information and opinions from authorities qualified to give the same. If he is not in good health, he should not ask some man whom he meets in the street what he ought to do, but have himself examined by a competent doctor. If his business is sick and he can't tell what the trouble is, he should go to some one who is expert in that line and get a competent opinion. Success depends much on our ability to determine the value of information and opinions by which we are influenced.

The folks who boast to their friends about this or that article bought in some distant city, do not accomplish much to build up their home town.

Newspaper space formerly taken up by silver and golden wedding write-ups, now seems to be largely filled by doings of the folks who are getting a divorce.

Americans who have invested money in Mexico will be at perfect liberty to do down there to protect it, but whether the rest of the population will enlist is open to question.

New York is returning to normalcy all right. Rents are coming down. The $20,000 a year apartment may be rented for $18,000. At that, many of the new structures are vacant. But it helps some.

SUCCESS WITHOUT EDUCATION

The great majority of us here in Boone county have not had the higher education. As we read of the conferring of diplomas by fine universities and colleges, the thought comes to many that they will never amount to much because they have not had the same privilege.

And yet thousands of men have gone ahead without education. Some may have done so by crooked means or through luck, yet 90 per cent of them showed real achievement. Some how they had powers of perception or leadership, by which they could make either way.

The higher education is never wasted where its lessons are truly applied. Still one can succeed in business without it, if one has the old fashioned quality called 'gumption'. The essential thing is close observation of human nature and the world's ability to see what people want and how to meet the needs.

REDUCING SALES COSTS

It creates dissatisfaction to learn that the farmer, for instance, may get only 40 or 50 cents, perhaps not as much as that, for an article for which the consumer pays a full dollar. The latter wants to know why it costs so much to get all kinds of farm and factory stuff from the point of production to his own door.

Something must be done to lower these distribution costs, as they are generally felt to be too high. One thing that helps very much, is the practice of advertising. Advertising is motivated by which the selling side of a business can be made more efficient, and can accomplish its work for a lower cost.

Suppose a store employing half a dozen clerks, and paying rent and taxes on a certain space and stock, and incidental costs on that business and suppose that that store has never made it a practice to advertise. Then suppose some hustling manager takes charge, and that he advertises consistently. What will happen?

His business should largely increase. If he will keep it up for a considerable period, and back up his statements by honest dealing, he may increase his volume of business 100 percent, very likely more.

What is the result on his selling costs? If his goods are moving so much faster, he may not need to enlarge his quarters. His clerks were probably idle a good deal of the time previously, so that while he may have had to hire one or two more, yet it is not probable that his clerk hire has increased very largely. And his minor expenses have not probably increased much.

The result ought to be that he is making double the amount of goods without any proportionate increase in expenses. Consequently, the sum to be charged up against each article for selling costs, ought to be a third less than it was, perhaps still lower. This is the way advertising has worked in innumerable cases.

'Senator LaFollette's death leaves the Progressive Party which he founded without a leader and gives the regular Republicans more than an even chance to obtain control of the Northwestern states which he has controlled and dominated politically for so long. Senator Burton K. Wheeler, the Montana Democrat who ran on the LaFollette ticket for Vice-President in 1924 has become the nominal head of the liberal movement which culminated in LaFollette's candidacy for president, but there are men within the Republican party who believe that LaFollette's mantle should fall on their shoulders and they will not be slow to pick it up. There will also be a row in Wisconsin over naming LaFollette's successor as the term expires on March 4th, 1925. One of the possibilities is that the widow, who has followed her husband's political career closely, may be named to fill his seat in the Senate.

Senator Smoot, in his capacity as Chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, has revived discussion of suggestions that the Government sponsor a conference in Washington of State tax officials to work out an agreement under which the federal government would limit itself to levying income taxes, leaving it to the states to levy inheritance and estate taxes. While not opposing such a plan, President Coolidge thinks that it would not prove feasible because of the many divergent views among the states. Democratic leaders in Congress have like-wise thrown cold water on the scheme for the same reason.

The tax problem continues to hold the center of the stage, with Secretary Mellon slowly but surely winning over leaders of both parties and of all lines of business and industry to his view that the only way to revise the federal tax system is to virtually eliminate the surtaxes on big incomes so as to leave capital free of any uses to which it might be put. Mellon has not decided whether or not he will have a definite tax plan to submit to Congress in December, but he is working on the problem quietly with those members of the Senate and House who will be directly responsible for framing the new tax reduction bill. Among those who have been over to Mellon's proposal for the reduction of the surtaxes Senator Underwood of Alabama, former Democratic leader of the Senate.

Both the President and his ex-Secretary of State, Charles Evans Hughes, are leaning strongly toward the states rights doctrine, long the watchword of the Democratic party. In public speeches they have both declared that the assertion of sovereignty by the States is one of the things that is needed if the American Republic is to continue to operate for the best interests of all the people. One of the ideas in the President's mind in this connection is that the Federal Government would be able to save a lot of money—millions of dollars, in fact—if the states did not accept federal doles for road building and other purposes, raising the money themselves in accordance with their own individual needs.

The President and most of the White House force leaves Washington this week for Massachusetts, there to spend the rest of the summer on the coastal estate of Frank Stearns. By telegraph and special messengers the President will keep in touch with the affairs in Washington, including the debt funding negotiations which are to start this month with Italy and Belgium. Italy owes the United States more than two billion dollars and Belgium nearly half a billion. They are the first of the European debtors, in addition to Great Britain, to make an actual attempt to pay. France still continues to be a problem. Mr. Coolidge is hopeful that they will soon work out the French debt but is not sure if France's foreign credit is to be protected.

THE ARMY OF NEW CITIZENS.

Many years have passed since some of us received our High School or College diplomas and with brave hearts marched out to meet what the great world had in store for us. Some of us have slowly but persistently put one foot above the other on the ladder of success in various lines; some of us have slipped and stumbled and some of us have meted out easy grooves and become contented with what is—but all of us are better Americans, better citizens, better fitted for life because of the training is higher ideals received at the hands of our teachers.

We who have been over the road think that there are no short cuts to success. It must be lived in life. Each oncoming generation must learn its own lessons, purchase its own knowledge with the coin of experience and give the way for the next generation.

During the month of June the thousands of High Schools, Colleges, universities, seminaries and academies will send out into the world innumerable graduates mentally equipped for life's duties, but it remains to be seen whether their characters have been developed as carefully as their minds have been trained. Physical and moral development is equally important with mental, and in this the young man and woman should keep before them the examples of the founders of this great American Republic for what the world wants is men with principle underlying their experiences, men who stand for something in their community, whose very presence carries weight.

The young man and woman who today goes out to meet the world should keep constantly in mind that every foot of the way has been purchased by toll and suffering on the part of their forefathers for their benefit; they should understand that the struggle is not yet ended and it is their duty to "carry on" and pass on to those who follow a nation more firmly founded in the principles that culminated in the ordination of our Constitution.

They should be alert to the dangers—not from foreign-born citizens who come seeking liberty and freedom but from people of power and influence, in press and platform whose well-defined purpose has recently been rebuked by one Ambassador to Great Britain. Whether we endure or perish as a nation rests with our great army of new citizens.

NEWLY MARRIED COUPLES

Observant persons about now see many pairs of young people who by all the traditional signs are newly married. Even after they have brushed off all the rice and confetti, and removed all white ribbons from their luggage and automobiles, there are obvious signs of the new status to which they are trying to get accustomed.

Many of them are so riotously happy that they are not anxious for concealment, in fact rather wish to advertise that fact to an admiring world.

And yet in spite of all that, the world may not look wholly smooth even to their rosy path. The majority of folk nowadays are used to having a rough way, and when two young people get together, there may be some sparks. They may be silly to let such rifts grow deeper. The happiness that comes from mutual forbearance is infinitely greater than anything they lose by such adjustments.

THE FARM BOY'S EDUCATION

One of the difficulties in the way of rural development has been that the average farm boy has not had as good education as the average boy in the towns and cities. This is not so much because of faults in the rural schools, as because the farm boy's work is so valuable to his parents, that he is very apt to be taken out of school, or kept at home so much that he falls behind in his classes.

Some farmer's families are afraid to educate their boys, for fear that it will take their interest away from their farm home so that they will never return to it. But the result is often just opposite to what they desire, as these half educated boys are unable to see any way in which they can make farming pay, so that at the first opportunity they leave home. It would have been better policy, if they had wanted to keep those fellows at home, to have given them more education, of a type fitted to country educations of course.

If we are going to put the rural community on a strictly modern basis, the boys who naturally would grow up on farms must be given a reasonable amount of education. Their work is going to need just as much brains as is necessary in any line of business, in fact rather more.

If they try to struggle with the problems of modern agricultural production without the kind of equipment and abilities the city boy has, he is bound to fail. The chances are pretty strong that they will make a failure of it.

It is a great temptation for a farm family which has a good active boy of high school age in Boone-co., to keep that fellow out of school, to help on the farm work, in these times when the money is so tight. Such a policy is harmful to the boy's future, and it also works against the interest of the community. We should all try to influence our farmer friends not to do it.

A LAND OF WEALTH

Income tax figures for 1925 are now completed and they show that the incomes of those who paid these taxes totaled the vast sum of over $26,000,000,000 which is $3,000,000,000 more than during the boom of 1920. Figures like these demonstrate that in spite of the great wealth and that it is making steady progress.

There is a vast reservoir of wealth in this country, and if business runs slack for a few months, it means simply that the people are economizing a little and getting ready to buy freely a little later. Figures like these should give the business men of Kentucky plenty of incentive to go ahead with enterprises which they have had in mind.

LOUISVILLE, GIRL, 19, ELECTROCUTED IN BATH

SHORT CIRCUIT OF VIBRATOR FATAL WHEN VICTIM DIPS HAND IN WATER

Tragedy Occurs to Lorena Morrison, on Birthday Anniversary—Twin Sister Discovers Body.

Louisville.—Lorena Morrison hadn't been in the bathroom at her home more than five minutes when her mother knocked at the door for admittance. But Lorena, it developed quickly, was dead—dead on her nineteenth birthday—having been electrocuted by a small vibrator she was using to massage her neck.

It was by chance that the mother went to the door. Lorena and her twin sister, Helena, both telephone operators, were to help their mother clean their flat. Lorena decided to bathe first and to massage her neck because of a stiffness on the left side. She was filling the tub with water and, while waiting on it, was massaging her neck as she sat on the side of the tub. She had removed all of her clothing except an undergarment. Her mother, Mrs. J. L. Morrison, desiring to get something from the room, knocked.

"Lorena," she called on receiving no reply. She waited a moment and called again, "Lorena! Please let me in."

The unheeded calls attracted Helena. She peered through the keyhole. Lorena was crouched in the tub. Helena heard a splash as she started for the rear door leading onto a porch, on which faces the bathroom window. She grabbed an ice pick as she passed through the kitchen and with it pried open the window. She noticed, as she climbed through, that Lorena's position in the tub was changed since she had looked through the keyhole. Helena opened the door at once.

Mrs. Morrison and the twin thought at the first glance that Lorena had fainted. They paid no attention to the vibrator still clutched in Lorena's hand and still held against her neck. Mrs. Morrison called upstairs to Mrs. Marian Loughridge, owner of the building, and Miss Margaret Simms, next door. They lifted Lorena from the bath tub and Mrs. Morrison summoned Dr. H. C. Hermann while the remaining two attempted to revive the victim with ammonia water.

Dr. Hermann saw at a glance that nothing could be done. Nevertheless, he called Dr. H. H. Hagan and after fifteen minutes they struggled to restore life. Capt. John Loran, with his ungunmotor squad, were as powerless.

It is believed that Lorena, while massaging her neck, dipped her hand into the water to determine whether it was too hot or too cold, and that this resulted in the short-circuit through the vibrator and caused her to lose her balance and fall into the tub.

H. Masterson, general trouble foreman for the Louisville Gas & Electric Company, determined by an investigation that the electric wires in the house, as in all other residences, carry 110 volts. But Lorena, by touching the water while using the vibrator, caused the entire voltage to pass through her body.

"Her body was discolored when I arrived," Dr. Hermann said. "From the time I saw her in the tub until the time they got her out the current was going through her body."

The commission made some blanket raises in Letcher County, and in its answer denied it assessed the property beyond its fair cash value as alleged in the petition. The commission said the blanket raises should stand.

What America Needs Is to Hold Its Ancient and Well-Charted Course

By PRESIDENT CALVIN COOLIDGE, Memorial Day Address.

WHAT America needs is to hold its ancient and well-charted course. Our country was conceived in the theory of local self-government. It has been dedicated by long practice to that wise and beneficent policy. It is the foundation principle of our system of liberty. It makes the largest promise to the freedom and development of the individual. Its preservation is worth all the effort and all the sacrifices that it may cost.

It cannot be denied that the present tendency is not in harmony with this spirit. The individual, instead of working out his own salvation and securing his own freedom by establishing his own economic and moral independence by his own industry and his own self-mastery, tends to throw himself on some vague influence which he denominates society and to hold that in some way responsible for the sufficiency of his support and the morality of his actions. The local political units likewise look to the states, the states look to the nation and nations are beginning to look to some vague organization, some nebulous concourse of humanity, to pay their bills and tell them what to do. This is not local self-government. It is not American.

If we permit some one to come to support us we cannot prevent some one coming to govern us. If we are too weak to take charge of our own morality, we shall not be strong enough to take charge of our own liberty. If we cannot govern ourselves, if we cannot observe the law, nothing remains but to have some one else govern us, to have the law enforced against us and to step down from the honorable abiding place of freedom to the ignominious abode of servitude.

If these principles are sound, two conclusions follow. The individual and the local, state and national political units ought to be permitted to assume their own responsibilities. Any other course in the end will be subversive both of character and liberty. But it is equally clear that they in their turn must meet their obligations. If there is to be a continuation of individual and local self-government and of state sovereignty, the individual and locality must govern themselves and the state must assert its sovereignty. Otherwise these rights and privileges will be confiscated under the all-compelling pressure of public necessity for a better maintenance of order and morality. The whole world has reached a stage in which, if we do not set ourselves right, we may be perfectly sure that an authority will be asserted by others for the purpose of setting us right.

Permanent Court of International Justice and the Coming Congress

By KENNETH D. McKEELAR, Senator From Tennessee.

The Permanent Court of International Justice was first provided for in an instrument sponsored by Woodrow Wilson. It was afterward fashioned, under authority of the treaty, by a committee consisting of the League of Nations, consisting of able and distinguished world lawyers, one of the strongest of such committee members being Elihu Root of New York. The protocol providing for the adherence of the United States to the court, with certain reservations, was approved by Charles Evans Hughes as secretary of state under President Harding.

President Harding then submitted the protocol to the senate with a message, recommending its ratification. The senate did not act, and later President Coolidge resubmitted the protocol, with the reservations attached, to the senate for ratification and recommended its ratification. Besides, our adherence to the court has the endorsement of both the great political parties in their last national platforms. We cannot afford to stay out of a court endorsed by all the rest of the world having as its purpose world peace.

I am unequivocally for the ratification of the protocol providing for our entrance. I hope it may be promptly ratified on the assembling of the senate in December, and I believe it will be.

Only the People Can Halt the Centralization of Power at Washington

By LEE S. OVERMAN, Senator From North Carolina.

Nationalize! Centralize! These seem to be the slogans of individuals who do not understand what the fundamental American system is, and who would like to change our system after a foreign pattern. Why we fought the Revolution to escape a concentration of power unwisely used. Our forefathers were determined that they would make no such mistake in America. Power was to be wisely distributed and jealously guarded.

The tendency toward centralization at Washington was critically observed more than a century ago, but there has been little to halt the onward march.

But one thing will halt it—the American people; they alone can halt it. When they see their home affairs taken away from them by one, and intrusted to the tender and distant mercies of bureaucratic administration, they are going to resurrect democratic doctrine on this question, and adopt it. States' rights is no longer a partisan nor a sectional but an American doctrine in which even Republicans have come to believe. Washington itself will be forced by the very burden which centralization imposes, to warn the people not to be misled in giving their rights. Not every problem that faces the country can be met by the simple expediency of more federal legislation.

Ways in Which the Men Are in Danger of Losing Their Masculinity

By DR. CHARLES G. SHAW, New York University

So much time and attention has been given to women's intrusions into the realms peculiar to the masculine sex, and so great has been the fear of her losing her femininity, that the observers (men, of course) have failed to note the myriad ways in which the men are in danger of losing their masculinity.

If men had continued to wear whiskers like the old-style congressman women would never have dreamed of trying to look masculine. But the men were lured by the modern barber shop and tempted by the safety razor. They determined to make themselves look like ladies. The barber shop became a beauty parlor, where a man could spend a day's wages for a shave, haircut, shampoo, hair oil, facial massage, manicure and cure for baldness. The beauty parlor is only an imitation of the barber shop, and does not ring up a fraction of the money which men spend on their beauty.

The same effeminization appears in connection with smoking. If men had stuck to pipe and cigar there would have been no women smokers, but when the men changed to cigarettes, the women puffed along with them.

Colonial Memories Live Again in Carpenters' Hall Anniversary Celebration

There was undoubtedly some festive brushing up on the data of our historical landmarks when the name of Carpenter's hall reappeared in the dispatches a short time ago. from the depths of the Long Philadelphia Division, as the scene of a solemn convention.

In the occasion of the one hundred and fifty anniversary of the first Continental congress and the two hundred anniversary of the founding of the company that built the hall, more than a century and a half ago. Familiar to every school-boy are the names of Faneuil hall in Boston, the "Cradle of American Liberty," and Independence hall in Philadelphia, where the great Declaration was adopted. But Carpenter's hall, for some reason or another, has been allowed to slip back into the suburbs of patriotic memories, although it is entitled to an equal place in the trinity of historic halls sacred to the beginnings of American freedom and the crystallization of its doctrines. It was in Faneuil hall that the first keynotes of liberty found expression. It was at Independence hall that the Declaration of Independence was proclaimed to the world. But it was at Carpenter's hall that the initial movement toward a union of the colonies was staged in the first Continental congress, in 1774, and it was there, too, 18 years later, that the representatives of the new republic met to fashion the greatest document of modern times—the Constitution of the United States of America.

Carpenter's hall was the guildhall of the Worthy and Honorable Association of Carpenters and Architects of pre-Revolutionary days. This association, known as the Carpenter's company, was founded in Philadelphia 50 years before the voices of protest against the misrule of the motherland began to find expression in the American colonies. It is still in existence. And the old hall, which had been completed a few years before the meeting of the first congress of the colonies, still stands a monument to the honest labor and the esthetic tastes of the artisans who constructed it. Thousands pass it daily, without a thought, perhaps, of the significance of Carpenter's hall in American history. It is hidden away among more pretentious modern structures at the end of a court that leads into Chestnut street, between Third and Fourth streets. Its main entrance was once on Walnut street, but the buildings of a later date have blocked the way, so that today one approaches the venerable old building by way of the Chestnut street court, which really leads up to the back door.

The building is said to be, for its time, an architectural gem. It is built of brick in the form of a Greek cross, and all four sides present a perfect symmetry of design. Windows of the colonial period are topped by beautiful white marble keystones and the doors, surmounted by similar embellishments, are said to be of rare architectural beauty. Little patches of lawn abutting on the street preserve a Quaker-like simplicity of the exterior. Within the hall are preserved some of the chairs in which sat the delegates to that fateful first convention of the representatives of the embryonic republic and on its walls is the inscription: "Within these walls Henry, Hancock and Adams inspired the delegates of the colonies with nerve and alacrity for the tolls of war, resulting in national independence." Fine colonial stairways lead to the upper story, and although the building has undergone some internal changes, the old-time atmosphere redolent of the stirring memories of the fathers, still haunts the halls and corridors of the old place. It must have made a most harmonious setting for that group of modern delegates who met there recently, garbed in Continental costumes, each representing one of the states that, at that ancient day, to re-enact by the dim light of tallow candles the historic scenes of 150 years ago.

Convention of Religious Freedom. It is recalled, too, with appropriate significance to some of the political problems of the present day that the first Continental congress and the Constitutional convention were not the only fundamentals of American liberty that were nurtured in Carpenter's hall. It was here that the first steps toward the establishment of absolute religious freedom, as one of the cornerstones of the new commonwealth, were taken.

While the congress was in session, there came the startling news that Boston had been fired upon by the British ships—a rumor that caused great excitement, but it proved to be untrue. In a few days there arrived a courier with the familiar name of Paul Revere. "By Paul Revere," says the Boston Evening Post of September 28, 1774, "who returned from Philadelphia last Friday evening, we have the following important intelligence."

The news he had brought to the congress was that General Gage had sent the powder magazines in Boston, and the "important intelligence" he brought back was the resolution of the congress pledging to their "suffering countrymen of Massachusetts Bay" the support of the first congress of the United Colonies.

The congress convened on September 5 and adjourned on October 28. Out of that session came the first declaration of rights and while a semblance of loyalty was still maintained in respectful addresses to the king and to the English people, the first step toward national independence had been taken. The colonies had asserted their right to assemble and form a union and to take into their own hands the means to enforce the rights they demanded. When that congress adjourned, the country knew that a fight was inevitable and the colonies began to prepare for its coming—and it was not long delayed. Within a few months the shot that was heard around the world was fired and there was an end forever to petitions and pleasings. The next congress made Colonel Washington the commander in chief of the armies of the new American nation.

MOTORTRUCK BIG HELP TO FARMER

Economical Movement of Live Stock and Other Produce to Markets.

In less than two years this country has witnessed an amazing development in transportation over our highways. Economical movement of live stock and other produce from the farm, and the increasing shipments of various kinds of freight by motortruck has become a constantly growing problem for the road builder. Transportation in this country has a direct bearing upon most of the problems which the American people must meet and solve. The farm, with its foodstuffs, must be brought closer to the city buyers. The farmer must be able to sell his produce more nearly direct to the consumer. The economical transportation of freight by motortruck should be encouraged and aided in so far as it does not deprive the railroads of their just share of the business. Interwoven with this problem of transportation is the fact that the motortruck, if properly developed, will go a long way toward solving our transportation problems, and bringing about a natural economic solution of how to bring the farm and its produce closer to the city consumer, and how to adequately relieve our existing transportation problem.

Purpose of Truck. The motortruck is here to stay. The sole purpose of the truck is to carry loads—anything and everything we eat and wear or in other ways use—over the road. Out of this change in transportation has come "truck traffic," of which we speak just as easily as though it had always been with us. Truck traffic requires three things: the truck, the goods to be hauled, and the road. Just as the development of railroad motive power progressed beyond the development of railroad roadbed, so has the development of the motortruck business developed beyond the ability of the highways for which it was primarily intended.

Damage Done by Truck. Because the roads have not been ready to withstand that sort of traffic, there has been an uproar in some sections of the country against the motortruck. There are those who claim that in spite of all that the truck has achieved, its return to the public does not compensate for the damage which it has done to highways never built in anticipation of its coming. Here and there legislation of various kinds has been proposed to limit speed and weight of the truck and the load which it may carry. In other words, instead of building the road to fit the load, extremists have taken various measures to block progress of a highway development that must be provided for because it is a natural development of our transportation system and because it is here to stay.

Our present roads are built to carry a certain load. Over 90 per cent of our roads today were not built to carry heavy traffic. Neither were our railroads originally built for the traffic and rolling stock that today they must withstand.

Low Gear Effective

In driving down steep grades various resistances may be utilized to keep the car under control. If the engine is kept running and the gears are in high, there is only slight resistance. This may be increased by shifting into second speed and further increased by shifting into first. When still further resistance is needed to maintain a check on the progress of the car and it is not desired to use the brakes, the ignition may be shut off and the throttle closed. By opening the throttle, increased resistance is still further increased. The maximum of resistance and the best control on a dangerously steep hill may be obtained by shifting into first, switching off the ignition and applying the brakes at intervals.

Automobile Now Tamed Neighborhood Expander

The automobile has made neighborhood a bigger term. With a good car it is as easy to visit your friend ten miles distant as it used to be to call on one within sight of your home. Not only has the automobile enlarged the neighborhood; it has in a sense made the whole country one neighborhood, and broken down sectional lines.

It is an interesting study during the touring season to note the states from which cars bring parties of the Union will be found represented in every popular touring section. Those who travel by automobile come into more intimate touch with the country than those who travel by train. The car goes right by the door; the life of the people unfolds in an ever-changing panorama.

The motorist who keeps his eyes open can get a knowledge of the country and the people excited only by that of the pedestrian as he moves at his snail-like pace. Added knowledge along this means the break-down of sectional lines. Give credit, then, to the automobile as a unifying influence in national life.

Tire Talk Recommended as Superior Lubricator

Tire talk, rather than graphite and other oily preparations, makes the best lubricator between the inner tube and the casing.

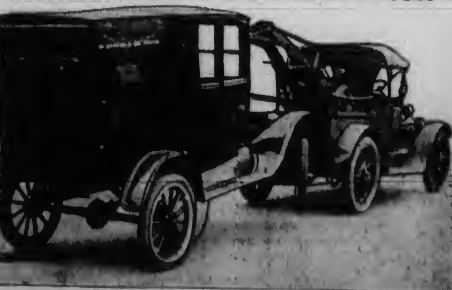

Motorists are cautioned, however, to exercise care in the use of tire talk, as too much is fully as damaging as too little. Too free use of the talk—a special prepared soapstone for tire use—will cause a quantity of the power collecting in one place, generate heat, give the tube a soft and bubbly appearance and form a weak spot. The talk should be distributed evenly over the surface; shifting or rotating the tube is a simple and efficient method. Graphite is an excellent lubricator for tire subjected to extra heavy duty and excessive speeds. Racing drivers use graphite, but only after sifting through a sieve made of cheesecloth onto the revolving tube. This method is necessary, otherwise several flakes of graphite might accumulate in one point, thereby causing deterioration—the oil in graphite being a foe to rubber.

For the average motorist—for the man who does not run his car continuously, day in and day out, the judicious use of tire talk is strongly recommended.

Adjust Gap Distance on Spark Plug More Often

Experiment has shown that when the electrodes of a spark plug are formed to a sharp point, and a high-tension current passed through, the gap which the current will jump may be much greater than if the ends of the electrodes are formed blunt in the usual manner. This knowledge has been used on cars which have given trouble due to the plugs fouling from the oil. After the electrodes had been sharpened, they were set to the normal gap, after which they gave no further trouble from fouling. The probable explanation of this is that the oil does not collect so readily on the small points, or that the current cuts through the oil more easily. It will be necessary to adjust the gap distance more frequently as the small points burn away quicker than the blunt points.

FAKE EMERGENCY CARS OFTEN ARE USED

One of the greatest sources of worry for the New York police department is the matter of stolen automobiles. Annually thousands of cars are lost, and they make away with the machines. Fake emergency cars often are used. They drive up to the scene of an accident, or to a stalled machine, jack it up, hook it to the emergency car, and off it goes.

Buy Tubes as Carefully as you buy Tires

THERE are two ways a car owner can buy tubes. He can go out looking for price—and get it. Or he can buy tubes that will give his casings a chance to deliver the mileage that is built into them. U. S. Royal and Grey Tubes are built to give mileage and get mileage. They resist heat, hold their shape and retain their elasticity. To get all the mileage out of a new casing or to make an old casing last—put a U. S. Royal or Grey Tube inside it.

A TIMELY WARNING

Mr. B. C. Forbes, editor of Forbes Magazine, and the representative of "big business" is responsible for a scathing criticism of American money kings who while being kinsed and kow-towed by foreign nobility, have criticized their own country.

White it may be true that money monarchs have become more powerful than other monarchs, it is evident that some of them have had their heads turned by the flattery and adulations of the boot-licking and leg-pulling of the wiley Europeans.

The United States, which had no use for the old fashioned kind of kings has raised more of the new style kings than any other nation on earth. Kings and statesmen used to rule the world, but today batallions of dollars are a greater force than batallions of soldiers.

Mr. Forbes says: "Europe deposed monarchs. Americans will find ways and means of handling their own money monarchs if these money monarchs do not watch their step."

A Woman's Anniversary

Smith and Wellesley, two of the older colleges for women, are celebrating the 50th anniversary of their establishment this year, and these anniversaries are notable ones, because 50 years ago it was considered a very daring innovation to give women the same scholastic work that the men were taking.

The idea that a woman's college could offer just the same courses as were included in the curriculum of a men's college, made a stir in the educational world. The opinion was expressed that the minds of these girl students would break down under the severe strain and that they could never carry the same mental burden that the men could swing.

It was a surprise when it was discovered that these girls could do just the same work that the young men could handle. The result of this experiment had a big effect, and was a great factor in a different viewpoint regarding women.

It was seen that if they could do the same work, they could compete in business fields on even terms. Hence it was a logical result when the girls began to come out of their home seclusion, and take jobs in stores and offices and factories, until in many fields they are more numerous than men.

Also the extension of suffrage to women was a natural outcome of this educational discovery. If the women could solve the problems of mathematics and languages and philosophy as well as the men could, there was no essential reason why they should not be able equally to solve the problems of politics, given time with which to familiarize themselves with such conditions. So these 50 years have seen more change in the position of women, relative to men, than had occurred in the previous 500.

WILL WHISKERS COME BACK?

New York Transit Commissioners have granted women the right to smoke on all surface cars. The act of smoking will not attract so much attention as the art of lighting a match on a windy day in an open car. At that she may be as proficient as when she alights backwards—but its all in the day's business. One by one all the old male institutions are falling before the advance of their sisters—the cocktail hour, barber shops, one-piece bathing suits, smoking cars, knickers, coats, collars and ties—pretty soon it will be so difficult to distinguish one sex from another that we'll either have to wear labels, or go back to whiskers.

The work of the college year will be considered highly satisfactory by students whose teams won baseball and foot ball.

Claimed too many people are deaf to the call of patriotism, but anyway they can hear the July Fourth fire crackers all right.

MAKING A COUNTRY TOWN

Any country town is just what the people make it. It can be a sleepy sort of a place which has been in a rut for 25 years and will be there for 25 more. Of it can be a bright and wide awake place, thoroughly up with the times.

All that is necessary to accomplish the latter aim, is to have the leadership of a few active people who will go ahead and suggest lines for development. The average run of people are willing to follow good movements, but they lack initiative, and they are fearful of being laughed at, so that you can not depend upon them to take the lead. But it is amazing how much co-operation can be secured from such folks, if a few leaders will go ahead and plan the things that need to be done.

Two ships have been chartered to convey more than a thousand physicians and surgeons on a trip to Vienna and other celebrated European clinics for the purpose of acquiring new ideas in the technique of surgery. Dr. Frank Mayo, of Rochester, Minn., who insists that our surgeons as a rule are amateurs, heads the delegation.

While the young men are looking for swivel chair jobs, the farmers are hollering for harvest help.

According to a report just issued by the National Industrial Conference Board American wage earners on a basis of what his pay will buy for him, is paid more than twice as much as his London competitor, three times as much as Holland workers, and four times as much as Berlin workers and five times as much as the industrial worker in Italy.

After deploring the rapid way in which cities grow, many people proceed to send money to those cities to help them grow faster.

An eastern business woman, advertising a third-of sale, cut off a third of a dollar bill and pasted the balance in her window, to illustrate the argument. She was arrested for mutilating money and is held for court under bail.

Many of our folks are so burning with patriotism on July Fourth, that they proceed to burn up the roads with their speeding automobiles.

No Nman can become wise who does not appreciate the value of wisdom.

The following articles entitled "High Water of 1884" and "Warsaw in the Seventies," which were taken from the Warsaw column of the Walton Advertiser, we think might be interesting to the older river inhabitants of Boone county:

HIGH WATER OF 1884

Do you recollect the high water of 1884? Many of our older citizens do. At one time it was thought the water would entirely surround the town and it almost did. Some men in a skiff towed completely around Warsaw with the exception of a small strip of the Warsaw and Sparta turnpike near the intersection of the Warsaw and Sparta and Warsaw and Glencoe pike in that high water. To say that they had completely circumvented the town they drew the boat across the pike and rowed completely around it. The water in the Linnell Hotel—now the Argonne—was over a foot deep. Almost everything imaginable passed down the river on the boom of the Ohio flood—barns, houses, chicken coops, barges, skiffs, "John" boats, etc. No packets could run on this big flood as there was no place to land, the waves being completely submerged. Only relief boats passed up and down giving succor to the unfortunate, and they could only land at out-of-the-way places. The depots in the cities were flooded and it was over a week before supplies of any kind could be obtained. The smaller towns in that year it rained almost incessantly for two weeks, pouring floods into the Ohio from every creek. And what a mess of debris was left after the water receded. It was over a year before things resumed their natural condition after this great flood. Warsaw being in the main on high land surf—deeper than most towns.

WARSAW IN THE 70'S

Warsaw in the Seventies was sure a busy town. The main street leading to the river was the main wharf, there being no railroad at that time. All freight consisting of tobacco, cattle, hogs and sheep was placed on this thoroughfare. Lines of tobacco in hogheads stretched on each side of the street from the river to High street. Cattle, hogs and sheep were penned in waiting sheds, the packets to relieve the congestion and there were from four to six boats going up and down the river each day or night. The steamboats in those days did not have electric lights but depended on the old "fire brake" and the coal oil head lights of the steamers to guide the work of the roughest about at night. Packets Cincinnati bound would sometimes lay at the wharf for over a half day, taking on all kinds of freight. At times the stock would be taken aboard and then the freight piled up to make a barrier. Then at other times the freight would be taken aboard in lots, then a drove of hogs and then another consignment of freight, and so on until the boat was laden to the water's edge, the water would wash over the deck at times. Many freight piles and stock along the river would have to be abandoned as the steamers were what was termed "blocked off" or in other words there was no room for more freight of any kind. Some times a farmer would have to stay by his herd of hogs, cattle or sheep for days waiting for a boat to take them, having to rustle around for feed for the animals. In low water no boats of any freight capacity could run for weeks at a time and the farmer would either have to drive their stock overland to the markets or wait for a "raise" in the river. At times the steamboats loaded to the guards would get stuck on a bar when the river was falling and would remain in that position for days until water came from above or another steamer of lighter draught would come to their rescue with "lighters"—barges on which to load freight to lighten the steamer so it could get over the bars. In low water the steamers would at times carry "lighters" with them to keep from drawing too much water. In waiting for boats in those days passengers and freight would have to wait days because of fog, wind or low water. Excessive windy weather in the winter and spring months would compel steamers to tie up to the bank for the pilots could not hold the boats off the banks with the high winds blowing. When the steamers arrived at Cincinnati or Louisville the tired crews would be paid off and another crew employed to unload the boat. When starting on the return trip another crew would be employed to make the trip—most of the men that were paid off returning, and if they did not others would be employed in their stead. They were a "happy-go-lucky" lot of steamboat men in those days, who were fed like kings, that is the officers. But the deck crew got good food also, but their's was dished up in one pan to each man with a tin cup of black coffee on the side. It was the same as the

ONE HUNDRED YEARS AGO IN COUNTY COURT

At a county court begun and held at the court house in Burlington on Monday, the fourth day of July, 1825. Present—Cave Johnson, Moses Scott and Reuben Graves Esqs Lewis Riddell.

It being represented to the court that the jailer of this county has in his custody a black man named Grace supposed to be a runaway, that he has been in custody as such for three months and has advertised him as the law directs. On motion it is therefore ordered that the jailer hire out to the highest bidder said negro, on the first Monday in August next for the shortest time that any person will take him and pay therefor a sufficient sum to defray the jail fees and other expenses incurred in taking up said negro.

The court proceeded to appoint the officers of the next annual election. Whereupon that Nelson and Reuben Graves are appointed judges and Chas. Chambers as clerk of the election to be held at Burlington, and Benj. Stephens and Thomas Conly are appointed as judges and Chasteen Scott as clerk of the election at the precinct.

The court proceeded to fix the rates to be allowed the tavern keepers of this county, which are as follows: For breakfast, dinner or supper (each) 18¢; Lodging per night, 8¢; whisky per half pint 8¢; peach brandy per half pint 8¢; wine or French brandy per half pint 37¢; Rum per half pint 37¢; Gin per half pint 18¢; Cherry Bounce per half pint 12¢; Porter per quart 18¢; corn or oat meal 12¢; wheat and hay per horse 12¢; and 18¢; pasture per horse 12¢ and 12¢.

On motion of Whitfield Early, Sheriff of Boone county, Milton Garrett is admitted as deputy sheriff of this county, who took the oath by law required.

On motion of Ben-G. Willis it is ordered that John Terrill, John Norris, Corcalus Apbuhl and William E. Ewing be and they are hereby appointed, who or any three of whom, after being sworn, to view and mark out the most convenient way for a road from Petersburg to the ferry at Bellevue and to make report.

Ordered that court be adjourned until court in course.

Signed Lewis Riddell.

The records show that one hundred years ago that Whitfield Early was the sheriff of Boone county and that C. H. Gaines was the jailer.

AN APOLOGY FROM THE EDITOR

For several reasons this issue of the RECORDER is an extremely inferior one. The first and most important is that our office has been placed in a state of commotion and disarrangement that might cause some plants to "cut out" one issue altogether. This was caused by certain repairs which we are endeavoring to make. Another reason is that the light and power service we have been getting for the past week has been such that our type setting machine has been rendered practically useless.

In other words we "got out of the paper," but under such strenuous difficulties that we wish to apologize for it.

LAST OF LARGE FAMILY

Miss Ella Hance, the last of an old pioneer family, passed away on Wednesday, July 1, at 2 p. m., at her home in Gallatin county near South Fork. Her demise was the result of a lingering illness of dropsy for over two years. She was the last one of eleven of the Hance family and a faithful member of the South Fork Christian church. She is survived by four nephews, nieces and a host of relatives and friends.

Funeral services were conducted from her home after which the remains were laid to rest in the family cemetery by Undertaker C. Scott Chambers and daughter.

In China a coolie works ten or twelve hours and moves one ton one mile in one day. We call that "cheap" labor. But in America we move one ton one mile for one cent.

Junior Club Camp Called Off

Our club camp, which has been scheduled for July 13-17 is one of the biggest treats that could be arranged for country boys and girls. The Federal Government and State are cooperating to make this camp possible.

Because of the dances which are being held at the Florence Fair Grounds the camp will be held there this year. The Harvest Home grounds have been offered and will make an excellent camping ground.

LATER—However it has been decided to call the camp off for next week because of sufficient number of boys and girls enrolling at this time and the inconvenience of changing the grounds.

Arrangements are being made for a camp to be held a little later in the season providing the College can make it fit into their flock owgok. Three different makes of lime stone pulverizers, operated by three types of tractors, will be demonstrated by factory representatives at the time and Legume meeting at the Experiment Station at Lexington August 5-6. Twenty-five tons or more of limestone will be ground, so that farmers can judge for themselves the relative merits of the different machines.

Factory representatives and crops and soil specialists from the Experiment Station will be present to answer questions regarding lime machine and the use of lime on soil. There also will be a display of manufactured and home-made lime spreaders. These will be in operation so visitors may see how they work. Among the questions which the demonstration will answer will be those relative to the fineness of lime size and makes of crushers, size of tractor to use, cost of grinding etc. The Experiment Station and various machinery companies will put on these demonstrations for the benefit of the many farmers of central Kentucky interested in the use of lime and the growing of alfalfa, soybeans, lespedeza and other legumes.

OHIO BOWS TO KENTUCKY

The Extension Service News, published by Ohio State University, recently printed a story about Kentucky forging ahead of Ohio in the purebred sires campaign, and taking first place among all states in the campaign to eliminate scrub sires. The Ohio story quotes from the government report as follows:

"The intensive campaign put on by Wayland Rhoads, College of Agriculture, field agent in animal husbandry, and his co-workers in Kentucky during the last year resulted in placing that state at the head of the list as far as the number of participants in the better sires movement is concerned."

"The sustained character of the effort is evidenced by the fact that year ago Kentucky was third in the state list. At that time Ohio held the premier position with 736 more enrollments than Kentucky, while Virginia was second. During the twelve months, however, Kentucky has added exactly 1,000 new members."

At the close of business June 30, the books of the State Auditor and Treasurer's office, Frankfort showed a cash balance in the treasury of $6,986,722.68. Outstanding warrants total $11,325,523.25 of which $7,190,617.17 was in cash warrants. Cash in the state road fund was $5,649,645.02.

BURLEY PRIMARY TO BE HELD THIS AUTUMN

Lexington, Ky., July 2.—Adoption of the same district boundaries for the election this fall as were used in the election last year and a thorough and general discussion of the proposed new sign-up contract of the Burley Tobacco Growers' Co-operative Association were the chief features of the thirty meeting of the board of directors of the association Wednesday. Routine business and reports from the heads of the various departments occupied the morning session of the board. The afternoon session was entirely devoted to the proposed new sign-up contract, each of the directors expressing his opinion in regard to what changes, if any, should be made in the agreement with the growers for the marketing of their crops during the term of the new sign-up.

Delivery of the fifteen million pounds of tobacco purchased earlier in the month by the R. J. Reynolds Tobacco Company was reported as having been completed and a resolution offered by Vice President Jas. N. Kehoe, favoring the establishment of a branch office of the federal department of commerce in Louisville, was adopted unanimously. Disposition of a receiving house at Weston Missouri, not needed by the association, was left to the president and executive committee. A message of sympathy and condolence from his association to the board was ordered sent to Elliott Northcott, director for West Virginia, whose sister, Mrs. Naomi Everett, died at his home near Huntington on Monday.

Directors present at the meeting, almost all of whom discussed the contract for the proposed new sign-up were President and General Manager James C. Stone, Vice President and Executive Committee: H. K. Bourne of New Castle; J. Age Robert W. Bingham of Louisville; Ed. Clarke of Paris; Geo. Roth of Ohio; Perry B. Gaines of Carrollton; Dawson Chambers of Walton; J. H. Souley of Flemingsburg; C. O. Graves of Georgetown; J. L. Zaring of Shelbyville; L. L. Wells of Cave City; Mahlon Gabhart of Missouri; Martin Light of McKaysburg; J. E. Robinson of Lancaster; W. O. Prostan of Indiana; Chambers Perry of Mt. Olivet and P. R. McKinnis of Bloomfield.

The report of the committee on re-districting, which was composed of P. R. McKinnis, Ed. Burke and Bush W. Allen was adopted without opposition and the call for the primary election this fall will be issued at the August meeting of the board.

OFFICER USES FIST ON UNRULY "SHINER"

Deputy Sheriff Herbert Snyder was called to the Hebron neighborhood last Thursday, it having been reported to him that a man was "beating up" his wife. When Snyder met the man on the road who had been described to him, he soon found out that he was slightly "piffling" or in other words intoxicated. He conducted the man whose name is McGinnis, to his wife, where an argument was started. When told by the officer to keep still McGinnis refused, Snyder finally finding it necessary to "cool him off" which he did, not with gun or "billy" but with that old fashioned mallet common known as the "shiner."

McGinnis' wife finally conveyed the information that her husband was a "moonshiner" and Snyder with Deputy Utz, who had been encountered on the road, went to the home of McGinnis, where a part of a still was found, McGinnis saying that the rest of it had been taken away. McGinnis was lodged in jail pending trial. It has been reported that McGinnis hit Snyder, but such is not the case, according to our best information he just "started" to hit him.

SIGN UP CAMPAIGN

The Burley Tobacco Growers Co-operative Association has announced a sign-up campaign to start soon. Every tobacco grower in the White Burley District is well aware of the benefits derived from this association. It should not take any electioneering to induce the farmers to sign the contract for another period of years. It would be the greatest calamity in the history of the state if the farmers did not continue this organization. What are you going to do Mr. Farmer? It is now square up to the growers and if they turn it down they will be the sufferers. The farmers of this county should weigh in with thoughtful forebears before they refuse to sign up.

BIG REVIVAL AT THE METHODIST CHURCH

The revival at the M. E. church is progressing nicely as Rev. Cropper is a very able speaker.

CANDIDATES AS THEY WILL APPEAR ON BALLOT

Entries in the Boone county political turf classic were formally closed last Thursday July 2. The closing of the lists finds Judge N. E. Riddell unopposed for reelection for county judge, Edwin M. Johnson of Walton unopposed for representative of Boone county Tax Commission and J. S. Cason County Tax Commissioner in the same fortunate condition for re-election to his office.

Three candidates are in the ring for sheriff, three for county clerk, three for State Senator, two for jailer and two for county attorney. Three candidates are in the ring talent which will go to the post on Saturday, August 1st.

There is quite a contrast to the races in the different magisterial districts as some of the districts boast of spirited contests between two or more candidates, while others had trouble in getting even one candidate to offer for the post, and still another is entirely destitute. The Walton and Verona magisterial post will necessarily be declared vacant therefore shifting the responsibility of appointment upon the Governor.

The Constance-Florence district has four candidates announced, Burlington-Bullittsville two, Union-Beaver one. A. S. Burcham of Bellevue is an eleventh hour candidate in Petersburg-Belleview district, while B. C. Kirtley is also a late starter in Rabbit Hash-Big Bone, while Joseph A. Huey being the only announced candidate in Union-Beaver, is nominated.

The drawing for position on the ballot took place last Tuesday and the candidates will occupy their respective positions on the ballot as follows:

- FOR SENATOR
HON. L. C. LITTELL
REV. J. A. LEE
C. P. HOGAN
- COUNTY COURT CLERK
MISS M. E. ROGERS
A. G. McMULLEN
NEWTON SULLIVAN JR.
- FOR SHERIFF

R. LEE HUEY
- FOR COUNTY ATTORNEY

RETIRED FARMERS

There is a bunch of retired farmers who have taken up their abode in Burlington to spend their remaining days in ease and comfort—of these some have passed the Biblical limit, while some by reason of strength have gone beyond the four-score years, who make the Farm Bureau their daily headquarters. Some days when this bunch gets together and are in a reminiscent mood, it is quite interesting to hear them relate experiences of years gone by. This bunch, mostly of the same political faith, but differing somewhat in their religious beliefs—one especially (a hard shell) and he is a strong believer in "that which hath been is now, and that which is to be hath already been." If there is anything in the old saying, "laugh and grow fat," Lloyd Weaver, the general manager of the Farm Bureau, champion horseshoe pitcher and marble getter, will weigh a ton ere the swallows take their southern flight.

C. E. White, the old political stationer of Burlington, has worn out several lead pencils figuring out the winners in the coming election and now has it down fine. He has corrected his figures and allowing for losses and gains of the voters who promise every candidate they meet, but reserve the right to change, he has the winners in the August primary named. But some of them may be changed after the vote is counted.

Mr. and Mrs. Geo. A. Porter, Mr. and Mrs. A. H. Jones, Stanley Easton and A. L. Stephens accompanied B. B. Hume to Detroit last Monday evening. They assisted Mr. Hume and other drivers in bringing back five Essex and five Hudson cars.

The folks who complain because machines are throwing them out of a job, might take hold and learn to run the machines.

In the cities they laugh at the "hick towns," but the hick towns put less property in hock than the smart city fellows do.

Wedding bells ringing merrily, while the crusty old bachelors wonder if the dinner bell will be equally prompt and joyous.

People are urged to study the constitution. Many have been studying it for some years to find ways to avoid complying with its provisions.

There are many millions of people who find out that a school or college diploma is valuable some years after it is too late for them to get it.

Claimed that the Senate is not likely to change its dilatory rules, but anyway when they are talking they aren't spending money.

Many important public buildings being started, and it is pleasing to learn that work can begin without having the president come on to excavate the first shovel of dirt.

Movement to restore the old fashioned home, but the children may not consent to have the woodshed and the saw horse re-established.

It is hoped that the alumni who return for the college graduations will be influenced by the relatively good example set by the students.

LA FOLLETTE

"Fighting Bob" LaFollette has made his last fight. In his battle with death, as in his battles for national reforms, he fought dogmatically, courageously, vigorously, putting every ounce of strength he had into the struggle, but the end came last Thursday in a heart attack. His last words expressed a regret that he had to go leaving so much work to be done or the people to whom he had given his entire life.

He was born June 14, 1855, near Madison, Wisconsin, and was a graduate of the University of Wisconsin and was admitted to practice law in 1880. The same year he was elected District Attorney of Danbury, and four years later was elected to the U. S. Senate.

For more than 40 years he has served on all the most important committees. It is claimed that the official records credit him with having fathered and fought for, and finally put on our statute books more really constructive laws than any other man in all the history of our government.

This, too, in the face of bitter opposition and nearly always representing a minority of the body. It is admitted that many things for which he fought through these years, have become today commonly accepted doctrine. Like Washington and Lincoln and John Paul Jones he never acknowledged defeat, never knew when he was licked. Perhaps the most pronounced characteristic of his long public life is the fact that he never compromised for place or for price—he never wavered in what he believed to be the right. This epithet would grace and honor the names of many another man whose memory is adorned with a meaningless halo.

It may be questioned whether any other man in public life could survive the experiences to which LaFollette was subject because of his opposition to America's participation in the late war. He was accused of filibustering against the arming of Merchant Ships, but the record shows that he was denied the one privilege that he considered his American right—the privilege of speaking on the subject. With Senator Newlands he opposed the railroad demand for 6 per cent guarantee on fictitious valuations but on Newlands' death he stood practically alone, the target for all the pent-up vituperation of treasury raiders but he stood to his guns. After the St. Paul speech the press and pulpit and Senate demanded his impeachment on the charge that he was pro-German. He was not impeached, but the press of today is not fair to his memory by neglecting to state that the Associated Press publicity acknowledged that he had been misquoted in the speech and apologized. During this most severe trial of his life he never wavered. Though the mention of his name in the press of the nation was taboo, he came back stronger than ever, so strong in fact that he gave both the major parties a real scare in the recent contest for the Presidency, receiving nearly 5,000,000 votes.

His fighting resilience, his absolute refusal to compromise or to quit gave the senator a character not likely soon to be duplicated in American public life and it will require a strong pair of shoulders to carry his mantle. His death is destined to have a greater effect upon political events of the next few years than has that of any other American within a decade.

In addition to his wife, who has been both pal and counselor during their 43 years of married life, he is survived by two daughters, Mrs. Fola Middleton of New York and Mrs. Ralph Sucher of Washington, and two sons, Philip of Madison and Robert, who has served as his father's secretary.

WORK FOR THE KICKERS

It is the usual rule that there are plenty of people in a country town who can see the things that ought to be done with perfect clearness. They spend much time in pointing out this or that fault, but they lack the energy to go ahead and do these things.

If you ask these folks to serve on some committee to accomplish something that needs doing, they will usually throw up their hands and declare that they could not do it.

It would do them good to take hold of some job of community work whether it be improving the grounds of some school, promoting a church or town picnic, organizing athletic among the young crowd, etc. They would find how much more satisfaction there is in taking hold and doing things, than in standing one side and finding fault.

Claimed this country faces a great wave of prosperity, and the market operators who have stocks to sell will say so anyway.

Some of these folks who are so full of desire to celebrate the national birthday, could do so very appropriately by setting out some trees along the streets of Burlington. Fact that they are planting 3,000 trout in some stream, is encouraging.

After Several Generations of Mining
Less Than 1% of Kentucky's Coal Supply Has Been Used—

Think of this!—Forty-five million tons of coal were mined in Kentucky last year—and a somewhat lesser tonnage has been taken out of the State each year for several decades—yet the surface of the State's reserve is barely scratched. Statisticians say that if every other mine in the United States were to be closed down, Kentucky could supply the Nation's needs for many years.

This gives the reader an idea of the importance of coal to every citizen, every taxpayer and every community in the State. This great supply of heat and power-producing fuel must be mined and marketed at a profit, or the very foundations of Kentucky's financial soundness will be shaken.

This coal is here, in Kentucky—your State—where coal wages, coal taxes and coal investments are largely responsible for good schools, good roads and other advantages you enjoy. The owners and miners must not be thrown out of business by the adding of special taxes and increased freight-rate handicaps; their coal must be sold in competition with coal mined in fields much closer to the great consuming markets—and to do this, production costs will not stand any increase, without bankruptcy for the industry.

Remember these facts when you discuss the proposed tonnage or production taxes on coal in Kentucky.

Experience Does Count

Our many years of funeral directing have given us a rich background of experience and a service that we are proud to offer. Funeral directing is a profession and art, and to be well done it must have a firm foundation of experience as a guide. That—we are able to offer.

Everything transpired beautifully at Harvest Home on the fourth, according to B. P. Zimmer and many of his satisfied customers.

From the number of catalogues that pass through the Burlington postoffice it would seem that quite a number of Boone county people are trading with mail order houses instead of trading at home. The young men who run after girl visitors that come to town should consider the advantages of patronizing home industries.

The sheriff and deputies for the new law have been putting the "kidnab" on moonshining and liquor peddling—three stills captured and destroyed last week and the operators lodged in the county bastle. A few months in jail and a few hundred fine has a tendency to put a quietus on this business.

The only difference in the boys of today and those of past generations is that automobiles have taken the place once filled by Old Dobbin, when he was the chief motive power for a nice rubber tired buggy, and there were blacksmith shops to get repairs instead of garages, but in this day and age there are filling stations where the motorist can get his gas tank filled on his auto, while the man at the wheel should he need an eye-opener and knows the signs, can get his tank filled by a filling station that walks around and carries his liquid in his pocket. Garages have knocked out the blacksmith shops—to a great extent, and moonshine stills have superseded the corner refreshment stands where a fellow for a nickel could quench his thirst with schmeer of amber colored liquid. But, those good old days have gone, and "every day in every way, we are getting better and better."

WHAT ABOUT ALFALFA?

Farmers who read agricultural journals widely have noted many statements about alfalfa growing which seemed to conflict in opinion. This is particularly true in regard to the relative value of different varieties. If the writer of an article happened to live in the northern part of the corn belt he was enthusiastic about the hardy strains, such as Grimm, Blatic, Cossack, and the like. If he happened to live in the latitude of Kentucky he probably stated that the common varieties appeared as valuable as the hardy ones.

There are alfalfa growers in Kentucky, however, who believe that the hardy strains are decidedly superior to the common, and so nothing else, even though the seed costs twice as much as the common

The Agricultural Experiment Station at Lexington has had a number of varieties of alfalfa growing side by side for five years, including the strains of common, Grimm, Orangeburg and Liscomb. These plots are still in good condition, and will be available for inspection at the two-day time and legume meeting which will be held at the station on August 5-6.

A comparative strain and variety test including important varieties of the corn belt, was begun this spring at another place on the station's farm. These plots will be of interest to alfalfa growers.

Any Party to Prevail Must Be Constructive Rather Than Obstructive

By CHARLES I. STENGLE, Representative From New York.

NEVER has there been a time in any country when self-interest was so intelligent as here and now. The great master minds of finance and commerce understand very clearly that their own eminence and safety depend on the well-justified hopefulness of wage earners and farmers and that they must act broadly and diligently on the teachings of the day and their own observation and sound judgment. Therefore, Mr. Speaker and gentlemen of the house, reliance for any permanent and extensive political success on class prejudice, envy, and resentment of large achievement has become ridiculous. It is horribly, tremendously absurd to be appealing to a proletariat which does not exist. None but demagogues or the "moody beggars, eager for a time of pell-mell havoc and confusion," described by Shakespeare more than 400 years ago desire to kindle and cater to the basest and most dangerous passions of human nature.

Any party to prevail in this country must be constructive rather than obstructive and progressive along high, orderly and sane lines. We are planted here on a continent, and our thoughts, to be effective, and our purposes, to command respect, must be continent-wide and world-wide.

We must cease acting and talking here for parochial popularity and the whimpered plaudits of local newspapers. We need less comedy and attempted comedy and more sturdy, stalwart, courageous common sense. We need to tear ourselves away from unnatural, immoral, grotesque and repulsive alliances between political dogma and theory long dead and political and economic monstrosities spawned stillborn on our land—between fine idealisms long ago vanished at the touch of hard experience and the fantastic dreams which perhaps may be realized in the far future when mankind has been purified and elevated beyond our present comprehension. We need to stand on our own feet and for definite, concrete, beneficial purposes which are possible of fulfillment and which we can comprehend ourselves and demonstrate to others.

The Cultivation of Memory Is Not the Primary Function of Education

By PRESIDENT J. G. HIBBEN, Princeton University.

Now, of course, it is necessary to cultivate memory. Without it the mind would be helpless. But it is not the primary function, and so it seems to me the system of college education which seeks to make young men slaves to memory is wanting in fundamentally important respects. Yet we have a great deal of that, far too much of it, in American higher education.

It is a reproach of our colleges that as a whole they seem to be teaching what past generations have thought, rather than how the present generation is to go about the business of thinking.

However, we seem today to have arrived at a point where we realize our tendencies are open to question and where we are giving thought to how we may better them. We are beginning to see that our primary function should be to stimulate the reasoning powers of our students, to develop in them the mental powers that will enable them to recognize a problem when they are faced with it and to assimilate it and study it from all sides, and to devise the best way of meeting it.

"The First Law of the American Public Schools Is 'Remember'"

By SCOTT NEARING, in the Modern Quarterly.

The mind may be used primarily as a storehouse or as a machine. Teachers who employ storehouse methods of instruction say, "remember!" Teachers who employ the reasoning method reiterate, "think!"

Incredible as it may appear to the uninitiated, it is quite possible for the ordinary teacher to go through the round of daily activity without taxing the reasoning faculties to any appreciable degree. Indeed, the American school system is so constructed that this is the line of least mental resistance.

The first law of the American public schools is "remember." The mind of the child is regarded as a storehouse, in which are placed the gleanings of the world—of language, of history, of science, of philosophy. The pupil who can store all of the pedagogical harvest in the assigned compartments receives a perfect mark and becomes the pride of the class. Thus the mind of the pupil is made more than a warehouse—it is a cold-storage warehouse, from which commodities are expected to emerge in the same condition as that in which they entered.

"We Can Have Almost Any Kind of Race of Human Beings We Want"

By A. E. WIGGAM, in "Fruit of the Family Tree."

We can have almost any kind of race of human beings we want. We can have a race that is ugly or beautiful, wise or foolish, strong or weak, moral or immoral. We can breed the race forward or backward, up or down. We can breed long noses or short ones, straight noses or crooked noses. We can breed the leoparded and the lopsided, mentally and physically. We can breed a race of bald heads, both inside and out.

A race of men who dream of beautiful women and who know them when they see them, who thus select these beautiful and intelligent women in marriage, are going to find their dreams literally come true in the living forms of their children. Heredity does hand down in the living minds and bodies the ideals that animated the marriage selections of past ages.

If these ideals of beauty, virtue and intelligence are low, the children will be low and ugly. If their ethical sense has been cultivated toward right ideals of beauty and character, the children will be the legacies in their souls and bodies of those dreams of human excellence.

Appropriations by Congress Likely to Increase Rather Than Decrease

By MARTIN B. MADDEN, House Appropriations Committee.

The country is growing in population and in its interests. The business of the nation, both foreign and domestic, is expanding, and with a prosperous future it is not unreasonable to expect that the expenditures of the government will go normally forward.

As industry and the individuals in the country prosper, the revenue of the government should increase and keep pace with the normal increase in expenditures, once we have eliminated by tax reduction the surplus which it is now believed will eventuate under present tax laws.

In my judgment the appropriations have practically reached the post-war low-water mark and from this year on we are likely to have increases in them rather than further decreases. The present congress has placed upon the statute books several new laws which will require increased outlays to carry them into execution.

FOREST FIRES ARE BIG SUMMER MENACE

Do you know that hundreds of thousands of dollars worth of valuable land is spoiled due to smoldering fires left burning after campers break camp and move to a new site? Forest fires are one of the greatest menaces in summer, and the majority are from carelessness. Photograph shows members of the forest commission, en route to a reported fire.

PROPER AMOUNT OF AIR IN TIRE

Amount Is Determined by Experts Whose Judgment Should Rule.

In the course of tire development, tire experiments have proven that among the most important factors in the proper treatment of tires is the adjustment of the ratio between the air pressure of the tires and the load to be carried. The engineers have made long and comprehensive studies of the proper amount of air to be used with certain loads. The life of the tires is actually lengthened and the service given is improved if these observations of the engineers are regarded.

Overloading Fault. Overloading is a common fault, and the disregard for careful adjustment of air pressure in the tires causes all sorts of tire troubles which are not attributable to the construction of the tire but to their use. The engineers and chemists are at work constantly improving the materials from which tires are made and the machinery for their production, but all of the principles back of the construction of the tire are based on maintaining an air pressure commensurate with the load to be carried and the design of the tire.

If the loads are increased, the tire must be made to conform, otherwise there is an insufficient amount of air in the tires for the load carried and this produces underinflation, which causes an unnatural wear on the tires. If the load is too light for the air pressure carried there is not the resiliency or buoyancy to the tires that there should be. This is particularly true of balloon tires, in which the variation of the air pressure is a matter to be carefully attended.

Good Treatment. Tires, like the motor of the automobile, respond to good treatment, and the good motorist is the one who will heed the best advice as to the care of the engine. He will use his automobile for years and the engine will actually improve in his hands, while in the hands of the poor motorist the engine will develop a multitude of troubles. So it is with tires. Proper care actually will give maximum mileage. Considering that the tires carry the load of the car and the contents, as well as protecting the whole mechanism of the car against the road blows, there are no more important elements in the operation of the car than proper tire adjustment, inflation and load.

Watch Your Water Pump to Prevent Motor Heat

Of the 16 reasons for motor heating, perhaps one of the most obscure and least thought of is the small pin that holds the paddle wheel on the water pump to the shaft. This is a frequent reason for engine overheating, and because of its very obscurity, is one of the reasons for this series of articles.

As everyone knows, the water pump is attached to the water pump shaft. Within this pump is a paddle wheel that assists in circulating the water from the radiator entirely through the water passage system. A small steel pin holds this paddle wheel fast to the pump, and many times, after some months of usage, this pin becomes worn or rusted, and shears off as smoothly as if cut by a knife. The pump at once becomes inoperative, the water does not circulate and the terrific heat of the engine soon boils away the water that remains in the radiator. Here again the heat indicator on your car immediately tells the story, as the vapor temperature of the boiling water in the radiator will warn the motorist, through this instrument, that he must investigate at once, or suffer the penalty: a large garage bill.

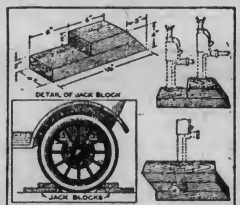

Farm Efficiency Is Increased by Truck

There are many angles from which farmers can view the motor truck, says the Michigan Farmer. It is apparent, however, that in the great majority of instances the truck has increased farm efficiency. It has shortened and cheapened the transportation of many farm products from the field to the city. It frequently makes possible for farmers to take advantage of variations in demand for certain products at different markets. It speeds up the delivery of perishables, so giving distributors a longer period in which to market. It simplifies delivery by eliminating transportation charges.

In taking a trucking business the farmer should have the thoughtful consideration of every operative farmer.

Blocks for Automobile Jacks Are Convenient

A handy pair of blocks shown in the drawing will more than repay the slight cost and trouble of making them, in the convenience that attends their application as indicated. The blocks can either be made from solid four-inch timbers, or may be built up from two-inch planks in the manner shown, and besides serving as a base for the jack on soft or uneven ground, they may be used for blocking the wheels of the car.—C. C. Spreen, Birmingham, Mich., in Popular Mechanics Magazine.

A Set of Jack Blocks, to Provide a Firm and Even Base for the Jack on Soft or Uneven Ground, and to Speed Up the Work.

Things One Should Know About Replacing Tubes

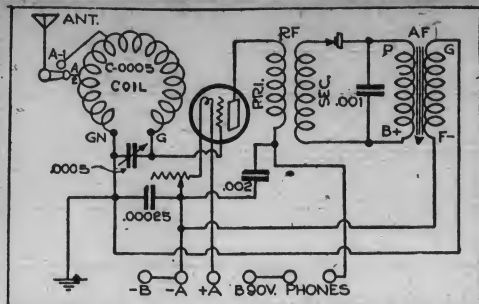

Undue haste in replacing a punctured or blown-out tube, is responsible for a multitude of troubles. The most common mistake is pinching the tube. The tube is inserted in an uneven or twisted manner. This causes it to overlap or wrinkle, with the result, that in a short time it will cut through where it has been overlapped and produce a leak. The same trouble is also caused sometimes by putting a new tube into the tire just as it is taken from the box.

When the tube is applied after mounting, there is such an influx of air that it will often buckle up the tubes, thereby forcing a tiny section beneath the head spreader. Especially will this occur if the valve stem is not pulled out to its proper position.

The operator should proceed slowly when applying the tube. Before putting it into the casing it should be given a couple of "shots" of air, then it should be applied carefully, the inside—the side on which the stem occurs—always being kept inside.

When it is in the casing it should be "tailed" carefully and the fingers forced all around the tire to make sure that the tale has been evenly distributed, and then, before the loose lead is applied the tire should be given a little more air—enough to round it out nicely and prevent pinching.

RADIO

Single Tube Reflex Circuit. One Stage Radio (Aperiodic), and One Stage Audio, Reflexed With Crystal Detector.

By CARLTON E. BUTLER, Associate Member Institute of Radio Engineers and American Institute of Electrical Engineers.

Loud-speaker operation, usually accomplished only through the use of multi-tube receivers, is obtained by the use of a single tube in the circuit described in this article. Sufficient volume is secured to work a loud speaker on stations within a fifty-mile radius and the headphones 1,200 miles or better, under favorable weather conditions.

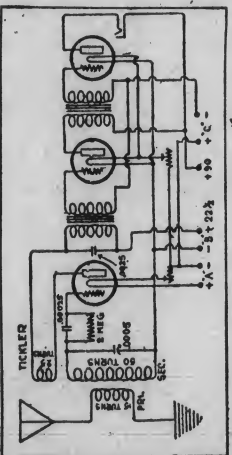

Requiring but a single tube, the receiver can be assembled into a very small box complete with batteries for portable use. The controls of the set consist of but a single dial and a rheostat, so that the panel can be practically as small as the dial itself. A cabinet 6 by 8 by 6 inches will contain the complete receiver, and both "A" and "B" batteries can be included by making the cabinet and baseboard slightly larger.

The tube itself does double duty in the receiver, amplifying the current first in the form of radio frequency, then it is detected by the crystal and returned to the tube to be amplified at audio frequency. This efficient means of getting the most out of one tube is called "reflexing."

In addition to the advantages gained by the use of the reflex principle of construction, the use of the newly invented low-loss doughnut coil for a tuning inductance increases the volume at least 35 per cent more than when the ordinary variocoupler or variometer form of tuning is employed. The combination of the reflex principle with the use of the low-loss doughnut coil gives the receiver volume and tone quality surpassing belief.

Three-Circuit Best of Regenerative Hook-Ups

The three-circuit set is by far the best of the regenerative hook-ups. This circuit employs a three-coil coupler or tuning unit. One of these is the primary or antenna coil, one is the secondary, and the other is the tickler coil. There are any number of very efficient units of this type on the market and we recommend them very highly. This is the best of the regenerative circuits because it tunes sharply and gives good signal strength and does not send out the strong interfering wave when set into oscillation as does the single circuit, or the ultra-audion. The diagram shows all of the instruments that are required.

It is important that the capacity of the condenser should be that recommended by the maker of the tuner to be used.

Battery Charger Wires

Care should be taken to see that the wires from a charger are connected properly as to polarity to the battery. In this case the negative wire goes to the negative side of the battery, and not the usual positive to negative connection. For direct current, place the two wires from the charger in a glass of water so that they do not touch each other. The wire which bubbles is the negative.

The advantage gained by the use of the low-loss doughnut coil, designed by Frank Reichmann, is due to the fact that the magnetic field of the coil is self-contained so that there is no spraying effect of lines of force as found with the open end type of coils. Coil pick-up of interference is practically eliminated, making the receiver tune much sharper than when ordinary coils are used.

Few parts are required for the circuit and construction is within the limits of the novice. Wiring is without complications and the receiver can be constructed on a panel 6 by 10 inches. Tuning is accomplished by a single dial, eliminating the difficulty in operating a radio set often experienced by persons unfamiliar with receiving sets.

The Parts Needed. In addition to the panel, the following apparatus is needed:

- 1 low-loss doughnut coil, coupler type.
- 1 low-loss variable condenser, .0005 mfd. capacity, preferably the straight-line frequency type, so that the stations on the lower wave lengths may be easily separated.
- 1 iron core audio transformer.
- 1 low-ratio audio frequency transformer.

1 fixed mica condenser of each of the following capacities: .001 mfd., .002 mfd., and .00025 mfd.

- 1 vacuum tube socket.
- 1 telephone jack.
- Binding posts and wire.

The receiver is compact enough to be used as a portable set, and will give satisfactory service providing a good aerial and ground are obtained whenever the outfit is to be used.

When Dry-Cell Tubes Are Used in Radio Set

When dry-cell tubes are used in a set, the operator should take into account the ampere consumption and provide enough batteries so they will not run down prematurely. Not more than .123 amperes should be drained from an ordinary six-volt dry cell. If a tube is used that consumes .25 amperes, use at least two dry batteries in parallel (i. e., connected plus to plus and minus to minus). This will not increase the voltage; a 1½-volt tube will not get any more voltage from two batteries in parallel than it will from one, and there is no danger of it burning out. Tubes that call for more voltage must, of course, have more batteries hooked up in series (i. e., plus to minus). The more tubes there are in a receiving set, the more batteries should be hooked up in parallel, as the ampere drain is greater. The directions accompanying dry-cell tubes should be read carefully and voltage and amperage requirements noted.

Importance of Crystal and Care It Requires

In the reflex type of receiver, in which the crystal is used as a detector, the sensitivity of the crystal determines almost completely how sensitive the entire set will be. The importance of using a good crystal can be imagined in this case. The firmness of contact of the cat's-whisker with the surface of the crystal is important. If the contact is too tight the receiver will have a tendency to howl. If the contact is too heavy the receiver will not be as sensitive as it otherwise would.

It is customary with modern crystal detector stands to provide some sort of covering, usually of glass, so that dust and dirt are prevented from accumulating on the surface of the crystal and so that it is impossible to allow the fingers to come in contact with the crystal itself. In this way the crystal detector retains its sensitivity for a much longer period of time and the receiver as a whole is correspondingly better.

Fixing "B" Batteries

Cut in half the drain on the "B" batteries by doing these things with your superheterodyne circuit: (1) Reduce oscillator plate voltage to 45. (2) Place 1½ volt negative bias on the oscillator grid return. (3) Reduce plate voltage on intermediate frequency amplifier circuit to 45. (4) Put 1½ volt negative bias on the intermediate frequency grid return. (5) Place 4½ volt negative bias on audio amplifier grid return.

Daddy's Evening Fairy Tale

By MARY GRAHAM BONNER

EGRET AND NANCY

"Mother Snowy Egret, tell us a story," begged the young Egret birds.

The Most Beautiful.

The birds were in the big bird house in the zoo, and it was almost time for them to put their heads under their wings and sleep the whole long night through.

But before they went to sleep they often asked for a story, and Mother Snowy Egret or Mother Snowy Heron (for both names were hers) would tell them one.

"We're known as the most beautiful white birds in the world," commenced Mother Snowy Egret sadly. "We do not become so beautiful until we are full grown. Then it is that our plumage is at its best and our white feathers look so well."

"But why do you say it as though it were a sorrow?" asked one of the Snowy Egret children.

"Ah, children, our beauty has been a sorrow to us. And I am going to tell you this story so you will know how lucky you are to be safe, safe, in the zoo."

"And, too, you must be very good to the keeper for he tells everyone he can this story, especially to little girls so that they will never be cruel when they grow up."

"It sounds like a strange story," the Snowy Egret birdlings said as they nudged each other.

"When we are full-grown and just at the time when the birdlings are born," commenced Mother Snowy Egret, "our white plumage is at its best. We want to look our best for the wee little birds who come forth from the eggs in our nests in the swamps, and we cannot change our ways."

"But alas! Ladies, yes, ladies, like to wear hats and they care more for their hats than they do for us."

"Because of them and because they pay lots of money for agettes as our plumage is called on their hats, hunters kill the mother birds just after the little birds are born."

"The little birds are left to starve and die with no dear mother bird to look after them."

"Just think, little birdlings, there are people who care more for a certain kind of feather on a hat than they do for the lives of little birds."

"It is hard to believe but it is true, and if only they knew that if only they really knew (for I can't believe they would be so cruel if they really knew) what suffering they cause by wearing such plumage they would never wear agettes again; so they would never have to kill the Snowy Egret mothers and leave the little ones to starve."

"And the birdlings sighed happily that they were safe in the zoo."

Now Nick and Nancy, who share their stories with many other children all over the country, far up North, way down South, far East, far West, in the Middle, everywhere, once a year have a little chat in a story with their friends.

They ask their friends and all those who know these stories who feel like it to write to Mary Graham Bonner, 607 West One Hundred and Thirty-seventh street, New York city, and tell what stories are their favorites and which stories they like to hear best.

Do they like animal stories, zoo stories, fairy stories, stories of little girls and boys, flower stories, bird stories—or which kinds of stories are their favorites?

Usually they have written that they like to have a great variety of stories and that is what Nick and Nancy like, too, but the majority say that they like perhaps to have a few more stories about animals than any others.

But this year Nick and Nancy are going to ask all their friends to please pay special attention to Mother Egret's story and to refuse to wear egret feathers or feathers which mean the lives of little birds. Birds of Paradise feathers are cruel to wear, too.

And Nick asks his boy friends to learn to know animals and birds and to watch their interesting, smart ways rather than to take their eggs or hunt for them to kill them.

If any of their friends own fox terriers do not let their tails be cut off, for it is cruel, and why should style force a dog to suffer?

They hope their friends will form clubs in which they will study the animals and birds so they will know that "friendship and real knowledge of the bird and animal world comes from patient understanding of them and not by destruction."

And they wish their friends all the best of good luck in the world, both this year and every year to come!

Love of Food Is Ending Fighting Days of Firpo

Luis Firpo, meteoric boxing glove slinger from South America, is ending his fighting days in Europe with a knife, a fork, and a spoon. His love for food has become greater and greater—and his indulgence has kept space with it.

Heavy eating, plenty of sleep, idleness, and almost complete inactivity in so far as training is concerned has sounded the death knell for Luis Firpo.

The ring warrior who once was built like a gyrfalcon, sleek of arms, sleek of legs, and with a... so that tipped with beautiful muscle power, now is reported to weigh... the neighborhood of 280—at least 65 pounds over his fighting weight of other days.

Fat eddies around his neck, around his shoulders, on his arms and legs—and masses of it now obscure a once splendidly defined waist line.

And so Luis Firpo is through—a relic of other days—and the tragedy for him lies in the fact that he has killed off chances to earn at least $250,000 more because he couldn't control his appetite.

Sport Notes

The Polo grounds, New York, will seat 62,612 fans at boxing shows this year.

In Great Britain first-class soccer teams attract an average crowd of 30,000 spectators.

William K. Murr, 26, of Detroit, Mich., has been elected captain of next year's Yale polo team.

Frank "Duffy" Hanny, a former gridiron star at Indiana university, has become a professional boxer.

Appointment of Arnold E. Barron, former Penn State and Olympic high hurdler, as head track coach is announced.

An eight-oared crew representing the Rowing Club of Paris is to take part in the Royal Henley regatta on the Thames this year.

E. J. Meyers, high jumper on the Lehigh university track team, has been elected captain of the track squad for next season.

A track expert has figured that Paavo Nurmi ran 118 miles 1,149 yards in competition during his recent visit to this country. This distance occupied an actual time of 8 hours 58 minutes 9 seconds.

Some batters grip the end of a bat firmly with both hands, take a toe hold and swing. Others choke the bat, standing alert like a boxer, and take a poke at the ball.

But it has remained for Emil Meusel, home-run hitter of the New York Giants, to demonstrate that a golfer's grip on the baseball bat may be prolific of home-run drives and extra-base hits.

Unlike other ball players, whose hands rest separately on the handle of the bat, his left hand grips the bat firmly at the end, while the right rests partly on the left hand and partly on the bat.

This grip is one usually taken by the golfer in driving. Meusel says that the grip is a natural one with him.

"I have no special reason for holding the bat in such a way, except that I think it gives me a greater accuracy in meeting the ball," he says.

"Some managers have wanted me to change, and hold a bat like the majority of ball players do, claiming that I would be able to hit the ball harder if I gripped the bat with both hands."

"But I have noticed that a golfer with practically the same hold can send a golf ball pretty far, so I can't see where a change would benefit me."

Holding Golf Title Most Difficult Task

Defending champions in national open golf play have had a tough time of it. This has been especially true in more recent seasons.

The last title holder to defend his much-cherished honors successfully was Jack McDermott, who after winning the crown in 1911, came back to repeat the following season.

Since then Walter Hagen has topped the premier event twice, but not in successive years. His first victory was in 1914, his second five years later.

The polka-dotted crepes in the light or shades of a thin quality are to be among the frocks which will be chosen for their coolness. They are smart looking as well as cool, and since the polka dot is having a new vogue, a frock made of this material, provided it is cut right and not too short, will be a good choice for those who feel they can wear a frock on the hot days for some time.

SUITABLE FROCKS FOR HOT WEATHER

Swiss, Crepe, Georgette, English Broadcloth, Favored Fabrics.

What the fashion magazines are pleased to call "fashions for the country" are those which are generally adopted for all summer wear. We see more and more every summer, notes a fashion writer in the Kansas City Star, the effort made by some to wear real city clothes downtown in the summer. That is, the dark georgettes and crepe de chine or else something in a beige or brown or inconspicuously figured street frocks with long sleeves and a tailored air.

The sleeves in such a dress would come off the top if the person happened to be small.

But this material is far from cool. It is so very closely woven that it is almost like pongee, than which there probably is no other material hotter for summer. In blue and white or green and white, it is, however, undeniably cool looking, and that counts a whole lot.

The polka-dotted crepes in the light or shades of a thin quality are to be among the frocks which will be chosen for their coolness. They are smart looking as well as cool, and since the polka dot is having a new vogue, a frock made of this material, provided it is cut right and not too short, will be a good choice for those who feel they can wear a frock on the hot days for some time.

Hemlines may flare and jabots may flutter in the breeze of fashion, but the popularity of the strictly tailored suit shows no signs of waning. This charming sample is modeled from kasha cloth in natural color, with belt of tan kid, and bone buttons. The boyish shirt and bow tie complete the tailored ensemble.

before it is cleaned, and who haven't a love for fabrics that have been freshened... perfect method of cleaning—soap and water.

Some of the printed silks are made up in sports models that are pretty and plain. The polka-dotted crepes are very pretty made in the now familiar two-piece model and trimmed with pearl or crystal buttons. The fact is, well-dressed edges and buttons frequently make a dressy material appropriate for simple sports or downtown wear. Again, a collar and a tie, long or short, will give to a single- or "dressy" material the appearance of a tailored frock which can be worn more than a strictly afternoon gown. And there is no material which has been, in its time, more festive than dotted swiss, which now bears tailors' marks.

BIDS ARE RECEIVED FOR NEW ADDITION

Contract Awarded by School Board For Improvement

The county school board had an interesting session last Monday when bids were opened for the construction of an addition to the Boone County High School building.

Bids were advertised for and received about one month ago for this work, but since only one bid was received, and that for $22,540, the bid was rejected.

Since the Parent-Teachers Association is furnishing one-fourth the cost of this addition, a number of its members were present when the bids were opened.

There were nine general bids opened at the meeting with Joseph Neyer, of Cincinnati, having what was considered by the board to be the best bid, though there was one bid lower. The reason given by the board for awarding the contract to Neyer, instead of Lenhoff & Acree, was that Neyer agreed to finish the work in three and one-half months, while Lenhoff & Acree would not promise the completion under five months. Work on the construction will be started at once. The bids are as follows:

GENERAL BIDS

W. O. Sweet, Bromley $20,600

House & Baker Covington $21,333

Lenhoff & Acree Erlanger $17,050

HEBRON 10 BURLINGTON 0

Hebron defeated Petersburg on the Petersburg lot last Saturday by the score of 7 to 6. Bullock, Hebron's star, was on the mound for the visitors and was practically invincible until he sprained his ankle. Efforts were made on the part of his teammates to induce him to leave the game, but he was determined to stick it out. His determination was however well nigh his undoing for, with the score 7 to 2 in his favor the local club put on a determined rally which fell but one run short of tying the score in the ninth inning.

Berkshire for Petersburg was unable to hold the Hebron club in check and he was relieved by Ruth who did better. Petersburg will visit Hebron next Saturday.

Pelleview visited Burlington the first time during the current season last Saturday afternoon. Joe Brady was pitching for Bellevue and was the master of the home team at all times, not allowing them to score.

Black, the famous speed ball pitcher, occupied the hill for the Burlington team for the first time this year and pitched a beautiful game until the seventh, when the tide changed.

Numerous errors mixed with a home run by Harley Spangue made it a no-hit affair. The final score was 10 to 3 in favor of Bellevue.

Burlington will visit Bellevue next Saturday with the same pitchers opposing each other.

HORACE G. COLLINS, DEAD

Horace G. Collins, aged 64 years, husband of Nettie Collins passed away Wednesday afternoon at his home on the Dixie Highway, Elsmere, Ky. Funeral services were held at the residence Saturday afternoon at 2 o'clock by the Rev. Stambaugh, pastor of the Christian church, after which the remains were taken to the Florence cemetery for interment. A large number of the Junior Order United American Mechanics and the Daughters of America were present and both orders held their services at the grave.

Mr. Collins had a large acquaintance in Boone county, having formerly conducted a carriage and paint shop for a long time. He is survived by his widow and one son, Harold.

Undertaker Philip Tallaferro had charge of the funeral arrangements.

Knee-length skirts for girls are quite the mode this summer, but a New York judge has decreed that measly men must keep his shins covered. The young men refused to pay for trousers that were a foot short, the tailor contended it was the style. The jury decided that it was not the fashion—not yet. Still, it is a start in the right direction, and man may yet beat women in the matter of airy-fairy dress.

CORRUPT PRACTICE ACT NOW RECALLED

Section of Kentucky Statutes Quoted to Enlighten Inquiries.

Many opinions have been advanced in Boone county recently as to whether or not it was in violation of the law to "set 'em up to the boys," so to speak, in the interest of your favorite candidate. In this connection and for the enlightenment of those who have inquired, and of the public in general we quote herewith excerpts from the "corrupt practice act," Section 1565-b-1, Kentucky Statutes:

"It shall be unlawful for any corporation, company or association to contribute, either directly or indirectly, money, service or other things of value, towards the nomination of any state, county, city, town, district or municipal officer, if any such officer in his official capacity, is required by law to perform any duty to perform in assessing the property of any such corporation, etc., for taxation, any corporation, company, association, or person, or any officer or agent of any such corporation, company or any violation of the provisions of this section shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction shall be fined in any sum not exceeding ten thousand ($10,000) dollars and imprisoned in the county jail for not less than thirty days and not exceeding one year."

The statute is plain and stringent, so we had better watch our step.

COUNTRY PEOPLE URGED

TO AID IN REFRESHING THE CITY CHILDREN

My children are fast glooming under the burning rays of a pitiless summer sun, and, with 100 degree temperatures, doctors and welfare agencies are straining every effort to secure vacations in the country for Louisville kiddies who are denied fresh air.

The Courier-Journal and The Louisville Times have, therefore, opened their "fresh air vacation movement" a month earlier than last year in an effort to immediately assist residents of the country and smaller cities are urgently requested to take in one or more of the young children from Louisville.

The vacation period is ten days and no financial or other obligation is incurred. Every child is examined by competent physicians before being allowed to leave Louisville and The Courier-Journal and The Times furnish transportation and cash for incidentals on the trip.

The Recorder joins those Louisville newspapers in sponsoring the movement in this county and urges its readers to come to the assistance of little city children who will not otherwise be helped.

Last year 200 children were sent to the country through The Courier-Journal and The Times and all returned fit and ready for winter, pounds heavier and in greatly improved condition.

If you can accommodate one or two children for ten days, you are urged to advise the editor of this paper or to write directly to Jos. A. Humphreys, Jr., The Courier-Journal and Times, Louisville. The first party of children will leave the city Saturday July 18th, and parties will follow on every succeeding Saturday.

Owing to the excessive heat in the early part of the summer children are suffering more keenly than ever, and it is desirable that as many as possible join the first party. If you can open your house to one or more kiddies on July 18 or thereafter, you are asked to extend the invitation at once.

"FORTUNATE CALAMITY"

It is unanimously agreed by all concerned that "The Fortunate Calamity" was a manometer for the little play given by the Petersburg Little Girls last Friday night. In the first place a postponement was made necessary by an accident to one of the players. Then when it was finally given the excessive heat and a brewing storm cut the attendance in half so that the receipts barely paid expenses. However it was a splendid little production, very ably played, and, to say the very least, deserving of a much better fate. It should be reproduced under more favorable weather conditions.

BANK STATEMENTS

The statements of the financial condition of each of the ten banks in Boone County and of the two Erlanger & Banks will appear in the next issue of the Recorder. Some few were delayed in reaching this office so that all were withheld until a week later.

Are You Entitled To Vote In The Coming Primary?

ARE YOU INTERESTED IN THE ELECTION OF COUNTY OFFICERS?

On Saturday, August 1st the citizens of Boone county will elect their county officers to serve for the next four years. Inasmuch as Boone county is a rock-bound Democratic county, the nominations made in the Democratic primary, are equivalent to election. Therefore only those who are entitled to vote in a primary will have a vote in the election of the county officials for the next four years.

There has been much discussion lately as to who is eligible to participate in the coming primary. For the purpose of clearing up this question we quote herewith a portion of Section 1560-19 of the Kentucky Statutes which governs such matters and is now the law of the Commonwealth.

"Before a person shall be qualified to vote in a primary election herein provided for, he shall possess all the qualifications now prescribed by the Constitution and laws now required of voters in regular elections. He shall in addition to said qualifications be a member of the party for whose nomination he intends to cast his vote, and shall be affiliated with said party and supported its nominees, and no persons shall be deemed to have affiliated with the party in whose primary he seeks to cast his vote, if he voted against the nominee or nominees of such party at the last general election."

From the above it may be seen that anyone who failed to support any nominee at the last general election—November, 1924, is not entitled to vote at the coming Democratic primary of 1925.

It has been urged that such an election is conducted by secret ballot, and it is impossible for the officers of the primary to know how anyone voted at the election last fall. In answer to this we only say:

1. Any person who votes in a primary represents himself to be

Timely Agricultural News

By R. J. Matson, County Agent

National Dairy Exposition—

Every dairy farmer in Boone county can possibly get away should attend the National Dairy Exposition at Indianapolis on October 10 to 17th, 1925. A trip to the Dairy Exposition will serve as an inspiration and stimulant to any one engaged in dairying. Anyone spending a few days at this exposition will return with a keener sense of pride in the industry in which he is engaged.

One will see the best representatives of the dairy machinery and dairy equipment will make up a wonderful show. National exhibits and programs will be staged for those who attend. To attend the exposition will tend to impress greatness and profitability of the dairy industries. Boone County Egg Layers—

The White Leghorn Pullets which E. G. Stephenson entered in the International Egg Laying Contest are now standing in fourth place among the White Leghorns in the contest. His pen is also fifth among all contestants. Gosbell's pen has done very well, and are striking a record that he can be proud of, as there are birds from practically all of the nationally advertised flocks in the U. S.

Poultry Pointers—

Six flocks of poultry were reported ailing during the last week. Inspection of these revealed the trouble coming from intestinal parasites. Round worms and tape worms are doing a great deal of damage in the flocks of our county. These parasites not only absorb the foods from the fowls causing them to become poor but give off poisons into the systems which causes nervous reactions often called fits, in severe cases.

The best remedy for these is the use of two pounds of Gold Dust powder mixed thoroughly through 100 pounds of dry mash. This treatment qualified and he is not playing square with either himself or the Democratic party if he votes when he is not entitled to do so.

2. In further answer to this contention we quote further from section 1560-19 of the Kentucky Statutes:

"In order to determine in case of doubt, and of qualifications above mentioned, the judge of the election shall have the power to and shall swear any person offering himself to vote as to any of said qualifications, and when so sworn the judge shall direct the clerk to, and the clerk shall write upon the primary stub bearing the voters name the words "sworn as to qualifications." And any voter making a false statement as to any of his qualifications shall be liable to indictment and conviction for false swearing.

"Any judge of an election knowingly receiving a vote of any elector who is not qualified as provided in this act shall be guilty of misdemeanor, and upon conviction, shall be fined one hundred dollars for each offense, and any person so voting knowing that his act shall be as provided in this act, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction, shall be fined one hundred dollars for each offense."

It will be seen from the above that not only is a person who votes for the nominee of any other party than that of the Democratic party disqualified for voting in the county primary, but if such a person does vote in such primary he is liable to criminal prosecution.

According to the above law there is a heavy penalty in which they are not entitled to vote, and also for knowingly permitting a person to vote who is not eligible to as provided in the law. Therefore we urge all the Democratic citizens of Boone county who failed to support the nominee of the Democratic party at the general election last fall, to refrain from trying to assist in the selection of the county officers for the succeeding four years.

RELEASED MONDAY

John Whalen, who has been confined in the county jail since the April term of court, was released Monday upon payment of his fine by a number of his friends. "Johnnie" has a number of friends as is evidenced by the fact that his fine was one hundred dollars and it was all donated by friends. John has made a number of friends in Burlington since he has been confined.

Guard Against Lice—

Lice often cause great losses among poultry flocks, especially at this time of year. The flock can be rid of these pests by dipping in sodium Fluoride solution, 1 pound to 10 gallons of water. Be sure to dip all the roosters and spray the inside of the houses with a 5 per cent solution of some good disinfectant.

Paint all the roosting poles with crude oil or the drainings from the automobile crank case to get rid of the mites. Be sure that all cracks between the boards are saturated with the oil.

Lime Crusher—

The new tractor with the State lime crusher is working nicely. The outfit is now at work in the Verona neighborhood. All those who want to use the outfit should write me or get in touch with Mr. Patterson who is operating the machinery so that their names can be placed in the line up.

Hog Market—

The hog market has been experiencing a gradual upward trend for the last two months. It reached the highest point of $15.10 on July 6th. This was a peak price since war time. One year ago hogs sold for $7.75.

The recent survey taken with the co-operation of rural letter carriers shows that there are 11 per cent less pigs this spring than last.

DEMOCRATS CHOSEN TO FILL VACANCIES

Created By Ousting of Republicans In City of Louisville

Frankfort, Ky., July 14.—Thirty-six Democratic office holders of Louisville, 24 councilmen and 12 aldermen were appointed Friday by Gov. W. J. Fields to fill vacancies created when the court of appeals threw out the 1923 election held for councilmen and aldermen. All of the appointees, with one exception, were the Democratic candidates in the 1923 election.

Richard H. Stout was appointed councilman in the first ward in the place of Louis Marillo, who has moved from the state.

The Democratic alderman and councilmen go into office as a result of the ouster decision of the Kentucky court of appeals, which ruled the Republican council out of office by declaring the municipal election of 1923 null and void.

The court of appeals held the election void on account of fraud. In addition to ousting 24 councilmen and 12 aldermen from office, the court knocked out the election of two members of the board of park commissioners. The vacancies will be filled by the board.

The commissioners of the new Democratic office holders were taken to Louisville by former Congressman Joseph Morris.

Gerrard Field had hoped to be able to present the commissions in person, but being unable to do so on account of the press of official business, he designated Mr. Morris as his representative.

COURTESY

Courtesy is the cheapest commodity in the world, yet it is probably the least used.

It doesn't belong to any corporation and it isn't quoted in Wall Street. It is not regulated by any federal commission—there are no restrictions on it. The price of courtesy is not fixed because there are no "production costs."

Courtesy is as free as the air we breathe, and costing nothing, many view it as a worthless asset and do not make it a part of themselves.

For many, many years the commencement day orators have been telling us that courtesy is a factor to be reckoned with if we wish to succeed in life.

Some high school graduates have remembered this bit of timely advice and in their efforts to get ahead in the strenuous game of life, they have made it their constant aim to be courteous to others.

Go through the list of your acquaintances and see how many have made courtesy pay. You will find the number lamentably small because they have been too busy with the small perplexities of life to take time for little courtesies that make their brief stay here pleasant.

Courtesy pays big dividends in what we generally term success. It likewise creates within the individual a certain sense of satisfaction in the thought that he makes friends by treating others courteously.

And it always comes back abundantly in proportion to the way it is extended to others.

Some venturesome prophets used to predict that some day women would wear trousers, but they never went so far as to predict that the young men would put on divided skirts.

ANNUAL MEETING IS HELD AT WEST BADEN

Kentucky Press Association Meets With Forty Editors in Attendance.

The Kentucky Press Association, with forty editors in attendance, met last Thursday at the Seelbach Hotel, in Louisville. After a short business session the editors adjourned to West Baden, Indiana, where the meeting continued over Friday and Saturday.

A number of questions of importance to Kentucky were discussed. Discussion of the coal tax question occupied the greater portion of last Thursday's session, although no definite action was taken by the Association, it being left to each individual editor to commit himself in accordance with his own ideas.

The association pledged itself to the support of the possible organization of a State Chamber of Commerce. The RECORDER has heretofore advocated such a plan through its columns, with which course it is still in sympathy.

The invitations were received for the association to hold its next annual meeting at either Pineville or Ashland. The matter was referred to an executive committee with power to act.

The meeting adjourned early Saturday afternoon.

AUTO PUBLICATION IS TO BE ENLARGED

Auto Bulletin for the Improvement of Highways Now Being Edited

Louisville, Ky., July 11.—Announcement of plans for enlarging and improving its monthly publication, The Automobile Bulletin, and for a more extended service to the public through newspapers of the State were made today by the Louisville Star.

Stanley E. Thompson has resigned as City Editor of the Louisville Times to assume the editorship of the Bulletin and the position of Public Relations Secretary of the club, it was announced by Alex E. Johnson, president.

Under the plans announced by Mr. Johnson, the magazine will be made a larger one and will contain more articles of interest to the general public, especially to those who own and operate automobiles. It will deal primarily with the problems of Kentucky, particularly those dealing with roads and revenues for road purposes.

The Automobile Club has adopted the policy that a system of through highways should be constructed to connect the principal centers of population of Kentucky and that these roads should be built at once. This policy, outlined in maps and articles which have heretofore been published in the Bulletin, will be pushed under the management of Mr. Thompson, Mr. Johnson said.

"The club intends to keep in close touch with the State problems which most concern all motorists, whether they are members of the club or not," Mr. Johnson said. "The information gathered from time to time will be made available to the public both through the Bulletin and through the news service which we plan to establish as soon as Mr. Thompson assumes his new position on August 1st."

Other plans for extended State wide service of the club will be announced in the near future, Mr. Johnson said.

Mr. Thompson has been a member of the staff of The Louisville Times for six years and was city editor for nearly two years. "The fact that Mr. Thompson, who is the son of the Rev. S. J. Thompson, for many years a Methodist minister and presiding elder in Kentucky, has lived in various sections of the State makes his selection for the position a happy one," Mr. Johnson said. Mr. Thompson is a former resident of Henderson and Owensboro. He is a native of Morgantown and attended the State University at Lexington in 1912-13. As a newspaper man he has traveled extensively in central and eastern Kentucky. His wife was Miss Lillian Gibson, daughter of Lee Gibson, formerly of Calhoun and Madisonville.

Harold Ruby, well known throughout Kentucky through his connection with the tobacco pooling movement succeeded Mr. Thompson on The Times, it was announced by the newspaper.

ONE-BASE HITS

(BY JACK SIMPSON)

Force-Outs.

The status of a ball can completely change the outcome of a game, as explained below:

Hammer on third base with two out, two strikes and three balls on batter. Next pitch is wild and get away from the catcher. Man on third scores and batter reaches second base. But in turning first base he failed to step on the bag. The ball is thrown there and the batter is called out, but the run scores, as he was entitled to first base by virtue of the base on balls and not forced.

Now, assume the same layout, but the final pitch was wild, at which the batter swung and the catcher missed. The batter reached second while the run scored. He failed to touch first base and the ball was thrown there and he was retired. The run does not count, because the batter was forced at first.

The rules say a man receiving a base on balls is entitled to first base, regardless of whether he reaches there or not. With the score a tie in the last half of the ninth inning, three men on base and two men out, the batter receives a base on balls. He walks to the bench and gets his sweater and goes to the clubhouse, never making an effort to go to first base. The visitors get the ball, touch the batter, and appeal to the umpire for a force-out. The latter allows the run, because the batter was entitled to first base although he didn't complete the play by walking to first base.

Huns, pictured in a baseball uniform, as a bat, is also shown. The card does not place a party label on the new candidate.

American Open Polo Is Leading Feature

The Mount Waterbury cup tournament will be played immediately after, and the two events will draw the leading players in the United States and probably several foreign stars to Long Island at that time.

Pinch Hitters Were Introduced in 1891

The first instance of bringing in a pinch-hitter with the purpose of strengthening the batting order, and in an effort to win the game took place September 28, 1891, in a game between the Athletics and Boston club of the old American association. In the ninth inning the Boston manager sent in Cotter and O'Brien to bat in the place of Buffington, pitcher, and Brown, outfielder. The pinch-hitters failed to produce, as most of them have been doing ever since.

FAILURE TO STAND IN RIGHT POSITION

Batter Stepping Away Often Compels Umpire to Call Many Strikes.

When the batsman steps away from the plate he removes the obstacle that worried the pitcher. If the pitcher is afraid of the batsman then there is no need of that fear when he turns his back to the plate. There is no chance for the batter to hit the ball and nothing to worry the pitcher. It is easy enough to pitch strikes when there is no chance of the ball being hit.

Again, umpires are human, and there are several umpires who regard this action on the part of the batsman an attempt to call balls and strikes, a privilege that the umpire rightfully believes belongs to him alone. One has often seen umpires call strikes when the ball was apparently outside. Had the batsman maintained his position in the batter's box this would not have happened.

The act of tossing away the bat before the ball reaches the plate has caused many strikes to be called that would not otherwise have been called. The umpire secretly objects to having the batsman walk himself; he prefers to do that for him.

Batsmen would get many more passes if they kept their position at the plate, and, if anything, crowded the plate, instead of leaving it. The object should be to worry the pitcher, not to help him gain his control.

CHOOSE COLORS TO SUIT COMPLEXION

Milady Should Know Limitations, Prominent Art Instructor Says.

The woman who studies her color limitations has taken the first step toward being well dressed. She knows what colors to look for when she goes to the shop and thus uses her own time and that of the clerk to the best advantage. According to Miss Hazel Hartman, art instructor in the University of Wisconsin, certain colors are especially adapted to various types of individuals.

The blond with fair skin and blue eyes appears best in the "cooler colors" such as green, blue and lavender. Greens bring out the golden tint in her hair and the pink in her cheeks. She appears "most like a blond" in blue, although she may wear white, pink and golden brown successfully. If her hair is slightly dark she may wear the shade of middle blue. If the skin is not too pale, black is considered an ideal color for this type.

The blond with medium-brown hair, imperfect skin and blue or brown eyes, may wear the medium shades of blue, green and red, dark brown and cream white.

Brunettes with fair skin may wear almost any color. The brighter shades, such as yellow, red and henna are usually most becoming. If the hair is dark brown instead of black, shades of orange may be worn. There is no reason why a brunette with fair skin and blue eyes cannot wear shades of blue. Such shades may bring out the pink of the cheeks.

Brunettes with dark hair and eyes, but imperfect or florid skin, may wear tans and browns, as well as blue-greens and cream or ivory whites. Such a type needs to avoid such colors as yellow, black and the pastel shades. If the skin is the least bit sallow, it is necessary to avoid the cooler shades, such as blue and green.

Gray-haired types appear best in grays which are slightly darker than the hair. Other becoming colors are lavender, burnt orange and dark blue or black. Pink is not a good color for an older woman. The new shades of green are particularly becoming to the auburn-haired type, as they emphasize the beauty of the hair and the clearness of the complexion. If the skin is pale and the eyes are blue, this type may wear various shades of blue, tan and brown, as well as black or white. The type with a freckled but rather pale face may wear such colors as black, dull blue, purple, white, henna and other shades of tan and brown.

Smart Ensemble Suit Chic for Summer Wear

New Kinds of Flowers Used for Summer Wear

Flowers are made from almost every sort of material this season. They are made of leather and silk and velvet and cloth. They are worked in bead and ornate embroidery. On some of the new hats they are cleverly wrought with different colored sealing wax. And we even have flowers made of feathers.

The feathers in question are ordinary barnyard fowl feathers, but they are dyed into all sorts of pretty colors and shades and wrought into charming flowers—daisies, roses, butterflies, etc. They are used to trim hats and are often placed on the shoulders of evening frocks, while sometimes they are used in place of ordinary artificial flowers as decorations for the house or apartment.

Mid-Victorian Jewelry Is in Fashion's Favor

They all come back, the styles of long ago. When the fashion of a period becomes passé it no longer is acknowledged as possessing any virtues whatsoever and goes into the discard. In the changes and new ideas that follow it is lost sight of sometimes for a very long while. Then a fickle public turns back the pages of old fashion books, or some canny designer introduces some suggestion that brings again to light this or that feature, and behold, it is again all the rage!

At the moment, writes a correspondent in the New York Times, it is the mid-Victorian that is being revived in all of its original quaintness, as it was considered not so many years ago. The change has been evident for two seasons past in things other than women's dress—in furniture, interior decoration, garden landscapes. And now, as the last word in novelty, we have mid-Victorian jewelry. All of mother's old lockets and crosses and the big fat chains from which they hung may be brought from the antique treasure chest and worn with much pride because they are unmistakably the real thing.

The reproductions show in prominent shows are exceedingly handsome, for although they lack delicacy, detail and fineness of line, they have a certain opulent beauty and dignity. The rich deep-yellow Reunon gold is used, and the ornaments are sometimes set with pearls, brilliants or other jewels. Necklaces, pendants and brooches, all of the gold are available in ornate in workmanship. A "choker" necklace in a pattern taken from old Egyptian jewelry has pointed pendants in filigree.

are attached in a single row to a slender chain, and other necklaces are made with hollow balls, large or small, or of links in varied sizes.

Simple Ways to Remove Stains From Fabrics

Blood stains may be removed from fabric by soaking first in cold water and salt, then washing in tepid water with soap, or in case of bad stains by an application of peroxide of hydrogen.

Iodine stains may be soaked in a weak solution of carbonic acid and water or in diluted ammonia water, and afterward washed out with tepid water and no soap.

Ten, coffee and fruit stains on linen can usually be removed by pouring boiling water over the stains. If this fails, spread the spot over a bowl full of steaming hot water and rub it with a solution of oxalic acid. Then rinse in diluted ammonia water and finally in clear warm water.

Gleam stains may be removed with vinegar.

Iron rust should be treated with lemon juice and salt. Dampen the stain with hot water, apply a coating of salt and wet it with lemon juice. Place in the sun. Repeat the process until the stain starts to fade, then rinse in ammonia solution, then in clear water.

Ostrich Feathers

Ostrich feathers continue to be popular, but their use is confined to wraps now rather than gowns.

DRAWING TO A CLOSE

The campaign now being conducted preparatory to the primary election to be held on Saturday, August 1st, is one of the quietest in years according to local politicians.

Speculation has been rife as to the unusual lack of interest in this election, some to the effect that it is just the "quiet before the storm" that the voters are disgusted and a "hot" campaign may be expected while many claim that the voters are as much interested as usual but have made up their minds to refrain from getting excited and have determined to pick those they consider to be the best fitted for the places they seek, to quietly go to the polls and vote as good citizens and not about their business. With the list of candidates who offer their services this will not be a hard job and if every man and woman that plan of expressing their preference Boone county's affairs will be in efficient hands for the next four years.

THE PONY EXPRESS

The reminder of the famous pony express of 1860 was given a few days ago, by the news that the West Point class of '75 is going to arrange for a motion picture illustrating the career of Col. W. F. Cody (Buffalo Bill), one of the noted drivers of that remarkable system of communication.

The pony express was established to give quicker communication from the east to the Pacific coast, as it then took 22 days to get mail across by way of Panama. The Central Overland California and Pike's Peak Express Company established this system of relay riders on horse back, who were supposed to carry mail from St. Joseph to San Francisco in eight days, for $2.50 a half ounce. The quickest time ever made was when Lincoln's inaugural address was delivered in Sacramento in seven days, 17 hours.

This system at one time had about 500 horses and 80 riders, and each rider was supposed to cover 75 miles a day. Covering the wideness of the country traversed, the state of the crude roads of those times, the hostile tribes of Indians that were encountered, to say nothing of robbers, it was some job to carry the mail over such a route. It was exceedingly hazardous both for the riders and the station keepers along the trail.

It would seem to most people now incredible that such a distance could be traversed in such a way with the conditions then prevailing, in such a short time. The fact that it was done shows American courage and determination at its best.

If the present generation could have one with the resourcefulness, that these old pioneers showed, the so-called problem of those times that one meets in a county like Boone would seem very trifling.

EMPLOYING LOCAL HELP

An exchange prints a report of the meeting of its Board of Trade, at which the chairman of the meeting urged the business men to employ local help so far as possible. That of course is good advice for any town.

Business men usually get the best results by training up the young people of their own home community to help with their work. The local boys and girls know the people of the town better, and they fit in to the needs of the community. It also works well when the young people are taken in from the nearby rural districts, as these folks will be the means of bringing about closer relations between the town and the surrounding country.

PARKING PLACES

One good way for a town to encourage the people in the outlying territory to come in and trade, is to provide plenty of convenient parking space for their automobiles.

In some towns there is plenty of parking space, but the people of the town will fill the main space along in front of the stores so full with their cars, that outsiders have to go on some side street, and they do not like that. They prefer some place where they can keep an eye on their machines and where it will be easy to carry packages to them.

SERVICE OF A BALL TEAM

There may be some still who look at the idea of maintaining a good base ball team in a town as merely something attempted out of love for sport.

Such a movement, however, means more than that. It has often happened that the temper of a town was considerably changed by its success in organizing a good ball team. Previous to such organization, there are many who were restless and discontented. They were sick of the "same old year-home and longed to go elsewhere."

But when a local ball team is put on its feet and began to win some games, a new object of interest was created. People lost their desire for restless wandering, and the town seemed somehow to have parted with its grouchy feeling. Instead of seeing its young folks going elsewhere for amusement, people began to come in from outside to see the team. All which pays in many ways.

Every man should be proud of the place in which he lives and let out. No man can be honest and "knock" the concern that helps to feed him.

Before criticising the appearance of your home town, "would be a good idea to see that the walk in front of your house or place of business is swept."

To pay their war debts to the U. S. European countries will have to remit a total of approximately $30,000,000,000. This represents the interest and principal of the normal debt of $12,000,000,000 paid over a period of 62 years on the basis of the British funding agreement.

Before complaining that trade is dull, ask yourself if you are advertising as well as those who are getting the business. And before sending your money away from Boone county ask yourself if your home merchant has not got just the same article, for the same price or lower.

In the United States there are about 275,000 public school buildings in regular use. Pennsylvania leads with more than 15,000. Illinois ranks second with about 14,000. Iowa third with some 13,000. New York is fourth with about 12,000. But they are larger than those in any other state.

They were all young girls at a popular "club" dance. Several were drinking alcoholic "up'ch" and from flasks furnished by the boys; some were singing topical "suggestive" songs. A woman of the world looked on and smiled, as she remarked, "Other people's daughters." Would you smile, too, if your daughter were among them?

Over 400,000 depositors saved more than $130,000,000 per year in the postal savings system. If the interest paid was the same as that offered by most of the banks, the savings would be quadrupled because they are positively secured. But this would interfere with the profits of the banks, and is therefore out of the question.

During his address to the graduation class at West Point Acting Secretary of War D. F. Davis asserted that "There will be no profiting in the next conflict; nobody will have a chance to get rich; capital and labor will be conscripted on the same basis as fighting men." If that be true, the Secretary has made some basic miscalculation, for there won't be any such war. Who would a war like that? Its too horrible to contemplate.

Herbert Hoover has been added to the Cabinet sick list. The Secretary of Commerce is at his home in California under the care of a physician. His condition is not serious, according to information reaching his friends here, but he is said to have worn himself down in his work in Washington with the result that physicians have ordered him to take an absolute rest for an extended period. Secretary Weeks, who was critically ill a few weeks ago, is now reported on his way to recovery.

The government's efforts in the direction of war debt collections has caused the British Government to adopt a similar course. Among the nations to which Great Britain has addressed a dun is France, which owes the United States four billion dollars. In some quarters it is feared that the British action may complicate a possible adjustment with the French, who are adjusting their internal finances with a view to sending a debt commission to Washington. The Italian debt funding negotiations have been adjourned until August with only small progress being made.

Secretary of Labor Davis is to represent the Cabinet in Europe this summer since Secretary of the Treasury Mellon has elected to stick close to Washington to watch out for debt negotiations. Davis will investigate immigrant conditions abroad in addition to going on a pleasure trip on the continent and calling on his old friend, Mr. Alex. Moore, now the ambassador at Madrid. This was the first summer, for many years, that Secretary Mellon has not gone to Europe, he will spend much of his time during the hot months at South-Hampton Long Island, where he has a summer home.

Edward L. Doheny's lengthy defense in the New York Times against the Government's conspiracy charges against him in connection with his California oil leases has aroused widespread comment here, but is not expected to change the status of the civil and criminal cases which the government has instituted against Doheny and his oil companies. In copyrighted article in the New York paper Doheny declared that the U. S. was fearful of getting into war with Japan and this led to the contract to build oil storage tanks in Hawaii. According to Government officials, any possible fear of war was removed by the Washington Armament Conference before the Doheny contract was concluded and that the war scare talk brought out in the Senate oil investigation was never regarded seriously.

The Government ended the fiscal year of 1924-25 with a quarter of a billion dollars more of the people's money than was needed for operating expenses. The surplus will be retained in the treasury as a basis for the tax reduction which the administration has already promised and which will be urged to Congress in December. The amount left over was $50,000,000 more than had been estimated a few weeks ago by treasury officials. Receipts from all sources, however, exceed early calculations. A suggestion is being made a congressional circles for a law providing for automatic pro rata refunds to taxpayers at the end of every year in which a surplus is accumulated in the treasury. That this could be done by the treasury was shown when the 25 per cent income tax rebates were paid last year by order of Congress.

Little things that are allowed to go on without attention get big in time.

The United States' Unprecedented Growth and Her Economic Position

By CHARLES D. WALCOTT, Smithsonian Institution.

THE UNITED STATES' unprecedented growth and her present commanding economic position have been made possible by abundance of natural resources. Individual and public economic policies have been predicated on this abundance. Minerals, forests, fur and game animals, agricultural soils, range lands, fish, and water resources were all seemingly inexhaustible in supply, and all have been appropriated and exploited recklessly and wastefully. The cream has been skimmed, and, all too often, the milk has been thrown away.

The whole philosophy of exploitation has been based on the theory of making maximum profits for the exploiter, rather than the ideal of greatest service and lasting benefit to the people of the world as a whole. The resources seemed unlimited, and it was assumed that future requirements would adjust themselves automatically and that posterity would take care of itself.

Now the point has been reached where it is evident that the resources have a limit. Expansion cannot continue indefinitely, nor can even the present scale of consumption be maintained as population increases, unless steps are taken to replenish the supply. The pressure of scarcity and increasing costs of exploitation demand the elimination of wastes, the intensive utilization of the resources that are left, and the discovery or creation of new supplies.

The Tennessee Evolution Indictment Is a Step 1,000 Years Backward

By LUTHER BURBANK, Plant Evolutionist.

Every nation that does not believe in evolution will disappear from the earth. Indictment of the Tennessee teacher for teaching evolution is a step one thousand years backward. Evolution is truth, and truth must and will prevail. All my work with plants here in Santa Rosa daily demonstrates evolution. All growth—all life, is evolution.

Ignorance always has and always will fight evolution, for evolution is growth. The groups who are combating the theory of evolution have not found the truth and do not believe in it. Daily I am working on new plant species which are produced through a knowledge of the laws of evolution and which can be produced in no other way.

Evolution is contrary to theology, which may account for some of the animosity it has aroused, but it is not contrary to religion. Theology is man-made; religion is not. Truth is supreme. All life on the planet is one universal life, constantly evolving into higher and better forms—not at first created perfect, as some theologians would have us believe, but left to man for further evolution and improvement.

It is much more flattering to me to think that we are evolving into something better, than, as the older theologians would have us believe, that we were created in the garden of Eden and fell into disgrace afterward.

Even a man who would condemn evolution as a poor mechanic. The universal force which is creating all things is created by such an implication.

"Prof. Scopes Was Not Arrested for Doing Anything as an Individual"

By WILLIAM JENNINGS BRYAN, Anti-Evolutionist.

As an individual, Prof. John T. Scopes is perfectly free to think and speak as he likes, and the Christianism of Tennessee will protect him in the enjoyment of these inalienable rights. But that is not the Tennessee case and has nothing to do with it. Professor Scopes was not arrested for doing anything as an individual. He is arrested for violating a law as a representative of the state and as an employee in a school. As a representative he has no right to misrepresent; as an employee, he is compelled to act under the direction of his employers, and has no right to defy instructions and still claim his salary.

The right of free speech cannot be stretched as far as Professor Scopes is trying to stretch it. A man cannot demand a salary for saying what his employers do not want said, and he cannot require his employers to furnish an audience to talk to, especially an audience of children or young people, when he wants to say what the parents do not want said. The duty of a parent to protect his children is more sacred than the right of a teacher to speak, especially to teach what parents do not want taught, when the speaker demands pay for his teaching and insists on being furnished an audience to talk to.

And I may add that Professor Scopes is doing more harm to teachers than to anyone else. If he establishes the doctrine that a teacher can say anything he likes to the students regardless of the wishes of his employers, who are the parents and taxpayers, it will become necessary to inquire what teachers think before they are employed.

Paine Has Almost No Influence on Thinking in the United States

By THOMAS A. EDISON, in New York Times.

TOM PAINE has almost no influence on present-day thinking in the United States because he is unknown to the average citizen. Perhaps I might say right here that this is a national loss and a deplorable lack of understanding concerning the man who first proposed and first wrote those impressive words, "The United States of America." But it is hardly strange. Paine's teachings have been debarrd from schools everywhere and his views of life misrepresented until his memory is hidden in shadows, or he is looked upon as of unsound mind.

We never had a sounder intelligence in this republic. He was the equal of Washington in making American liberty possible. Where Washington performed Paine devised and wrote. The deeds of one in the field were matched by the deeds of the other with his pen. Washington himself appreciated Paine at his true worth. Franklin knew him for a great patriot and clear thinker. He was a friend and confidant of Jefferson, and the two must often have debated the academic and practical phases of liberty.

I consider Paine our greatest political thinker. As we have not advanced, and perhaps never shall advance, beyond the Declaration and Constitution, so Paine has had no successors who extended his principles. Although the present generation knows little of Paine's writings, and although he has almost no influence upon contemporary thought, Americans of the future will justly appraise his work. I am certain of it. Truth is governed by natural laws and cannot be denied. Paine spoke truth with a peculiarly clear and forceful ring. Therefore time must balance the scales.

Certainly we may believe that Washington had a considerable voice in the Constitution. We know that Jefferson had much to do with the document. Franklin also had a hand and probably was responsible in even larger measure for the Declaration. But all of these men had communed with Paine. Their views were intimately understood and closely correlated. There is no doubt whatever that the two great documents of American liberty reflect the philosophy of Paine.

VACATION TIME

July and August are the most popular vacation months. According to theory, everyone should have a vacation. Many do not get it at this time of year, or perhaps not at all. Farmers are extremely busy then, but they have time later when they can take a rest.

Mechanics may be expected to work continuously when business is good, but there may be idle times enough in their occupation so they are glad to work when there is work. The human machine was not meant to work without interruption. It is claimed that shoes will wear better if you do not wear one pair right along every day. And so people tend to get stale if their work continues without interruption.

People who get into a rut if they attempt to work 52 weeks in the year, and they need some variation to put zest into them. However, those who drive themselves too hard during a good time during those vacations, may return so tired that the change has not done them any good.

GREAT AMERICANS

When President Coolidge was recently asked what he intended to do while on his summer vacation, he remarked that he wanted to read the biographies of a number of great Americans.

Some folks who want to be thrilled, will say it would be pretty dull work to sit down on a hot summer afternoon, and read out of a big and heavy book, about some man of former times whom they perhaps never heard of. Yet the struggles and triumphs of these men would be more thrilling than any fiction. Every one of those men had great obstacles to overcome, but by resolutely contending with his difficulties, he went on to greatness.

The lesson would be taught by this study, that greatness does not depend wholly on the original gifts that one has. Many of these great folks never showed any great sign of eminence in youth. But they had courage, and did their duty every time. That led people to trust them more, until they became able to do things far beyond the power of ordinary humanity.

During the spring planting season of 1925, 11,000,000 trees have been set out in New York state.

A commonwealth which is planting spirit has made such progress during only a half year, is going to be a very beautiful state in 10 to 20 years.

Our people have backed down their trees so mercilessly in their haste to make money, that many localities in Kentucky once beautiful with foliage, are now spots of bare earth. Something ought to be done everywhere to restore the conditions that made the country so wonderful before the hand of man got in its destructive work.

Claimed there are too many white collar men, but they are very ornamental when they get out on fashion parade at the summer resorts.

Summer is said to be the silly season, but there is a powerful movement to continue to observe the same throughout the year.

LOWER GUNPOWDER

Too Late for Last Week)

Carl Hendrick and three children, Manfred, Wilma and Rosie and Mrs. Hendrick's sister Julia and family were Sunday guests of Wm. Shinkle.

Oth Hubbard and wife, Len Hubbard and wife and two children, Edward Shinkle wife and baby and Beni Slayback wife and little son of Covington, were entertained at dinner Sunday by Boone Williamson and wife of Possum Hollow.

The boat races staged at Rising Sun July 4th were a great success on the part of attendance, there being a large crowd both in Rising Sun and Rabbit Hash. The best prizes were carried away by two Rising Sun men, Whitlock and Dowers, respectively. Fire works were displayed at 10 o'clock in the evening, which were especially beautiful from the Kentucky shore.

Stanley Ryle and family were the week-end guests of Mr. and Mrs. Johnnie Jones.

A very hard rain fell here and in adjacent vicinities Saturday night. Some hail was seen.

Reuben Hager and wife were the guests of his mother Mrs. Pete Hager, Sunday.

Foster McElroy who has been working in Gallatin county, is here on a visit.

THE LIGHT OF LIFE

Ten years ago William A. Hadley, a Chicago educator, was stricken blind almost over night. Most men with such an appreciation of the good things in life, would have been discouraged, disappointed, their usefulness gone.

He took up the study of the braille system, the alphabet of the blind, and after five years began teaching it by mail, thus bringing to the door of the blind in reduced financial circumstances a new hope.

"When the light went out of Prof. Hadley's eyes, the windows of heaven were opened for us," wrote one blind girl, who had been taught short-story writing by correspondence school methods.

Prof. Hadley is quoted as saying: "If I had to choose between having my sight back, or my work, I would choose my work."

Here is a frank confession of the rewards of a life of service—an unwillingness to put aside the fruits of an appreciated work for the priceless sense of sight.

Yet the most of us rush on, selfishly, with little thought of others when there are such lessons as this to ponder. How many bills we all handle labor pays in a currency with a much higher exchange rate than the American silver dollar.

Prof. Hadley's name may never go down in history, but he is none the less great, because he has brought the light of life to scores upon scores of his unfortunates.

COUNTERFEIT MONEY

A warning has been issued in certain localities against a large number of counterfeit $5, $10, and $20 bills, recently put into circulation.

It seems rather alarming when such frauds are made known, and many citizens will no doubt fear they will get "stuck" with one or more of these bills. Yet when you consider how many bills we all handle in the course of a year, and how few of them ever prove bad, it can be seen that the process of manufacturing money is guarded with great skill. Also the genuine money, that is so skillfully engraved, that it is a very delicate and difficult job to imitate it.

Also credit must be given to the bankers who are very alert and keen in detecting such money. The crooks who contemplate this form of fraud should realize that it is a very difficult one to put over. They stand an excellent chance of getting into trouble if they monkey with Uncle Sam's green and yellow backs.

CARD OF THANKS

In this way, I wish to thank every friend, neighbor, and M. W. A. who came in so thankfully and cleaned all of Stanley Mullin's crop out. We all hope it will be the Lord's will for Stanley to soon be back with us all. Nobody knows how I appreciated your kindness.

Experience Does Count

Our many years of funeral directing have given us a rich background of experience and a service that we are proud to offer. Funeral directing is a profession and art, and to be well done it must have a firm foundation of experience as a guide. That—we are able to offer.

FIREWORKS

The hour of July Fourth when fireworks are discharged has always come as a refreshing contrast to many. Nervous folks, who lost their sleep the "night before" and have been jumping when some obstreperous boy has set off a firecracker, feel relieved when the quiet evening hour comes, and the celebration is turned into a pageant of beauty by fireworks.

Some economists may say that a fireworks is extravagant, but it gives so much pleasure and in so many cases a work of art, that this form of celebration will always be popular.

In ancient times fireworks of a different type were used for war purposes, and the old Greek fire was a horrible combination of sulphur, pitch, charcoal, etc., used to set buildings and vessels afire. It shows progress that these terrible combinations have been supplanted by combinations designed solely to please the eye and glorify a patriotic occasion.

RAPS P. O. DEPARTMENT

Judge Hutchinson of the U. S. District Court of Texas, scores the postoffice department for not keeping fraudulent matter out of "the mails until after the victims have been swindled. He declared that "if the Postoffice Department would devote as much vigilance to checking in their inception these fraudulent schemes as to sweeping up the weeks after the hurricane has passed, the postoffice establishment would continue to be, as it was designed, to all the people a blessing and not a curse."

AMERICAN SYMPATHY

Whatever fault is found with the materialism of America, is at least shows fine generosity when great calamities occur. The beautiful city of Santa Barbara is now the victim of such a disaster, and money would flow in in great amounts, if the same were needed. Apparently what the city needs most is such confidence in the courage of its people, that ample loans will be available for reconstruction. There is abundant reason for the display of such confidence, for Santa Barbara will make good.

Close relations between our states intimate business ties, and the thoroughness with which the newspapers report events, bind the American people closely together. The deplorable misfortune of this Pacific coast city is as deeply regretted 3,000 miles away as it is in its home state.

CONFIDENCE

Ever since the beginning of the world, CONFIDENCE has played a tremendous part in the preservation of peace and honor.

Individuals, communities and nations filled with confidence in each other, find true contentment and good feeling. Through this confidence, they are of mutual benefit to each other. Just as soon as that confidence is destroyed, that which was productive is gone and all concerned suffer.

Confidence is the basis of business. Confidence is responsible for the credit system in the commercial world.

When you buy merchandise or service from a business man you get credit because of his confidence in you. He believes in you. He knows that you have built up a character and reputation that deserves his confidence.

Keep that confidence! Keep it for your own sake as well as for the sake of others. Pay your bills and pay them promptly. If circumstances arise that you cannot take care of your obligations at the promised time, be frank with your creditor. Let him know that you are remembering his faith in you.

THE FARMER'S VACATION

According to theory, everyone should have a vacation, but it is complained that the farmer does not get one in the summer, which the majority of people consider the most favorable time. While many families are enjoying their holidays, the farmer is probably working over time to complete his harvest.

Yet he needs a rest time, and his wife may need it even more. He should if possible lay his plans for them to get off for an outing in the fall or winter, and if he keeps his eyes and ears open, as most farmers do, he may earn enough to pay a good part or all of his expenses.

Twenty years ago only 15 per cent of the people of this country owned their own homes. Today it is claimed that 40 per cent either own their own homes or are paying for them.

COUNTRY TEACHERS

The school authorities in small towns and rural districts often find themselves up against it in their effort to secure competent school teachers. What will very frequently happen is that bright girls will teach a short time in such a place, but pretty soon some school superintendent from a city which pays much larger salaries, invites her to come to that place. The lure of money and what is called a wider experience leads many to accept such offers.

And yet such a young woman may not have a cent more money after a year of such teaching, than she had in the country town where she started in. She is likely to be overlooked and neglected in the larger place, and is frequently lonely in such surroundings.

It sometimes happens that such a teacher has such unusual capacity, that she can advance very rapidly, and in a few years be earning large pay. But unless she is conscious of these exceptional gifts, she would do well to make sure whether she is making any real gain by the change. She will find just as bright and capable people in a country town as she will anywhere, and she will learn as much from them as she can anywhere. She is invited to help in many forms of community effort, which contribute toward a person's development.

A teacher may feel that she has all she can do in her school work without going into outside activities. And yet if she has the enthusiasm to take hold of community affairs, she learns much from such contacts and acquires more power for leadership and she makes friends that will be very valuable. She will probably become a more pleasing and capable woman, than if she went off to some city where she took less part in community activities.

MAKING MONEY

The idea prevails among some of the young men and boys in small towns, that there is not much chance to make money in those localities. If they want to get ahead financially, they get the idea that they must go off to some city, where they feel that in some magic and unexpected way, the doors of fortune are going to open to them.

Yet if a fellow has that peculiar gift for efficiency and service so that he can make money, he can usually make it anywhere. Agriculture is the most important single industry of the nation. There should be a chance to make money in supplying the needs of the farmers and the rest of the population in any locality, and in performing the tasks of distribution and marketing for them more efficiently than they have been performed before.

It is said that with favorable weather conditions the largest melon crop in the history of Trimble county will be produced this year. They will be on the market in about four weeks.

Tobacco is looking fine, and some of the early setting is being topped.

MIX STARS AS HERO OF ZANE GREY STORY

After a brilliant sortie into romantic old England as Dick Turpin, Tom Mix has returned to his no less romantic West as Jim Lassiter in Zane Grey's "Riders of the Purple Sage," the William Fox production which will be at the Burlington Theatre Friday night and at Petersburg Theatre Saturday night.

"Riders of the Purple Sage" is up to the high standard which might be expected of a combination of Tom Mix, Zane Grey and William Fox. It is a typical Mix picture, full of the valiancy, chivalry and grandeur of the West.

Mix does some excellent acting as the soft-spoken two-gun hero. Tony carries his master through perilous situations and aids him with his horse sense. Lynn Reynolds, who directed the photoplay, has made the best of the excellent opportunities for showing the incomparable Mix in daring feats.

A mysterious masked boy rider is woven into the narrative, and the revelation of his identity is one of the surprises of the picture.

Mabel Ballin is charming in the role of Jane Withersteen, the girl rancher who falls in love with Lassiter. A subordinate love theme is delightfully played by Marian Nixon.

The woman of today like the girl of today is holding her heart too cheap. Modern love is becoming cheap. Every woman is essentially heart and love. She may pretend to be something else, something more; she may have her fads, and her fancies and her hobbies. She may even adopt celibacy and proudly acclaim a spinsterhood—but, fundamentally, just the same, she is heart and love.

A cheap heart and a cheap love cheapens her. And nothing that is cheap is beautiful or endures for long.

MEXICAN BEAN BEETLE APPEARS IN BOONE CO.

Destructive Insect Works on Local Bean Patches

The Mexican Bean Beetle made its appearance in Boone county recently and is ravaging the bean patches. The larvae are small yellow worms, living on the under side of the bean leaves. They are short and thick and covered with spines. They eat very rapidly until mature when they shed the spiny covering and turn into a beetle, similar to the lady bug, except larger, yellow in color and has eight black spots on each wing shield. When the beetle matures it is much the shape of the striped cucumber beetle.

The beetles mature very rapidly, and eat continuously. When once attacked the bean patch soon turns brown and is practically ruined.

The bean beetle can best be controlled by dusting with one pound of Fluffy Sulfur Fluo Silicate thoroughly mixed with nine pounds of hydrated lime. The former costs about 13 cents per pound and is not injurious to the human family. It should be applied to the under side of the leaves either with a blower or it can be applied with a can with a perforated bottom.

Mr. Will Clayton of Hebron was the first to use this dust in Northern Kentucky and found it gave practically 100% control.

Mr. Matson, Boone County Agent, urges that every one watch their beans and fight these beetles to check their damages as much as possible. One beetle killed this year means many less to fight next year.

"OLD IRONSIDES" TO BE REBUILT Afloat

Ancient War Vessel Too Old To Be Dry-Docked

Boston.—Lieutenant John A. Lord U. S. N., the Naval Constructor who has been assigned the task of rebuilding the U. S. S. CONSTITUTION, the famous frigate, after a careful survey has reported to Rear Admiral L. R. de Steiguer, Commandant of the First Naval District, that any attempt to dock the historic ship in her present condition might result in her collapse and make her restoration impossible.

Most of the job of rebuilding "Old Ironsides" must be done while she is afloat, for the moment that she rests on her keel and on bilge blocks in drydock the vertical pressure on the center lines of the badly decayed frigate will cause her decks to buckle, and in all probability they will fall to pieces. This was the fate of the old wooden frigate "RICHMOND" some years ago when she was placed in drydock at the Norfolk Navy Yard. Her decks buckled and her lines became so distorted that the Navy Department was forced to condemn her.

While Old Ironsides is afloat the pressure is evenly distributed, and the work of rebuilding above the water line will proceed without mishap. Then, with an elaborate system of shoring her up, she can be placed in a dry dock to have her hull rebuilt.

Lieutenant Lord comes of a long line of Maine wooden-ship builders and is the only expert that the Navy Department could muster to rebuild the CONSTITUTION when the school children of the Nation raise $500,000, the amount necessary for her restoration. The Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks, upon the invitation of the Secretary of the Navy, have made plans to make contact with every school in the Nation and collect the children's pennies, dimes and nickels during the week of October 19th-24th.

25,000 JOBS FOR VETERANS

There are now 25,000 rehabilitated World War veterans who need jobs. A drive to find places for them in industry has been started by the National Association of Manufacturers.

No undue consideration is asked for these men. They have been so trained that they have a distinct pride in their ability to stand on their own feet and render a service fully equal to the compensation they get.

It would seem as if the business concerns that get these men would be fortunate. Much money has been spent on their training, and they ought to know the most modern ways of performing various kinds of work and exercising management.

The hard experiences they have been through ought to make them a very determined type of fellows. They have fought a war successfully, and they should be equally able to fight the battles of peace. They would take their duties seriously, and have the same spirit of earnestness that they showed as soldiers. It is very common for workers to

BOONE COUNTY LOST AN EXCELLENT CITIZEN

Hugh Carey Enlivened by a Friend in Letter to the Recorder

Editor Boone County Recorder:

I read an item in McCauley's Magazine once which said: "If you see a man do a good act take him by the hand and tell him of it. Don't wait to write it in cold marble." In reference to the passing away of Hugh Carey, I would say, The writer boarded with Mr. Carey for five years owing to ill health, and during that time saw many of his kindly deeds. A neighbor would never be in hard luck without his coming forward to offer help. He was ready at all times to do a good turn, to any one black or white, as this was attested to at his funeral on Monday last. St. Paul's Catholic church was crowded to the doors. The funeral was one of the largest ever seen around here, and men were not ashamed to be seen wiping tears from their eyes as poor Hugh was borne to his last resting place. It will be hard to fill his place. Generous, cheerful and kind. The heartfelt sympathy of the entire community around Boone county goes to his family. We sincerely hope he is now enjoying the reward of a well spent life.

Picnic Enjoyed at Harvest Home Grounds Last Thursday

The annual outing of the B. B. S. S. was held last Thursday July 16th. It was an ideal day for such an occasion. There was a threat of rain during the morning but the clouds passed and seemed to make the atmosphere cool and pleasant.

The crowd began gathering about ten o'clock and continued coming until midday. At a quarter to eleven we assembled for a devotional service. This was led by the pastor who read some verses of scripture, and after making some remarks, offered prayer. This was followed by singing two verses of "Love Lifted Me." After singing a Howdy Do song and having the hoop race, led by brethren Blythe and Craddock, the ladies began to make ready for the best part of the picnic according to Dr. Yelton. In the meantime the men and boys were indulging in barn yard golf, better known as pitching horseshoes.

The report went out that lunch was ready. So far as we know no one had to be unduly urged to participate. A line was formed and one by one we received well-filled plates. For one time during the day there was quiet. Only now and then could a voice be heard and that was usually a request for another sandwich or more ice cream. Again the clouds threatened rain, but the crowd kept threatening the food. It looked so much like rain that Dr. and Mrs. Duncan had already decided to not give up their plates but resort to a car and finish them.

The afternoon was given to contests of various kinds. The suit case race was greatly enjoyed. It is not yet known if "Bob" Berkshire has all the cracker crumbs out of his ears or not. Several foot races were held. The race between Mr. Craddock and Mr. Hubert Gaines in which Craddock won, and fat man's race between Huey and Wood were the features of the races. The boys enjoyed a game of hat ball. The ladies engaged in pitching horseshoes.

Last, but not least, was the young ladies' base ball game led by Mrs. Hensley and Mrs. Duncan. The batteries were Mrs. Hensley and Hazel Marie Clore for one team and Mrs. Randall and Virginia Yelton for the other. The features of the game were the pitching of Mrs. Hensley, a home run by Mrs. Hensley and a home run by Mrs. Hubert Gaines, and one caught ball by Miss Helen Walton. This closed the day's program and we all went home feeling good.

take their jobs in a trifling way looking at them merely as a method of earning spending money, and they are anxious all day to see the clock hands move round so they can quit and go in for the sports. The business men all know that type, and they have had to employ too many of them.

These veterans' first anxiety will be to make good and make themselves useful to their employers.

It would seem a lasting reproach on this country if these men are allowed to remain idle long. They gave us everything they had, and went into battle so that our country could maintain its ideals safe from interference. We now owe them a great debt that can never be repaid by money. But we can see to it that the doors of industry open to them and they are given a chance. Let us take care of some of them here in Boone county.

THE ever-versatile Oppenheim has written more of a love story than is usual with him, but it is not without the international complications, fascinating women, exotic characters and exciting incidents that have made his novels so popular.

This romance was dedicated to the author's secretary because she loved it best of all his books. The preference of the secretary of an internationally famous novelist would seem to be a pretty safe guide to a highly interesting story.

County Committeemen Attend The Military Highway Meeting

ORGANIZATION REFUSES TO ACCEPT PROPOSAL OF SENATOR ERNST

Carrollton, Ky., July 18.—Advice contained in telegrams signed by Senators Richard P. Ernst and Fred M. Sackett received in the past week by the president of the Fort Thomas-Camp Knox Military Highway Association, requesting that efforts to obtain a Federal military highway along the Ohio River be abandoned, was unequivocally vetoed by a session of the Executive Committee of the Association here today.

Instead, action to proceed with the attempt to obtain the Federal aid, and steps toward bringing the two Senators "into line" were unanimously approved at the close of the three-hour meeting.

The telegrams followed promises alleged to have been made at the first mass meeting of the road association five weeks ago by the Senators of assistance "in every way possible" in the obtaining of a Federal appropriation for a highway between Fort Thomas and Camp Knox. While the entire context was not given out the sense of the messages was reported to advise the committee in session today that Federal construction of a military highway in Kentucky had been reported to be impossible during the last session of Congress, and that all further effort should be in the direction of obtaining aid from the Kentucky State Highway Commission. The messages were said to have been sent from Macinac Island, Michigan, the home of Mrs. A. T. Hert, whom the Kentucky Senators have been visiting.

Firm disapproval of what was termed "the spirit of the telegrams and of their senders" was voiced by President Barker of the association. Congressman Rouse and others at the meeting.

So strong was the sentiment that a committee consisting of J. T. Hatfield of Kenton county, William B. Belknap of Oldham county, Wood F. Axton of Jefferson county and the president ex officio, was appointed by Mr. Barker to confer with and "bring into line" Senators Sackett and Ernst.

Following on the heels of the reading of the telegrams was a warning issued by Dora L. Bell of Trimble county to the effect that efforts were being made to obtain any Federal road grant that might be made for the Ohio Valley for a road through Indiana and Ohio along the northern side of the river.

Bell declared that a recent conference of Federal engineers and the Kentucky State Highway Commission had brought forth a report from one of the engineers that road construction was under way around Madison, Ind., and that on account of present road facilities there, disapproval of the War Department might be expected for the Kentucky project.

To counteract the reported endeavors for a Federal road in Indiana, the committee appointed to advise with the Kentucky Senators was urged to immediate action. Furthermore, the drafting and presentation to Congress next December of a bill seeking a complete survey of the Kentucky road route was ordered pushed.

Promises Presentation
Congressman Rouse promised the immediate presentation of the bill in the House of Representatives in December, provisionally upon the possible declination of Senators Sackett and Ernst to take that action.

It was pointed out, however, that on account of the "prestige" Kentucky holds at present in its representation by two "Administration" Senators, both Republicans, their pressure in Congress not only would be more advantageous than the pressure of a "minority" Representative, as Mr. Rouse, but also would be more productive of results.

Four plans were laid before the session of the association. One proposal was to obtain State aid, urged by the two Senators in the telegrams. A second advance and attempt to seek a combined Federal and State aid highway.

The third plan was introduced by Monte J. Goble, Cincinnati representative of Hamilton county, Ohio, urging that in asking for a Federal road from Congress, the proposal take the form of a request for aid in the construction of a continuation or link to an interests or "super" highway, as it is known, that would connect with the three C's highway of Ohio at Covington, continue it through Louisville and join the Jackson Highway to the South.

The fourth plan was the original proposition of obtaining a military highway between Fort Thomas and Camp Knox.

The First Plan
Concerning the first plan, that of obtaining State aid, which means getting the State Highway Commission to contribute a certain percentage of the cost of the road, such as 50 or 60 per cent, the counties through which the route would pass paying the remainder, the point was made that no appropriations for highways could be made by the State commission before July 1, 1926.

Even at that time, it was said any attempt to obtain State assistance would have to be preceded by a complete subscription of the counties by individual pledges of 40 to 50 per cent of the cost. Such a proposition, it was declared, not only would be more doubtful of success, but also would require a longer time for completion.

Second Proposition
To the propositions of combined Federal and State aid or for the Louisville to Cincinnati road proposed by Mr. Goble, more favorable reception were accorded. By these plans, it was suggested that the counties through which the road would pass subscribe 25 per cent of the cost, the State to offer a similar amount next year, and the Federal Government to give the remainder.

However, it was pointed out, that since the association started out with the idea and policy of obtaining a military highway over the shortest practical route, which would throw it along the river valley, it should pursue to a conclusion the original plan.

Also, it was said, there is an amount due from the Government as its share in the annual appropriation but—$33,000,000. This amount is cumulative it was said, and probably would be of access upon the possible failure of the attempt for the military highway.

Regarding the original plan itself and the possibility of a military road being designated to pass through Southern Indiana, as reported by Mr. Bell, it was averred that the proposed route through the Kentucky counties often had been approved by military authorities.

The survey of a river road proposed in past years, the Louisville to Milton Road, a part of which lies along the present proposed route, it was said, was declared by General Pershing to be one of his favorite road surveys, and the survey itself was said to be hanging on the walls of a War Department office as a model survey of a road through hill country.

Apart from its dealing with ways and means of construction of the road the committee also took steps toward organizing as a permanent body. A committee to draw up a constitution and by-laws was appointed to consist of Oris S. Ware of Kenton county, Wood F. Axton of Jefferson county and Robert T. Crowe of Oldham county.

This committee was called into secret session, but on reporting declared that on account of the singleness of purpose of the association, that of obtaining a road, immediate action was unnecessary beyond empowering the president to appoint committees looking to the fulfillment of its purpose.

The executive committee of the association, which met today is composed of the president and secretary-treasurer of the entire association, Ralph M. Barker and John J. Howe of Carrollton, respectively; of county chairmen chosen by mass meetings of the various counties within the past few weeks, and representatives from each county, appointed by the president. County secretaries have also been selected in many instances by the various counties.

of the Kentucky Jockey Club, Louisville, Kentucky.

Dear Mr. Winn:

The Kentucky Derby of 1926, won by Flying Bitum, was probably the best handled race I have ever witnessed in this country. Persons who never saw a horse race read the accounts of this race in the papers throughout the country, with much interest and this fact has increased the popularity of the Kentucky Derby in this country. The Kentucky in recent years. The pari-mutuel system of sport in Old Kentucky is the only fair method of betting and it was a wonderful sight to see the thousands of people who handled the money in the race. The seven races Derby Day. A great crowd, great horses and a great race. I have never witnessed a Kentucky Derby at Churchill Downs have met the greatest sporting event in the world.

Respectfully yours,

AGRICULTURAL FAIRS

The system of agricultural fairs that has grown up all over the country has been one of the most important forces for the improvement of rural conditions and farm production.

That statement would not commonly be disputed, yet as a practical matter it is difficult in many communities to interest the people in the idea of sending exhibits to such shows.

People in some neighborhoods may say that a certain set of exhibitors usually get the best of the prizes, and that it is not of much use for those who have not competed regularly, to enter for these contests. On it may be argued that it takes too much valuable time for a farmer to prepare an exhibit and get it to the fair grounds and see that it is properly displayed.

Yet the habit of presenting such exhibits is a valuable one, and it gives a man who is improving his product a splendid boost. He becomes known as a progressive man, and he gets ideas as to how any kind of product can be made more valuable. If he will keep exhibiting year after year, and watch the methods of those who win the premiums, he is likely to get some himself, and the reputation and prosperity that results.

It is a fine thing for schools, granges, business men, and various organizations and interests to offer exhibits. It is particularly desirable for country children to form a habit of producing something worthy of exhibition. If they start in with that purpose young, they are likely to develop excellence in some form of production, and settle down permanently in a community where they are showing a capacity for doing good work. Every rural section needs its own agricultural fair, and the people should co-operate to make them successful.

Delightful New Serial Starting in

BOONE COUNTY RECORDER
NEXT WEEK

The Coolidges will hardly know the old homestead when they get back to Washington from Swampscott. The White House is being given a complete overhauling inside to carry out plans to refurnish it in early American style instead of the French colonial style which was adopted during the Roosevelt Administration at a cost of half a million dollars. Only $50,000 has been appropriated thus far to make the changes, but this amount will be added to later. The American Institute of Architecture opposed the change, but backed down when it was learned that the President thought that the overhauling would improve the appearance of the Mansion.

Prohibition Commissioner Haynes plans to stick on the job for another year at least, although he has been requested of nearly all his previous authority in enforcing the Volstead Act. The crowning blow was the Treasury order abolishing the propaganda bureau which Haynes organized during the Harding Administration and which spent hundreds of thousands of dollars in attempting to create sentiment in favor of prohibition enforcement. This was one of the items which always drew an attack from wets in Congress, especially when it was revealed one time that the expense account of one of the Haynes dry crusaders included $10 for a pair of white flannel trousers, purchased while "selling prohibition in south Florida."

Two hearings will get under way at the Capitol this week, both of them in the Senate. The Senate privileges and Elections Committee will begin the re-count of the ballots in the election in which Senator Smith Brookhart, the independent Republican incumbent or Dan Stock, his Democratic opponent. Stock received considerable support from regular Republicans in Iowa and for this reason the Republicans in the Senate would be pleased to see him win out rather than Brookhart, who has been read out of the Republican party for supporting LaFollette in the last campaign. The other hearing involves penal rates.

Efforts to get Senator George W. Norris to take up the reins of leadership of the Third Party have failed. Norris has advised his friends here that he does not want to be identified with any party and wants to pursue an independent course in the Senate and in national politics. Norris is a close friend, however, of Robert M. LaFollette, Jr., son of the late Wisconsin Senator, and is expected to take an active part in the young man's campaign for the Senate to succeed his father.

Col. Clarence Sherrill, who is in charge of public grounds in the capital, is said to be in for an official reprimand for trying to pass the buck to President Coolidge on the Ku Klux Klan demonstration to be held here in August. The Klan has been given authority by Sherrill to gather in the park back of the White House, but when scores of protests were made against this action, Sherrill wrote to the President asking him what he thought of it and made the letter public here before it reached Mr. Coolidge in Massachusetts. Officially, the letter was lost in the mail. At least, there have been no indications that the President ever got it. He succeeded during the last campaign in side stepping the Ku Klux Klan issue and doesn't want to get mixed up in it now, according to friends here.

THE CONSTITUTION

Within a very recent period 35 of the 48 states have passed laws which require that the constitution of the United States shall be taught in their schools.

This requirement should be extended to every state in the Union. In a self-governing country like this, duties of citizenship can only be appreciated by people who are versed in the sound principles upon which the foundation of the government rests. Yet it has been discovered that not one in ten of the native-born voters can recite or recall more than one paragraph of that document, and millions of so-called patriotic citizens have only heard it read once or twice.

Every feature of the Constitution which is the basic plan of government should be interesting not only to the boys and girls in the schools, but to every man and woman wishing to acquire a bit of knowledge which every intelligent citizen of the United States should possess.

Imaginative summer boarders remark "What are the wild waves saying!" In some cases they are remarking that the overseas board bills must be paid or the guest's rooms will be vacated.

"A Strange and Baffling Race of Wanderers From Northeastern Asia"

By MANUEL GAMIO, Mexican Anthropologist

CENTURIES before Columbus launched his caravels a strange and baffling race of wanderers came from northeastern Asia in ships of mystery to discover and develop the virgin soil of the American continent.

With equal readiness these hardy adventurers trod the trackless deserts and the snow wreaths of dizzy peaks. Fearlessly they explored remote caverns and hostile tropical jungles. Struggling through catyldem, hunger and epidemic, this race of bronze conquerors proved over and over again its indomitable strength and manly will.

Artistic, sentimental, harmonious, the original Americans from Asia built powerful empires, created strange theogonies and wise laws. They developed a marvelous architecture and a graceful, colorful art, profusely expressed by the decorator, the weaver and the worker in metals and precious stones.

Today this race is grief-stricken, silent and humiliated, revealing no clue to its magnificent heritage. There is no one to understand or to receive the mute protest of its afflicted soul. There is no one to wait with devoted faith that certain hour of its redemption when, cast in the molds of modern civilization, its latent ancestral virtues will reawaken in triumph.

The highest homage of mankind has been paid to Columbus as the discoverer of America. Several countries and numerous cities bear his name. In all latitudes bronze and marble immortalize his genius and poets ceaselessly sing his odyssey. Only with Spain, the conqueror, does Columbus, the explorer, share his glory.

The fame of the Great Admiral is merited and justified. But his undertaking is not comparable to the achievement of those who preceded him here by a hundred and fifty centuries. Some dauntless son of the indigenous race was the first to plant his roving footsteps on this land. If honor were given to whom honor is due, he would be exalted as the true discoverer of America.

To Be Broke and to Be Turned Down by His Girl at the Same Time

By JAMES L. FORD, in Theatre Magazine.

The education of the dramatist should be that of life rather than of books. I cannot conceive of a real dramatist who has not known what it was to be broke and turned down by his girl at the same time. Such an experience is of far greater value than the most exhaustive study of the work of Euripides, though thoughtful consideration of the Greek dramas may be taken by one familiar with the teachings of life as a postgraduate course.

It is often said by those who favor dramas of the highest type that there is no reason why play-writing should not be combined with other professions and taught as effectively as are law and medicine.

But the practice of law rests on the solid foundation of the Constitution and that of medicine or surgery on the immutable laws which govern the human body, whereas the writing of dramas has no foundation save the ever-shifting quicksand of public taste.

Conditions in Life Which Favor the Success of Motion Pictures

By LOUIS WEINBERG, in Current History.

Is the enthusiasm for motion pictures an artificial thing created by the promoters, or is the success of the promoters due to the fact that there are conditions in modern life which favor the success of motion pictures? A most cursory consideration of the subject must reveal the answer. Motion pictures were no doubt heavily advertised, but their success has been primarily due to the fact that they provided in an easily available way for the recreational needs of modern life. It is in the nature of this high-speed system that millions of the city workers, caught in the grind and the routine of their daily tasks, overwrought by the whirl of business deals, inhibiting the natural play of mind, muscle, mood, should seek escape in some medium of swift experience which brings visions of financial success, of free, unrestrained joy, of the thrills and dangers of outdoor adventures. It is also in the nature of our industrial order to stimulate in our rural population a desire for the luxuries, the pleasures, real or imaginary, to be found in the big city.

"If the Government of Mexico Is Now on Trial Before the World"

By PLUTARCO ELIAS CALLES, President of Mexico.

If the government of Mexico, as affirmed, is now on trial before the world, such is the case with the government of the United States as well as all those of other countries; but if it is to be understood that Mexico is on trial in the guise of a defendant, my government absolutely rejects with energy such imputation which, in essence, would only mean an insult.

To conclude, I declare that my government, conscious of the obligations imposed by international law, is determined to comply with them, and, therefore, to extend due protection to the lives and interests of foreigners; that it only accepts and hopes to receive the help and support of all the other countries based on a sincere and loyal co-operation and according to the invariable practice of international friendship.

But in no way it shall admit that a government of any nation may pretend to create a privileged situation for its nationals in the country, nor shall it either accept any foreign interference contrary to the rights of sovereignty of Mexico.

Europe Is Desperately Anxious for Our Moral Support on Any Terms

By W. B. MCKINLEY, Senator From Illinois.

Europe has given up all hope of persuading the United States to enter the League of Nations. Talk of a limitation of arms conference is futile until France has been satisfied by some sort of a security pact. The European nations are so anxious to have this country enter the World court that they are willing to have us enter on our own terms.

I have been visiting Europe for seven years and this trip convinces me that Europe has given up all hope of our entering the league. Europe recognizes we are the most powerful and the most prosperous country in the world and it is desperately anxious to have our moral support. Europeans no longer expect a political tieup with this country, but they do want a working understanding in a united effort to keep the world at peace.

Two years ago Lord Robert Cecil said to me, "We want the United States on any terms. If your nation objects to the selection of the present court, the machinery is a matter of words, as far as my government and others are concerned. The United States should be a member."

Mrs. Winston and I are enjoying a pilgrimage to the "Eternal City" where we first met. We spent our 25th anniversary here on the 20th inst. Italy is "coming back" fast and Rome is growing in size, population and beauty.

Sincerely,

TO THE VOTERS OF BOONE CO:
Some of the people are under the impression that the county furnishes the provisions for the jail and also pays the Hotel for preparing the meals and the Jailor only carries it to the jail and gets one ($1.00) dollar a day for each prisoner. Now I wish this was true, for I would be able to retire and hand the job to some one else. But in answer to this I will say, I pay for all provisions at my own expense, carry it home and my wife cooks and prepares it, and I carry it back and serve it to the prisoners at $1.00 per day for County prisoners and seventy-five cents per day to State prisoners. So much for that.

I have been accused of several little things that are not worth mentioning, for false statements always help the man about whom they are told. If you get sick you are trying to create sympathy; if you get out to see the people, you ought to be home attending to the duties you are paid for doing; if you do that you don't try to see the people and are too confident; and if you die, you die to keep from being defeated. Please coach me, for I did rob a bird's nest when I was seven years old.

I have been to each precinct, and will go as much as I can, without neglecting my duties, as I have no one to leave here. Can't see all of you but my will is good and all of you will understand. I thank you.

Kentucky's Economic Welfare Is Largely Dependent On COAL

Don't get the impression that the coal-mine operators and their thousands of employees in Kentucky are the only people interested in the success or failure of this great business. Every county—every community—every citizen of the State—is directly affected by the prosperity of the coal industry.

Consider these facts:—First, that the great sums of money per year are paid in taxes by the coal-mine operators of Kentucky, and by individuals and businesses directly dependent on the coal industry for their support. These funds go into the public treasury for the support of State institutions, the maintenance of schools, the building of roads, streets, etc. You, as a citizen of Kentucky, share in the community prosperity and comforts which are largely paid for by coal taxes and coal wages.

In order to pay these taxes—and to give well-recompensed employment to 60,000 citizens of Kentucky—the mine owners must market their product at a profit—and nine-tenths of their output must be sold outside of Kentucky. (Kentucky consumes but four million tons of coal per year, whereas the present annual output of Kentucky mines is about forty-five million tons.)

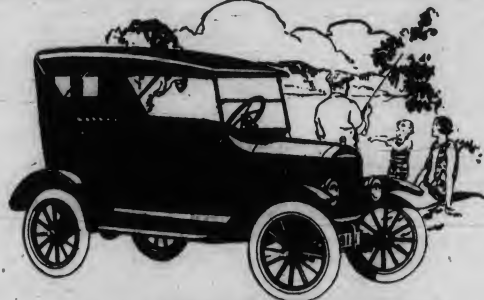

Shorter hauls and lower freight rates make it hard for Kentucky operators to meet the prices quoted in Indiana, Illinois, West Virginia, Pennsylvania and Ohio fields; or in Tennessee and other competing fields in the South. Any special taxes put on Kentucky coals will so increase production costs that the mine owners of this State will not be able to get sufficient orders to take care of their output. Curtailed business or lessened tonnage means insolvency for the mine owners and idleness for thousands of workers.

WILLIAM J. BRYAN
DIES LAST SUNDAY*Succumbs On Scene of Battle After a Victory

William Jennings Bryan, three times presidential nominee of the Democratic party, and known the world over for his eloquence, died Sunday afternoon at Dayton, Tenn. Death came when the Great Commoner was asleep and was attributed by physicians to heart failure. He had retired to his room shortly after eating a heavy dinner to take a short rest. Mrs. Bryan sent the family chauffeur, James McCartney, to awaken him at 4:30 o'clock and it was learned then that he was dead.

Dr. W. E. Thomason and Dr. A. C. Broyles, who examined the body, expressed the opinion that Mr. Bryan had been dead between 30 and 45 minutes before they arrived.

Funeral arrangements had not been completed but Mrs. Bryan indicated interment would be in Arlington National Cemetery. Mr. Bryan, who was a Colonel of the Third Nebraska Volunteers in the Spanish-American War, on several occasions had expressed a desire to be buried in Arlington.

Planned New Crusade

Mr. Bryan succumbed the eve of another crusade he had planned to carry before the American people—a battle against Modernism. He returned to Dayton Sunday morning after making addresses Saturday at Jasper and Winchester, Tenn., and after completing plans for the early publication of the speech he was to have made in closing the trial of John T. Scopes, who recently was found to be guilty of having violated the Tennessee anti-evolution law.

Despite the strenuous program, Mr. Bryan had been following as a member of the prosecution staff in the Scopes case, and as leader of the Fundamentalists he appeared to be in excellent health.

Shortly before Mr. Bryan entered the courtroom, he told his wife he "never had felt better" in his life and was ready to go before the country to wage his fight in behalf of Fundamentalism.

Servant Sent to Room

At 4:30 o'clock Mrs. Bryan said she felt her husband had slept long enough, so she sent the chauffeur, who was also his personal attendant, to call him.

McCartney shook Mr. Bryan twice before he noticed the Commoner was not breathing. The physicians and A. B. Andrews, a neighbor, then were summoned hurriedly.

Mrs. Bryan accepted the shock bravely and remained calm.

"I am happy that my husband died without suffering and in peace," she said.

"You know he was a Colonel in the Spanish-American War and since it was his wish to rest in Arlington we probably will place him there," she continued. "But no definite decision will be reached until we hear from Mr. Bryan, Jr."

Sue K. Hicks, who was associated with Mr. Bryan in the recent trial, and Mr. Andrews, remarked upon Mrs. Bryan's courage as she took charge of arrangements.

"During all the excitement Mrs. Bryan was the calmest person in the house," Mr. Andrews said. "She took complete charge of affairs and showed more nerve than I have ever seen in a woman—and she is an invalid, too."

George W. Rappleyea, who filed charges against John Thomas Scopes that the anti-evolution law might be tested, was among those who called to express sympathy to Mrs. Bryan. Hundreds of messages and long-distance calls of love and sympathy were received at the home.

As for Dayton, it found it almost impossible to realize that the Commoner was dead. Sunday morning many citizens had seen him at the Southern Methodist Episcopal church and had heard him lead in prayer.

Friends Are Shocked

Mr. Bryan appeared to be in excellent health and his friends expected him to put into his battle against Modernism all the vigor and eloquence that marked all his campaigns since the famous "Cross of Gold" speech.

In his address at Jasper and Winchester Saturday Mr. Bryan spoke with his usual vigor as he was encouraged by the applause of the hundreds who heard him.

The town was shocked by the tragedy, and five minutes after the doctors' examination revealed that Mr. Bryan was dead, the streets near the home were thronged. Mrs. Bryan is said to be entirely composed and is bearing up wonderfully under the blow.

DATE CHANGED

The date for renting the privileges of the Harvest Home grounds has been changed from Saturday, August 15th to Saturday, August 1st. See adv. in classified ad. column.

SHORT GAP IN DIXIE
WILL SOON BE OPEN*Road from Kensington to Walton Open in Twenty Days

Work of paving the stretch of the Dixie Highway between Kensington and Walton, was completed Saturday, and is to be opened for travel in 20 days, Highway officials report. The highway, which formerly was the Lexington pike, now is paved with cement all the way from Covington to Williamstown.

Until the new stretch is opened vehicles will continue to use the detour at Kensington. State highway officials say that numerous stretches of the highway between Williams-town and Georgetown are under construction and are to be completed this year.

W. C. Ryerson, Chairman of the Executive Committee of the Northern Kentucky Good Roads Association, under the auspices of which a celebration is planned for August 20 when the Licking Valley Division of the Dixie Highway-Madison pike is opened for travel, said he received a letter from A. H. Barker, County Clerk of Pendleton county, advising that extensive plans have been made for the entertainment of visitors in Falmouth on the day of the celebration.

Chairman Ryerson said the Executive Committee desires, through the press, to extend an invitation to members of all welfare and civic organizations and to citizens generally in Kenton county. They are requested to join with the delegation which is to depart from Covington on the morning of August 20 to inspect the new highway and participate in the celebration at Falmouth, where an address by Governor W. J. Fields, of Kentucky, is to be one of the features.

Those who desire to make the trip are requested to call the Northern Kentucky Good Roads headquarters, Covington 927. A dinner, card and badge will be forwarded by mail upon receipt of $3 a person.

August 20 has been designated as a holiday in Falmouth in honor of the opening of the new roadway, and an effort is being made to have the officials of Covington, Butler, Cynthia and other towns on the highway to do likewise.

WILLIAM ARNOLD DEAD

William Arnold, aged 63 years, passed away at the home of his daughter, Mrs. L. M. Williams, Sunday July 19th. The remains were forwarded to the home of his daughter, Mrs. Roscoe Bryant, Goodridge Drive, Florence, Ky., Tuesday July 21, and later in the day taken by Undertaker Philip Taliaferro to Short Creek Church near Williams-town, where appropriate services were held in the presence of a large concourse of his old relatives and friends, interment being in the cemetery near by.

Mr. Arnold had been ill for some time and is survived by his widow and six grown children.

ETHEL F. LANDRUM DEAD

Ethel F. Landrum, aged 17 years, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joe Landrum of Elsmere, passed away at St. Elizabeth hospital Monday following an operation for removal of the appendix. She had been confined to her bed for two or three years with rheumatism and had been a very patient sufferer.

Funeral services were held at the late residence on Dell Ave., Wednesday at 10 o'clock and the remains were then taken by Undertaker Philip Taliaferro to Williamstown for interment.

82nd BIRTHDAY

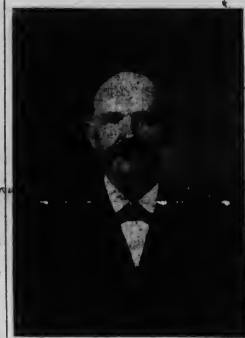

Last Monday, July 27, 1925, was a day that will long be remembered by Mr. Jerry Estes, and the esteem in which he is held by the citizens of the community in which he lives, was testified to when friends and relatives to the number of five hundred gathered at his home in the North Bend neighborhood to witness the passing of his eighty-second mile post through life's journey. At the noon hour the table, which was set on the large porch that surrounds the home was spread with all the good things to eat as all brought well filled baskets, and Uncle Jerry was as quick to respond to the call to eat as any of those present and stayed until the finish. The day was ideal and when the shadows began to lengthen the happy gathering together for their respective homes with a hearty wish that Mr. Estes may pass many more mile stones along life's passway.

If you are not interested in building up your home town, and if you do not care to take advantage of the splendid values offered by the merchants, there is no special reason why you should not send your money away to distant places.

HON. R. M. BARKER OF CARROLLTON ELECTED*To Presidency of Holstein Breeders Club at Louisville Meeting

Louisville, Ky., July 23.—R. M. Barker, Carrollton, Ky., was re-elected President of the Kentucky Holstein Breeders' Club at the 10th annual meeting of the organization at Echo Farms, Long Run, Ky., on Wednesday. The Executive Committee was re-elected as follows: R. M. Barker, F. C. Giltner, D. C. Galt, of Louisville, and Prof. J. J. Hooper of Lexington. It was reported at the meeting that there now are 92 dairymen members of the club whereas a year ago there were five. It is the purpose of the organization to develop the Holstein breed of cattle in this vicinity, and herds from the club will be exhibited by the National Dairy Exposition at Indianapolis, October 10 to 17 and at the Waterloo Fair Association, Excelsior at Waterloo, Iowa, September 24 to October 4.

JAMES W. KENNEDY
DIES IN CYNTHIANA*Formerly Served Boone County in State Legislature

James W. Kennedy, a former well known Boone county citizen, died at the home of his daughter, Mrs. J. W. Poindexter at Cynthia, Ky., on Tuesday July 14th, aged 84 years and seven months, from ailments incident to old age.

James W. Kennedy was born in Gallatin county, Dec. 3, 1840, and was a son of William and Catherine (Campbell) Kennedy, both natives of Boone county, his mother being born near Burlington, April 12th, 1818. His father was killed on the Short Line Railroad near Verona, in 1870.

James W. Kennedy was brought up on the farm and received a common school education. He had all his life done some farming, but since about 1864 he had been engaged in the mercantile and tobacco business, his last place of business being at Corinth, Grant county, where he conducted a large mercantile business.

On March 31, 1863, he married Miss Lizzie Dorman, of Gallatin county. For two years after his marriage he engaged in farming. In 1866 he moved to Normansville, this county, where he operated a flour mill for two years, when he again returned to his first love, farming, which he followed very successfully for a period of six years. After a few years experience in handling tobacco and operating a general store at Normansville, Mr. Kennedy bought an elegant home near Union, where he operated a large warehouse and for many years handled large quantities of tobacco.

Mr. Kennedy was a good student, a close observer, and had a large store of general information. He was a loyal Democrat, and so faithful had been to his party that he was honored with election to the legislature in 1901, and so satisfactorily did he serve his people that in 1903 he was nominated for re-election without opposition, something that seldom occurred in those days in Boone county politics.

James W. Kennedy was a fine gentleman, a Mason and a member of the Baptist church. He is survived by three daughters, as follows: Mrs. J. W. Poindexter of Cynthia; Mrs. O. M. Huey of Louisville and Mrs. S. C. Hicks, of Union, who have the sympathy of a large number of friends throughout the county.

The doctors are asked as to why people get cold feet. One reason why they get them is that they are "going to" some one else to do the work and put up the money for community progress.

NELSON TAX LAW IS CAUSE OF INCREASE*Cities and Towns Bear Burdens of Assessment Increase

Frankfort, Ky., July 24.—The net increase in the final assessment of property in Kentucky for 1925 taxes, under provisions of the Nelson tax law, is $129,015,909.

This increase, as compared with the assessment for 1924, taxes, was shown in records of the State Tax Commission, completed today.

There have been decreases of $12,029,751 in the assessment of agricultural lands and improvements and of $14,396,602 in live stock.

Increases were $4,296,000 in the assessment of tangible personal property; $108,332,221 in intangible personal property; and $54,548,089 in town lots.

The records show the increase in the assessment of town lots was obtained from a few of the larger cities. The increase in the assessment of town lots in the city of Louisville was $39,906,734; Lexington $2,448,535; Paducah $1,846,868; Covington $1,644,377; Ashland $925,909; Owensboro $194,800.

As all the revenue under the Nelson tax law from lands, town lots, and intangible personal property, is paid into the school and road funds, the increase in the assessment of these properties will increase materially the common school fund for 1925, as the fund receives 60 per cent of the revenue.

The state road fund will receive 1 1/2 per cent of this increased revenue in 1925. The general fund will receive the increase from the tangible personal property fund.

GEORGETOWN COLLEGE

Georgetown, Ky., July 26.—On August 14th, the day of the Graduation Exercises of the Third Summer Session of Georgetown College seven students will receive their degrees.

This number is double the number plus one that received their degree last year, which in turn is double the number plus one that received degrees the first session of the summer school. Like the graduates the students have increased in enrollment in the same proportion. This session the enrollment was above the 130 mark. The increased enrollment caused an increase in the number of instructors and the number of courses offered.

The exercises will be held in the College Chapel. The speaker for the occasion has not yet been secured.

TO THE VOTERS OF BOONE COUNTY:

I take this opportunity of addressing the voters of Boone county at the last issue of this paper that will reach the entire citizenship of our county ere the 1925 primary has passed into history.

Some will read this card whom it has not been my pleasure to see, but I trust you will realize that it has neither been neglect nor lack of a desire that has caused me to fail to see you all. I have made the best and most thorough campaign possible under the circumstances, and wish in this way to apologize to those whom it has not been my pleasure to see.

I have met with much better response from the electorate of Boone county than I had expected when I entered the race, and now, as we are about to go to the polls, I do not hesitate to say, in all frankness, that I confidently expect to win.

In asking you to vote for me I am merely asking you for an opportunity to serve, to the best of my ability, my home county.

I come from a large family, the entire membership of which, is, and has always been, Democratic, and I am the first one of the name who has ever asked the Democratic voters of this county for an office.

I desire now to thank those who have encouraged me and helped me, and want to say that I have none but the best feeling for those who are against me.

Respectfully,

ELMER KIRKPATRICK,

Candidate for Jailor.

WANTS TO MARK PATIENTS

A Pennsylvania surgeon asserts that it is his right to tattoo his initials on a patient after a successful operation. Connie Talmadge says "it depends on the e-ography of the imprint." Blanche Sweet, another screen star, thinks the scheme is all right, but Anna Nilsson wants to know why she should be a billboard for a surgeon who does not believe in advertising anyhow. "She qualifies her opinion by suggesting that the surgeon's fee be waived for the privilege. And there you are."

READ THE RECORDERFORTY EIGHT FARMERS
IN OUR LEGISLATURE*Twelve Senators and Thirty-Six Representatives are Farmers

One-third of all the members of the Kentucky State Legislature are farmers, according to the Sears-Roebuck Agricultural Foundation, which has been compiling figures of farmer representation in the State legislature and in Congress.

Of the 38 Senators in the State legislature, 12 are farmers, states the Foundation, and 36 out of the 100 members of the lower house list themselves as agriculturists. A few divide their time between farming and banking, farming and insurance or some profession or occupation in addition to their farm interests.

Iowa with a farm population of 46 per cent has 99 farmers in its legislature membership of 158, the highest proportion of any of the states studied, the Foundation states.

Pennsylvania with its 11 per cent farm population, has only 15 farmers in its legislature out of a total of 258 members. Mrs. Mabel A. Gillespie of Gretna, a member of the Nebraska lower house, is the only farmer's wife on record holding a legislative job.

The ratio of representation of farmers in Congress is lower than the average found in the state legislatures, according to the Foundation. With a national farm population of 30 per cent, the 69th Congress finds only five farmers in the Senate and 21 in the House of Representatives.

THE PERSONAL COLUMN

It is the custom for some superior folks to make fun of newspapers for printing so many personal items and the news of people's movements and doings. And yet such publication is the response to a normal instinct. We know little of our friends socially, you commonly exchange information about your personal acquaintances and one has gone on a travelling trip, and some else has bought a house, and so on. A person who does not talk about such matters is apt to go in a very dreamy way, knowing little of what is happening around him.

The newspaper in its personal column responds to this natural desire of the people to know what their friends and acquaintances are doing. It gives people the real and substantial information that they want to know, and which it is useful for them to know, without descending to those suggestions of gossip which so often disfigure personal conversation.

FARM POPULATION

The United States department of agriculture estimates that the population of the farms has fallen off the past year about 182,000. As the country is supposed to be increasing in population something like 1,500,000 a year, it is significant that the rural population is not holding its own.

Of course farming is now being done more efficiently than formerly, and a smaller number of people can perhaps do the work. The effort that has been made to educate the farm people up to better methods of production is having effect. Also farm machinery has taken the place of hard work to a considerable degree, which tends to release workers, who go into manufacturing industries.

Yet it is unfortunate when rural communities fail to keep pace with the growth of the country, because so frequently they are unable to maintain social institutions. If the people are few and scattered, it is hard for them to keep up their schools and churches and all the forces that create a healthful community influence.

It is doubtful if farm population increases much for the next 10 years. But what is needed is for farming to become so much more prosperous, that the country people can support social institutions without such population increase. If the farmers could use modern methods to the fullest extent, and market their crops as efficiently as manufacturing products are handled, then they would be prosperous enough so that they could support their social institutions adequately.

The government may not need to work for a new flow of people to the farms, but it should try to help the rural people to improve their methods that the country districts will have as good educational and social facilities as those which the inhabitants of cities enjoy.

It is reported that a woman arrived at a New York hotel with six big trunks filled with Parisian gowns and modern dresses. She probably intends to open a wholesale ready-to-wear establishment in this country.

RICHWOOD CITIZEN
DIES AT HIS HOME*Demise Was Shock to Friends and Relatives

The many friends and relatives were shocked and grieved when the announcement was made that Frank Robinson, a prominent citizen and farmer had passed away at his home near Richwood on Tuesday, July 21, 1925. He had been feeling poorly and a short time before his death had laid down on a bed. A physician was summoned but before he arrived he died—about fifteen minutes after being stricken with apoplexy. He was 69 years of age.

In the death of Frank Robinson the county has lost another one of its good citizens, the community a man noted for his many kindnesses. He was regarded highly by people generally. He was faithful to his trust, and a man of the highest integrity. He made friends quickly with his cordial hand-clasp and kindly smile. What one is and not what one has, is the true worth. A host of friends will miss his genial fellowship.

In the passing of Frank Robinson his loving wife has lost a true and faithful husband and his five children have lost the guiding hand and support of a loving father. Our sympathy goes out to them in their dark hour of bereavement, but we know that mere words can only help to ease the great sorrow, and we would point to Him who is the only one to look for real comfort and consolation.

Funeral services were held at the residence Thursday, July 23, at 2 p. m., conducted by Rev. Barker, pastor of Hughes' Chapel and Big Bone M. E. churches, after which the remains were conveyed to the Carpenter cemetery on the Dixie Highway and laid to rest in the presence of a large crowd of sorrowing relatives and friends.

The MYSTERY ROAD

By E. PHILLIPS OPPENHEIM

Copyright by LITTLE, BROWN AND CO.

Each of us traveled or untaveled. And mystery in the horizon. What lies beyond it? Is it a rainbow's end, a pot of gold, or does it contain the adventures? Especially in the house, where the mystery asserts itself. It is a story of a lonely little girl of France, who has been traveling beyond the village, the family farm, the white road, the end of the garden lane, to a dim horizon beyond which the world is unknown.

Oppenheim, who has dealt in original and characteristically clever fiction with all phases of romance, with adventures and adventures, with kings and beggars of the modern world, with the sharpest of crooks and detectives, with the kindly and the malevolent in all classes of society, here places his exotic pyrotechnics in a less dominating place. It is a story of a country girl as heroine. What makes the story more remarkable is that Myrtle is the only character of consequence taken from the soil. The others are from high society or officialdom and let their environment be what it will.

The action shifts to Monte Carlo, to London, to the English country and to the Basque of today. An absorbing romance in which there are three uncommonly good characters and in which, among many other things, there is a diplomacy and intrigue play their parts, but in which the most absorbing part is the interest in the life of the girl, a Russian countess.

Chapter I

Myrtle stood upon the crazy veranda, her eyes shaded by her hand, gazing down the straight, narrow footpath, a wondering line across the vine-plowed field, which led to the village in the hollow below. The path, a white stone set in a cleft of the pine-covered hillside, it seemed to strike against its inborn ugliness and to succeed only because of the beauty of its setting—in the foreground the brown earth, with its neatly trained vines and its quarter of an acre of fragrant violets; the orchard, pink and white with masses of cherry blossom; beyond, a level stretch of freshly turned brown earth, soon to be a delicate carpet of tender green, and, by the time the vines should sprout, a sea of deep gold. It was the typical homestead of the small French peasant proprietor.

Myrtle had dropped to her side. The three figures were plainly visible now. She remained quiescent, watching them with a mute tragedy in her face which, to any ignorant of the inner significance of this approaching procession, must have seemed a little puzzling. For there was nothing tragic about Jean Sargot, a middle-aged, a typical peasant of the district, with coarsened face and weather-beaten skin—or about the companion who hung on his arm—a plump, dark woman, with black hair and eyes, voracious and fluent of gesture, with a high-pitched voice and apparently much to say. The third person, who walked in the rear, seemed even less likely to incite apprehension. He was more corpulent than his neighbor, Jean Sargot, and his whole appearance was one of discomfort. Yet the girl's eyes, as they rested upon him, were filled with terror.

They were near enough now for speech, and her stepfather, waving his hand, called out to her: "It is the Widow Dumay, little one, and our friend and neighbor, Pierre Leschamps, was come to drink a glass of wine with us. Hurry with the table and some chairs, and bring one—two bottles of last year's vintage."

Myrtle had already placed upon the veranda, Pierre Leschamps laying his hat upon a handkerchief in a safe corner. He kept the little café in the village, and the strip of land which went with it he let to others. His pale cheeks and fleshy limbs told their own story. Jean Sargot looked about him with the pride of the proprietor. "Not so bad, this little dwelling," he exclaimed. "Four rooms, all well-furnished, a bed such as one seldom sees, and a wardrobe made by my own grandfather. Jacques Sargot, the carpenter. It pleases thee, Marie?"

The widow looked around her with a little smile. "It might be worse," she conceded. "but these are the children."

"There only," Pierre replied, "and in a year or so they will be in the field. Think what that may mean."

We can sell the timber from the strip behind and plant more vines. Children are not so bad when they are strong. "The little ones are well enough," Madame Dumay admitted, "but the eldest—Myrtle—she has not the air of health."

They all looked up at the girl, who was approaching them at this moment with wine and glasses. She was of medium height and slim. Her complexion was creamily pale, even the skin about her neck and arms had little of the peasant's brown. Her neatly braided hair was of the darkest shade of brown, with here and there some glints of a lighter color. Her eyes, slily fringed, were of a wonderful shade of deep blue, her mouth tremulous and beautiful. There was something a little exotic about her appearance, although no actual indication of ill health. The widow looked at her critically; Pierre, the innkeeper, with unpleasant things in his black, beady eyes.

"Poor! she is well enough, her stepfather declared. "Never a doctor has crossed this threshold since her mother died many years ago."

Myrtle, after she had filled the glasses, would have slipped back into the house, but Jean Sargot grasped her by the arm.

"Tonight, my child," he insisted, "you must leave your books alone. You must drink a glass of wine with us. It is an occasion, this."

Myrtle looked from one to the other of the two visitors. She had for a moment the air of a trapped animal. Madame Dumay made a little grimace, but Pierre only laughed. She was a flower, this Myrtle, not like other girls. Even the young men complained of her aloofness. He knew now to deal with such modesty.

"Behold," he continued, "our two best friends! Here is good Madame Dumay. A nice little income she makes at the shop, and a tidy sum in her stocking."

"Oh, is it?" the widow interrupted. "What has that to do with thee, my friend?"

"And also," Jean Sargot went on, without taking heed of the interruption, "the brave Pierre Leschamps. An old, gray dog, that Leschamps! A man of property, mark you, child. And listen! Why do you think these friends of mine are here?"

"I cannot tell," Myrtle faltered. "Madame Dumay will become my wife. It is what we need here. And Pierre Leschamps—hear this, little one—he seeks a wife. He has chosen you. I have given my consent."

Leschamps had risen to his feet. Myrtle shrank back against the wall. The terror had leaped now into life. "I will not marry Monsieur Leschamps," she declared. "The other—" is your affair. But as for me, I will not marry."

Her Feet Seemed Scarcely to Touch the Grass-Grown Track.

Jean Sargot leaned back in his chair and drank his wine. His two guests followed his example.

"Ho, ho!" he laughed. "Come, that is fine. You were always a shy child, Myrtle. Pierre shall woo you into a different humor."

"Ay, indeed!" the innkeeper assented, leaning across at the girl with covetous eyes. "We shall understand one another presently, little one. You need have no fear. Marriage is a pleasant thing. You will find it so, like all the others."

"It is an institution to be trusted," Jean Sargot declared, sipping the glasses and glancing amorously towards the widow. "Trouble not about Myrtle, my friend Pierre. She is fine. We shall drink this glass of wine to marriage. It will be a festival, that, eh, Marie?"

Myrtle slipped through the open doorway. Her prospective husband half rose. Then he looked back at the vine, dawning into his glass. Myrtle would keep—wine by the side of Jean Sargot, never! He resumed his seat. In a minute or two he would follow her—as soon as the second bottle was empty.

Across the stone-flagged floor, out through the little garden and along the cypress avenue to the road, Myrtle fled. She was like a terrified young fawn in the half-light, her hair flying behind her, her large eyes filled with fear. Her feet seemed scarcely to touch the grass-grown track. She fled as one who leaves behind evil things. Only once she looked over her shoulder. No one was stirring, no one seemed to have thought of pursuit. She reached the gate which led out on to the road and clung to it for a moment, as though for protection. On the other side was freedom. Her eyes filled with passionate desire. If only she knew how to gain it!

They were singing now down at the cottage. She heard Jean Sargot's siren voice in some country song of harvest and vintage and what they called love. As she stood there in the twilight, even the darkness seemed suddenly to leap into life with a very force of revolt. She was weary of her monotonous tasks—the abuse of her stepfather; the care of those motherless children, not of her own stock yet dependent upon her; the gray tedium of a life unheavenly and hopeless. And now this fresh terror! Her fingers tore at the rough splinters of the gate. Her eyes traveled hungrily along that great stretch of road, passing here and there through the forests, rising in the far distance to the top of the brown hillside, and disappearing in mystery. At the other end of the road one might find happiness!

Chapter II

The two young men adopted characteristic attitudes when confronted with the slight misadventure of a burst tire and a delay of half an hour. Christopher Bent deliberately sat on the top of a low, gray stone and gave himself up to the joy of a wonderful view and the pleasure of unusual surroundings. His companion, Gerald Dombey, stood peevishly in the middle of the road, with his hands in his pockets, cursing the flint-strewn road, the rottenness of all motor tires, and the evil chance that led to this mishap in the last lap of their journey.

"Well be on the road again in twenty minutes, your lordship," the chauffeur promised, as he paused for a moment to wipe the perspiration from his forehead.

His master nodded with some signs of returning equanimity. "Don't distress yourself, John," he said. "There's no real hurry so long as we get into Monte Carlo before dark. Come on, Christopher." He added, turning to his companion, "Get off that wall and let us explore."

The two young men strolled off together. Gerald paused to point to the little, discolored house of Jean Sargot.

"Are they real people who live in these quaint cottages?" he speculated. "That place, for instance, looks like a toy farm, with its patch of violets, its tiny vineyard, its belt of plowed land and this little grove of cypresses. It is just as though some child had taken them all from his play box and laid them out there."

Christopher withdrew the pipe from his mouth for a moment. He was looking at the opening in the little grove of cypresses.

"And there," he murmured, "must be the child to whom they all belong. I think you are right, Gerald. There is something unreal about the place."

Gerald, too, was suddenly conscious of the girl who stood clutching the top of the wooden gate, her face turned a little away from them, absorbed in the contemplation of that distant spot where the road vanished in a faint haze of blue mist.

"We will talk to her," he declared. "You shall practice your French upon this little rustic, Chris. She probably won't be able to understand a word you say."

At the sound of their voices, Myrtle turned her head, and at the things which they saw in her face, there was no longer any thought of frivolous conversation. The pair of them, two young men, they stood for a moment indeed, speechless, Christopher spellbound, Gerald, of quicker sensibility, carried for a moment into the world from which she seemed to have fallen. Then his old habits asserted themselves. She was as beautiful as a star, but her feet were on the ground, and she was obviously in distress.

"Are you alive, mademoiselle?" he asked, raising his cap.

"But certainly, monsieur," she answered gravely. "I am alive but very unhappy."

"Can I tell you, perhaps, the way to Cannes?" Christopher inquired.

She pointed to where the ribbon of road in the distance seemed to melt into the bosom of the clouds.

"Cannes is over there, monsieur," she said, "and there is no other road save this one."

"You go there often, perhaps?" Christopher ventured.

"I have never been there, monsieur," she answered, with her eyes fixed upon Gerald. "Night after night, when my work is done, I come here and I watch the road just where it fades away, but I have never traveled along it. I have never been further than the first village, down in the hollow."

Gerald came a step nearer to her. He leaned against the gate post. His tone and manner became unaccountably caressing. It was generally so when he spoke with women.

"You are in trouble, mademoiselle," he said. "Sometimes even a stranger may help."

She looked down the road toward where the automobile was jacked up. "Yes," she admitted, "I am in great trouble. No one but a stranger could help me because I have no friends."

"Be brave, then, and speak on," Gerald enjoined.

There had been no previous time in her life when Myrtle had been required to marshal her thoughts and speak unaccompanied words, yet, at that moment, clearly and unflinchingly she told her story. She pointed to the weather-stained cottage behind. "I live there," she said, "with three half-brothers and—sisters and a stepfather. My mother was the village schoolmistress. She married for the second time a bad man, and she died. I have taken care of those children. I have kept the house clean and tidy. I have done what the cure told me was my duty, and all the time I have hated it."

"Why?" Christopher asked simply.

She looked across as though surprised at his intervention.

"Because the children are coarse and greedy and ill-mannered," she explained. "I wear myself out trying to make them different, but it is useless. It is in their blood, because my stepfather—his word, often he drinks too much brandy, he is quarrelsome, he is never kind. There is not one little joy in life, only when I escape for a little time and come here, to look down the road which leads to liberty and wonder what may lie at the other side of the hills there. You see, I have read books—many books. My mother and father were both well educated. I know and feel that the life I am leading is terrible."

"There is something beyond all this," Gerald said. "There is something of instant trouble in your face. Arise for a moment and be voiceless, a white, dumb thing stricken nerveless with horror. It was that look which had surprised the two men. Her breath, as she spoke, seemed choked with unuttered sobs.

"My stepfather brought home from the village, tonight—the Widow Dumay. He is to marry her—to bring her to the farm. He brought, too, Pierre Leschamps, the keeper of the café. Horrible! horrible!"

"Pierre Leschamps," Gerald murmured softly. "Go on."

The girl opened her lips but the words seemed to stick in her throat.

"They propose, perhaps, to betroth you?" he asked, with quick understanding.

Her assent was mirrored in the agony of her eyes.

"He is fat and old and he drinks," she cried. "I would sooner die than have him come near me!"

"Look upon us as two friends," Gerald begged. "What would you have us do?"

The girl pointed once more to where the road disappeared amongst the hills.

"If you leave me here," she declared, "I shall walk and run and crawl until I pass out of sight there, and perhaps they may borrow the widow's cart and catch me, and then I shall kill myself. Take me with you as far as you are going—somewhere where I can hide."

The car glided slowly up to where they were standing. Gerald did not hesitate for a moment. He stepped into his place at the driving wheel and motioned to the seat by his side.

"Agreed," he said. "We will start you, little one—tell me, how are you called?"

"Myrtle," she murmured.

"We will start you off on the great adventure of the world, Chris. I think that there can be nothing worse in store for you than what you leave behind."

The girl pushed open the gate and sprang into the car like a frightened thing. Gerald turned his head. Around the corner of the farm three unsteady figures showed themselves; three voices—two dumb and one shrill—called for Myrtle. There were threats, gesticulations. The girl covered by Gerald's side.

"Start!" she implored. "Start, please!"

Christopher, however, hesitated. "I think," he said, "we should first hear what these people have to say. They have, after all, some claim upon the girl. It might be possible to aid her without bringing her away from home."

Myrtle clung to Gerald. Her eyes were swimming pools of passionate entreaty.

"Start, monsieur," she pleaded. "There is nothing for me but escape. Why does the other gentleman insist?"

"Get in, there's a good fellow," Gerald begged impatiently. "We don't want to have a row with these yokels."

The chauffeur was already in the dickey behind. Myrtle's eyes implored Christopher to take the place by her side. With his feet still on the road, however, he leaned across her to Gerald.

"Gerald," he said, "this is a more serious affair than you seem to think. Who is going to look after the child when we get to Monte Carlo?"

"You can, if you like," was the careless reply. "I'm not thinking of playing the Lothario, if that is what you mean."

"Word of honor?"

"Word of honor. Don't be an am-old chap. It's up to us to give the girl a chance."

Christopher stripped off his coat and wrapped it around Myrtle. Then he took the place by her side. Gerald slipped in the clutch and they glided off.

The twilight overtook them swiftly. The lights of Monte Carlo, as they commenced the long descent, were like pin pricks of fire thrust through a deep blue carpet. Myrtle, whose eyes had been fixed upon the flying milestones, leaned forward now with a little exclamation of wonder.

"It is fairyland!" she cried.

Gerald looked down at her indulgently. "You live so near and you have never been even as far as this?" he asked.

"It is as I have told you," she answered. "I have never traveled more than a few kilometers from the farm."

Christopher was almost speechless. Gerald, however, nodded sympathetically. Both young men had taken it for granted from the first that their charge understood no English.

"In France they are like that," Gerald remarked. "It is the sons that count. But this child—she is amazing, Christopher? Except for her clothes, there isn't a thing about her that suggests the peasant. She is like a child, Madame—an angel—who has stolen into the clothes of a girl gone for her first communion."

"I should still like to know what you are going to do with her when we arrive?" Christopher asked, bluntly. "Are you going to take her to the villa?"

"Later on, perhaps," was the careless reply. "Certainly not this evening."

"Why not?" Christopher persisted. "Your sister is very kind-hearted. It seems to me, as long as we have the girl on our hands, that she is the proper person to look after her."

Gerald smiled slightly.

"My dear Chris," he said, "you and Mary are pals. I know, but I am not sure that you altogether understand her. She doesn't like surprises. We must pave the way a little before we ask for her help."

Myrtle had been looking from one to the other of her two companions with a sense of growing trouble in her eyes.

"Messieurs," she interrupted, "it was wrong of me not to tell you before. I am not a French girl. I am an English girl. I speak a little English. I understand very well."

"You are a most amazing child!" Gerald exclaimed, looking down at her in genuine astonishment. "You have never been ten kilometers from your home, and you speak a foreign language! That comes of having a schoolmistress for a mother, I suppose. However, have no fear. We shall dispose of you pleasantly."

"Tomorrow," she said timidly, "I can find work."

"Tomorrow be hanged!" Gerald replied. "Look about you, little one. We are entering the town. If your story is true—and we know that it is—be added instantly, 'you see for the first time shops, villas, hotels. The building in front of us is the casino. Now you see the lights that fringe the bay.'"

"It is amazing," Myrtle murmured. They drew up at the side door of the hotel where the two young men were to stay. Gerald descended.

"Take care of the child for a few minutes, Chris," he begged. "I am going to interview one of the housekeepers."

He disappeared into the hotel. Myrtle watched his tall, slim figure until it was lost to sight. Then the feeling seemed to return. She shivered.

"I am a trouble to him," she faltered. "He will hate me for it. I only meant that you should drive me somewhere where I could lose myself. Perhaps I had better go, monsieur. Can I not slip away before he returns?"

"He would be very angry if you did," Christopher assured her. "He has gone to arrange for some one to look after you for the night. Tomorrow I think you will do well if you try to find some work. If you wish it, I will help you."

Her eyes still devoured the door through which Gerald had passed.

"Tell me his name," she begged.

"His name," Christopher replied, "is Gerald Annesley Dombey."

She repeated it after him, a little hesitatingly.

"I shall always think of him as Gerald," she said. "It is a very pretty name. Tell me, why did the chauffeur say 'your lordship'?"

"Because he is the eldest son of an earl and he is entitled to be called Lord Dombey."

"He is noble?"

"I like that to me. May I know your name?"

"My name is Christopher Bent," he replied. "Christopher Bent."

"It is a very nice name," she said. "A trifle of unconsciousness, but of course it is not like that."

He looked longingly back towards the crowded doorway, and the young man who stood by her side was aware of his curious and altogether inexplicable sensation. He suddenly found himself envying Gerald's careless but fascinating manner, his good looks, his light, debonair manner of speech. Even this little wait picked up at the roadside was already under his spell. Then Christopher remembered other things about his friend, and his face grew stern.

Gerald returned presently with a new-dressed young woman. He held out his hands to Myrtle and assisted her to alight.

"It is all arranged, child," he announced. "Annette is a chambermaid here. She will take you to some rooms close at hand, where you will be made comfortable. Tomorrow morning, early, Christopher and I will come and see you."

"Mademoiselle will be entirely well suited," the young woman declared. "It is but a few yards away."

Myrtle, still wrapped in Christopher's coat, looked a little pathetic as she stood upon the pavement by Annette's side.

"I shall not see you again tonight, then. Monsieur Lord Dombey?" she asked shyly.

"Not tonight," he laughed. "And Monsieur Gerald is quite enough for you, petite. Tomorrow we will have a long talk. Have no fear—you shall not return to the farm unless it is your wish."

Myrtle stooped and with a sudden, passionate gesture raised his hand to her lips. Then she dragged Annette off without looking behind. Gerald laughed a little condescendingly.

"Our village maiden is somewhat demonstrative," he remarked lightly. "Come on, Chris. A cocktail while they unpack our clothes. I've telephoned to the villa. We must do a duty dinner there first, but afterward I will show you the land where the pleasure seekers of the world have built their temple."

History and experience are great teachers. A speaker at a London peace meeting declared that the cry "If you would have peace, prepare for war" is one of the hoary lies of the old civilization and has held the world in bondage for centuries. All history proves that preparation for war brings war in its train and all civilized nations now admit that "preparedness" must be in the direction of peace instead of war.

A lovely luncheon was served by the hostess assisted by Mrs. Charles Reagan of Indianapolis—Lawrenceburg Press.

A most pleasant social event of the past week was the bridge party at the home of Mrs. Charles Eberhart, who entertained a congenial group of friends Tuesday afternoon in honor of Mrs. John Berkshire and Mrs. Will Berkshire of Petersburg.

The rooms were very attractive with lovely garden flowers much in evidence. Another out-of-town guest was Mrs. M. T. Gridley of St. Louis, Mo. At the conclusion of bridge an appetizing two course luncheon was served—Lawrenceburg Press.

Mrs. Frank Berkshire was the charming hostess to five tables of bridge on Saturday afternoon in honor of her sister-in-law, Mrs. M. T. Gridley, St. Louis, Mo. Old fashioned garden flowers were placed about in all the rooms and the guests in their filmy frocks of pastel hues, with the challenging shade of pansy being conspicuous, made a lovely Question asked, as to how young women can encourage a reluctant suitor? The prevailing way, of course is to get 'em so tangled up that they can't wriggle, cut, or gnaw their way loose.

Claimed there is too much gossip in country towns, but perhaps some of the things thus discussed need to be talked about.

Business men in towns that compete with ours, will not probably weep very much if we fail to keep the roads leading to our business center in good condition.

HIGH PRODUCTION AND OVER-PRODUCTION

High production by the individual farmer and overproduction of the masses are two different things. One does not lead to the other for the very good reason that only the best farmers, the most painstaking farmers, not only produce more, but more profitably. And, year after year, will produce more than the average. If these exceptional farmers doubled their output there probably would be less added to the total output than is added by a general rain when crops need moisture. And if we did away altogether with the better farmers we probably would cut down the total production less than the amount the Hessian fly or the boll weevil cuts it down each year.

The farmer, then, who lets fear of overproduction stand in the way of improving his methods, of keeping better beef steers, or getting higher acre yields is allowing himself to be scared into inaction and to be held in the mediocre class by a bugaboo.

The increased production gained by higher yields is not all profit, as some would have us believe. Every thinking farmer knows that high yields add to production costs. A sire good enough to produce high class meat animals or high milking strains of dairy cows costs more than a common sire. It costs more to feed good cows than poor ones. It costs more to finish out well bred cattle as they should be finished than to prepare common cattle for the market the way they are prepared. A 20-bushel corn crop requires less effort than a 60-bushel crop. But it is also true that the increased value of the output far exceeds the increased cost if sane methods of production are pursued.

That is true until the point is reached where further increase in yield costs as much as the increase is worth. Then the limit for advancement under that set of conditions has been reached. If those conditions change, as when the price of the product goes up, a new margin of expansion is created and the yield may be further raised profitably.

Take the case of corn, for example, four years ago then corn was bringing 30 cents a bushel the smaller the outlay the better off was the corn grower. Last year with corn above $1 a bushel enough extra effort in selecting and testing seed to insure a good stand and in keeping weed growth in check to produce a maximum yield was amply justified.

We are not, however, concerned in discovering the limit beyond which increased production will be profitable, for that maximum is a good way off with most of us. The thing each of us needs to realize is that good yields, taking the years as they run, are the only yields that pay a profit. Averaging yields, as we have stated many times before, pay no profit. We know of no business in which average yields get the producer ahead in the long run.

Find the most successful farmer in the neighborhood and study his methods. That study will reveal a good farmer, a producer of high yields. Moreover, it will reveal a good all-around farmer, a good crop grower, a good stockman and a good business man, all in one. Some farmers are good crop growers, some are good stockmen. What they make in one line of their business they lose in another. Occasionally a farmer is found who produces high yields in all lines but lets his costs eat up his profits. He is a poor business man just as is the merchant who is a good salesman but a poor manager. It is only the all-around farmer who is successful.

And that leads us to the well-warranted conclusion that is scarcely any other line of business so complex and so difficult to pursue successfully as farming.—H. J. Waters in Kansas City Star.

BOOSTING is more than merely "thinking" or "saying" good things about some thing. Real, honest, goodness BOOSTING means that every citizen of Boone county must carry out the following principles every day he lives:

First. Assume his share of civic responsibilities and contribute his moral and material support to any movement toward good government. An efficient yet human civic administration is the backbone of a prosperous city.

Second. Do his part in getting and keeping good churches and schools, for these institutions are the builders of progress for the coming generation.

Third. Patronize home merchants, banks, industries and professional men, for they are mainly responsible for the comforts, pleasures and opportunities that this community affords to its citizens.

Fourth. Contribute his every effort toward keeping our streets and yards clean and attractive.

Fifth. Be generous in thought, word and deed to his neighbors and fellow citizens. Most of the happiness in life is gotten by doing for others and entering into the spirit of co-operation.

These are the principles that, when every person does his best toward actually carrying them out, will bring us all prosperity and happiness. We prosper only as those about us prosper, so every loyal citizen of Boone county is urged to become an active working partner with us—let's do some REAL boosting by making it better in every way.

CONGRESS AND THE FARMERS.

Political and financial leaders resting easy on the assumption that with the death of LaFollette and Ladd, the two Senate leaders and because the condition of the farmers has improved during the past year, there will no longer be need for remedial legislation, and the next Congress will see a return to the two-party system. It is further asserted that the enormous majority given President Coolidge is an evidence that the American people favor his policies.

They evidently overlook the fact that only half the people took the trouble to vote at the last Presidential election, and no one knows what the ideas and inclinations of the other half may be. It is certain they lacked enthusiasm.

They also overlook the fact that the 40,000,000 agriculturalists are more determined than ever that some of their grievances be remedied. Because the price of wheat advanced a little does not remedy the conditions complained of and it is safe to predict that the farmers will continue to exert a powerful influence in shaping national legislation, or there will be numerous changes in the personnel of that body. Too much confidence is sometimes disastrous—especially in politics.

THE PRICE OF SUCCESS
"I'm afraid!" How often do we say it when we don't really mean it? We spend a great part of our life looking for "Safety" and it is bred into our blood.

Most business men—who are supposed to possess decision and executive ability, dodge, duck, and run. Many of them conceal orders, stop advertising, cut down office force and hide themselves in the jungle darkness.

For nearly 250 years Lloyds Insurance Company has bought risks and made more essential laws than any year out of them. They say that 95 per cent of men's fears are moonshine.

Courage is the most valuable possession of the man of business. The rougher the road the harder he digs in. He faces his fears, meets them half way with fists clenched, teeth locked and courage. The thing he is afraid of is an opponent and he proceeds to eliminate it with persistent effort. It took courage for Henry Ford to his way to the top of industrial life. It took courage for "Fighting Bob" LaFollette to stand to his guns for 40 years and in 25 years put on our statute books more essential laws than any other individual. The world is full of courageous men—men who refuse to acknowledge defeat—and they win out.

No man can escape criticism or risk. No man can be blameless and no one can ever be safe. The price of life is risk.

A PROSPEROUS NATION

An advance review of the Department of Commerce Year Book for 1924 gives an encouraging message of prosperity for this nation. Mr. Hoover reports that labor is now receiving average employment at the highest actual wage in the history of the country.

The average price of all agricultural products now approximates the general level of commodity prices. Summarizing the foreign trade of the United States for the year it appears that an increase of 10 per cent in exports is shown, and a decrease of 5 per cent in imports.

The manufacturing output of the United States has increased fully 60 per cent over that 1914, and shows a substantial gain over the year 1919.

From these official figures there seems to be no doubt that increased prosperity is being enjoyed on every hand—and taxes should be reduced.

THOUGH ABSENT from Washington, President Coolidge is keeping in close touch with governmental affairs through conferences with Cabinet officers and other officials who he summons to Swampscott whenever he wants information as to what is going on in domestic or foreign affairs. Secretary Kellogg was summoned to the summer White House to discuss the foreign debt situation and the trouble in China. Secretary of Labor Davis has been there to report on the labor troubles in the anthracite coal fields, and Secretary of War Weeks, now recuperating from his serious illness, also has been a visitor. The President's summer home at Swampscott is in communication with the White House here by telephone and telegraph, while a special motorcycle mail service carries presidential to and from Washington.

COUNT ALEXANDER SKYTSEKI, Foreign Minister of Poland, has left Washington after a short visit here, during which he conferred with a number of State and War Department diplomats. The Count will visit New York and Middle West before going to Wiliamsstown, Mass., where he will address the International Institute of Politics.

WOMEN ARE BETTER automobile drivers than men, according to tests just completed and made public by the American Automobile Association. The tests were made at Swarthmore College, University of Pennsylvania. They found that women were steadier than men when trouble loomed and that their minds worked quicker in an emergency.

HIS EFFORTS to take prohibition enforcement out of politics have brought the politicians down hard on General Andrews, the Assistant Secretary of the Treasury in charge of drying up the country. Not only does the contemplated reorganization provide for a large reduction in the number of those on the prohibition payroll, but it provides for technical men, many of whom will be of different caliber and type than those who came into the service during the time that Commissioner Roy Haynes directed prohibition enforcement. Some observers have gone so far as to predict that the reorganization would fall through as a result of Andrews' attempt to ignore the politicians plucking his men, but the Secretary denies this and says the plan will go through as scheduled.

INDICATIONS THAT the tax fight in the next congress will not be so bitter as had been expected are seen here in the announcement that Senator Joe Robinson of Arkansas, the Democratic leader whose tax revision views almost like those of President Coolidge and Secretary Mellon. The President wants to reduce taxes on incomes of all sizes, although he is in favor of cutting down rates on very large incomes in the belief that thus will more money be released for use in private business and industry. This was one of the results of last year's tax revision, the Treasury finding that the law brought in a lot more money than had been anticipated simply because there were greater profits which would be taxed.

WASHINGTON OFFICIALS are watching the interest in the argument, legal and otherwise, in Illinois over the efforts of the City of Chicago to get itself separated from the rest of Illinois and established as a separate state with a star of its own in the flag. If Chicago should be successful in this move, it is expected that New York City would follow suit. Chicago's kick is that the city contributes the most money to the support of the state, but is not permitted to exercise legislative control. Large cities in many states have similar complaints, but Chicago is making the most fuss about it.

The new Congress which convenes in December will be drier by fifteen votes in the lower house and by four in the upper house than the last Congress. Every indication points to more stringent liquor enforcement laws.

Professional Baseball Can Rise to Height of a Religious Experience

By HEYWOOD BROWN, in Harper's Magazine.

The bleeding right tackle making a last stand on the goal line is to me a lesser figure than Walter Johnson standing off the attack of the Giants in the final game of the world's series. For, as I look at it, the bleeding tackle is fighting merely for the honor and glory of his college. My mind will not accept him as a satisfactory symbol of any larger issue. But when Johnson pitched I felt that the whole samurai tradition was at stake.

And so Johnson became a demigod, and I am always sad when the gods die. I saw Johnson sicken under torture as the Giants scourged him. I watched him driven to the dugout in defeat.

And then I saw him come back from his cavern revived with all his old magic. This demigod was alive again and before me was played out a solar myth. So it has been with Buddha and Osiris. There is resiliency in the soul of man and he may lie down to bleed awhile and return refreshed. College football is just a game; professional baseball can rise to the height of a religious experience.

It never was the real Johnson but only the fictional one which captured my imagination. He was the prince of pitchers and the strikeout king. From Montana he came to the big leagues to throw a baseball faster than it had ever been thrown before. And as a boy I read of how the hands of his catcher were bruised and maimed by the ordeal of receiving this mighty delivery.

"You Will Be Given Power of Life and Death Over Fellow Countrymen"

By PRESIDENT COOLIDGE, Address at U. S. Naval Academy.

You will be called to places of responsibility and command. You will be given the power of life and death over fellow countrymen. You will represent the power, the glory and the honor of this nation among foreign peoples, with all the prominence that arises from wearing the uniform and carrying the flag. What you are the American sailor will be, and what you represent the American navy will represent in the ports of our country and in those of foreign peoples where little will be known of the nature of authority under liberty, save what is learned from you. You have been chosen for this high calling.

But while you will serve the nation in this special field of endeavor, you will not forget that the real profession of every American is citizenship. Under our institutions each individual is born to sovereignty. Whatever he may adopt as a means of livelihood, his real business is serving his country. He cannot hold himself above his fellow men.

In the place of command is really the place of obedience, and the greatest place of honor is really the place of service. It is your duty in the part you are to take to make the greatest contribution you can to the general citizenship of your country.

Supreme Court's Decisions Mean That Sherman Act Is Still Effective.

By JOHN G. SARGENT, U. S. Attorney General.

The decisions of the Supreme court in the Maple Flooring and Cement association cases make it plain that the mere collection and dissemination by a trade association of statistics relating to prices on past transactions, production, stocks in hand and sales, is not illegal. The court decided these cases against the government on the ground that the records did not disclose evidence of an agreement between the members to make use of the statistics in fixing prices, curtailing production or otherwise restraining trade. The court did not overrule, but expressly distinguished the former decisions in the hardwood lumber and linseed oil cases, so that the Sherman law remains effective as to associations which may use a statistical service as a mere means of facilitating the fixing of prices, etc., by agreement. The Department of Justice will continue to be alert to detect and prosecute associations whose operations go beyond the mere dissemination of knowledge, now sanctioned by the Supreme court, and actually result in combinations, conspiracies and agreements in restraint of trade in violation of the law.

We Are Passing Through a Period Not Unlike the Puritanical Regime

By JOHN J. BLAINE, Governor of Wisconsin.

There is a formidable program on today. It is to enact laws and ever more laws, stricter and sterner, heaping the penalties higher and higher under the delusion that modern crusades can make men good by passing laws and the establishment of moral guardianship over the people.

Conventionally, we think of the Puritans as coming to America to establish the principles of religious freedom. They did—religious freedom for themselves, but prescriptions and inquisitions for others. They demanded full obedience to their decrees and religious freedom ceased to exist. Their policy was suppression and repression. They became the reapers of wrath, and through Massachusetts there began a race of law-breakers, fostered by the laws themselves.

We are passing through a period now not unlike the Puritanical regime of centuries ago. But the multiplicity of laws that do not comport with God's moral law are bound to be violated and eventually repealed, as they ought to be repealed.

"A Blind Man's Ears Are His Eyes as Well, He Is an Expert Listener"

By THOMAS D. SCHALL, U. S. Senator From Minnesota.

A blind man's ears are his eyes as well. Because of the hundreds of little things he hears which the uneducated ear cannot hear—each denoting a characteristic of the person speaking—he actually sees the person.

The blind man is an expert listener. This is a job he is especially fitted for. There are all sorts of things to throw a seeing person off the track. A man may have on a fine suit of clothes and may have a carnation in his buttonhole and may smile confidently and puff out his chest. This may all be camouflage and frequently serves to deceive a seeing person, but not the blind man.

Many a voter has said to me "Schall, I'm for you" when I knew very well by his voice that he wasn't. The blind know their friends by voice, by their step, and by some little peculiarity that to the seeing has gone entirely unnoticed. In a poker game a man can bluff his way through by keeping a straight face, but just let me hear his voice and I'll tell you what kind of a hand he holds.

HARLAN POLICE CHIEF SHOT WHILE ON DUTY

JAMES CLEM, OFFICIAL AT POOR
FORK, DIES OF WOUNDS RE-CEIVED IN ATTEMPT TO MAKE ARREST

Joe Davidson Flees Successfully, Resisting Arrest—Victim Alleged To Be Implicated In Liquor Case.

Harlan, Ky.—James Clem, chief of police at Poor Fork, Ky., was shot and killed by Joe Davidson, of Line Fork, Letcher County, while trying to arrest Davidson for shooting a man named Cornett. Davidson fled to the hills immediately after the shooting and has not been apprehended.

Recently the Poor Fork Council sought to remove Clem as chief of police, a position he had held for three years, but Clem declined to recognize his successor. A delegation of citizens was to come here to settle the question of his removal. The meeting was not held, however, due to the shooting.

Revenue officers, in a raid recently, found Clem and a number of other men near a five-gallon keg of liquor and warrants were out for the arrest of the former chief of police.

The recent shooting makes the second man Davidson has killed. He served a year in the penitentiary for the murder of a man named Shepherd whom he stabbed to death several years ago. One of his sons was killed in a gun fight at a church near Harlan and Letcher County lines a few months ago and another of his sons killed two Halcumb men in the same fight.

Clem is survived by his wife and several children.

CAUGHT IN EDDY; DROWNS

While Brother, Man and Woman Are Rescued.

Louisville—Guy Thurman, 17, shipping clerk for the Belknap Hardware Manufacturing Company, was drowned and his brother, Paul, 24, narrowly escaped a similar fate in the Ohio River when they were caught in an eddy while swimming just above the K. & I. bridge off the head of Sand Island.

A man and woman, whose names were not learned, and who are believed to have become excited over the crisis of the drowning boy, also fell from the water at the same time.

The two Thurman boys were swimming about 400 yards from shore in water estimated at twelve feet deep, when Guy Thurman became exhausted and called to his brother for help, according to witnesses. Paul, 24, then went to his younger brother's aid, but soon was exhausted himself and was on the verge of being drowned when he was rescued by Peter J. O'Donnell and Howard Hall, who were near the spot in a skiff.

Slayer Moved To Madison Jail
Richmond, Ky.—Wolford Barker, 33 years old, of Jinks, in Estill County, was placed in the Madison County Jail for safe-keeping after being brought here from Irvine, where he was held to the grand jury without bond, for the murder of his brother, James Barker, whom he is alleged to have shot and killed. The Sheriff of Estill County stated that the affair in which defendant had given bond on a pistol charge which had been signed by his brother. So as not to lose the money, James had Wolford arrested, whereupon the latter is alleged to have yielded him and shot him to death. Barker stated in the Madison Jail that he was forced to shoot his brother, who had been telling lies to his wife about him.

Hancock Held In Moorman Death
Greenville, Ky.—Alex. Hancock, a miner of Moorman, near here, was arrested and placed in jail here on a charge of being an accessory to the murder of Alexander Gary and Edward Gary, father and son, at Moorman. John Daugherty, who is charged with having killed the two men during a drunken orgy, is being sought. He is alleged to have shot both of them with a shotgun, shooting the father first and then killing his son.

Hog Bite Fatal After Ten Days
West Point, Ky.—Blood poisoning that developed as the result of his being bitten ten days ago by a hog caused the death of James Ferree, 20 years old, at his farm home two miles west of this city. Ferree was helping his older brother Joseph load pigs for market when he slipped and fell upon a baby pig. The pig squealed and the mother sow attacked Ferree, biting his left leg severely.

Puduch Plant Hit By $4,000 Fire
Puduch, Ky.—Damage estimated at $4,000 was caused by fire which gutted the plant of the Puduch Packing Company. The two-story building was badly damaged and the entire stock of meats, valued at about $3,000, was ruined. Damage to the building alone probably will reach $3,000, according to the estimate of John M. Slaughter. A large quantity of meats suspended on spits from the ceiling of the ground floor was ruined by smoke fire and water.

KENTUCKY BRIEFS

Mayfield—In a decision handed down in Graves County, Judge Hester held valid indictments against more than 500 dog owners who are alleged to be negligent in paying their 1925 license.

Pineville—Mrs. Pollie Purnell was in jail here following her capture in an auto in the Cumberland Mountains after it is claimed she had shot and probably fatally injured Wild Ryder of Middleboro.

Flemingsburg—Lem Pearce, held on a charge of housebreaking, broke out of jail and escaped during the night. He dug through the wall near the rear window, using a stove hook and a window weight.

Elkhorn City—Depression in coal fields here is given as the reason for the First State Bank to close its doors and turn its affairs over to the state banking commissioner. It is said depositors will be paid in full.

Paris—Bourbon News here was sold by Mrs. Lula Champ to Carl L. Johnson, former editor of the Madison County Democrat, of London, O., for a reported price of $15,000. The Bourbon News was organized in 1851.

Estill County—V. C. Pickin to construct two bridges in this county. One is to be constructed across Millers Creek and the other across Calloway Crossing, from here to Winchester.

Middleboro—A reward of $150, to be charged by the state, was offered by Bell County Circuit Court for the arrest and delivery of either John Mullins or Duke Hicks, both under indictment in connection with the murder of Ora Gibson, deputy constable, here last month.

Bowling Green, Ky.—J. M. Feden, a farmer of Barren County, was shot and instantly killed when he was thrown from a buggy when his horse was frightened on the Burkesville road, three miles from Glasgow, according to a message received by his niece, Mrs. Will Depp, of Smith Grove, this county.

Frankfort, Ky.—Contemplated action of G. C. Center, judge of Wolfe County, in dividing Hally Creek Precinct No. 14 into two precincts, was upheld by the Court of Appeals. The court dissolved an injunction which had restrained the Judge and Sheriff from putting into execution the order dividing the precinct.

Covington, Ky.—Ralph Lohre was shot and instantly killed when he was thrown from a buggy when his horse was frightened on the Burkesville road, three miles from Glasgow, according to a message received by his niece, Mrs. Will Depp, of Smith Grove, this county.

Owingsville, Ky.—Elmer Garland, 15, killed William Sparkman, 14, when a shotgun which they were handling was discharged. The tragedy occurred at the home of Garland who claimed the shooting was accidental. This is disputed by witnesses. Sheriff S. M. Estell went to the scene of the trouble and arrested Garland, brought him to Owingsville and placed him in the county jail to await his examining trial. This boy is the youngest prisoner ever lodged in the Bath County jail.

Princeton—A loss of approximately $5,000 was sustained here when a fire consumed the storage room of the Princeton Ice and Storage Co. A lot of machines and storage supplies were burned, together with two trucks and the auto of James Orange.

Beattyville—Ben S. Kincaid, Lee County sheriff, was shot in the leg by the accidental discharge of a pistol in the hands of one of his deputies while on a moonshine raid. Dan Eiley, alleged moonshiner, scuffed with the deputy and the pistol was discharged.

SEEING THE COUNTRY

An intense desire frequently comes over young people to "see the country." Students who are having a vacation frequently make plans to go a long distance from home to take some job, in the hopes of seeing a different section. They figure out ingeniously how they can pay all expenses on such a trip, but before they get through they will probably wish to wire Dad to cough up some money.

Some of the young crowd start on long hiking or "bumming" expeditions, begging rides from motorists, so as to see new states and sections. This wish to see all parts of our wonderful country is a normal one. But it is more important to get a start on some good job leading to promotion, so that in due time one will have money with which he can afford to take trips. As a usual thing, people have to make good right around home before they can obtain the means for travel.

INEXPENSIVE CAMPS

Many inexpensive little camp colonies are developing in pleasant outlying spots within reach of cities and towns. Some folks might consider them congested, with narrow quarters in tents and cheaply constructed shacks. But there is room for the children to play, which counts a lot to a family from a crowded town district. Commonly there is water near by, where every one can go in bathing and washing laundry work is done.

Many little garden plots furnish fresh vegetables, which go a long way to fill up active kids. Radios and phonographs are heard, and an air of jollity and neighborly friendliness pervades the scene. Many of them have their flippers with which they survey the countryside. They return to city quarters for the winter brown as Indians, and looking forward to the next season out doors.

The Federal Trade Commission will ask Congress to take action on the anthracite coal question by restoring competition. Seventy per cent of the coal is now produced by eight large companies owned by or affiliated with railroads. High prices are attributed to wholesalers and speculators before reaching the retailers. The Commission is handicapped in suggesting a real remedy because it involves government, or state operation and that is looked upon as "radical." Meanwhile coal users wait the mercy of the market and a way to defeat laws and pile up enormous profits.

USE OF TELEPHONES

Twenty-five years ago there was one telephone in this country for every 57 persons, but now there is one for every seven.

When a business man can do in 10 minutes over the telephone, the work he might have had to travel hundreds of miles to accomplish by the old ways, there is a saving of national energy.

This marvelous system binds the whole nation together like the nerves in the human frame. As the action of our hands and feet follows the impulse that travels from the brain over the nerves, so some director of energy thinks in his office, and work is directed by telephone over hundreds and thousands of miles.

When the lines are clogged by long conversations about nothing, or when people mumble their words in an indistinct way, the operation of this delicate mechanism is interfered with, much as careless handling of our nervous system will lower its efficiency.

THE FLOWER DECORATED HOME

The old time country town used to be noted for its many flowers. In those simpler days, people put in more time cultivating beauty about their places. There is a tendency now when there are so many pleasant things to do, for people to neglect the art of flower cultivation and to allow their homes to become commonplace.

The old time country home surrounded by many of the favorite old shrubs and perennial flowers, was a center of charm and sweetness. The young people who left it often thought with longing hearts of its loveliness. We need more of those homes today, and time put into tending them pays rich rewards of satisfaction.

During July and August the National Farm Radio Council will conduct a survey of farm homes to determine the type of radio programs desired by farm listeners. Questionnaires will be placed in the hands of 850,000 farmers; as far as possible those who own radios and those who have signed their intention of owning a radio. A group of thirty farm magazines will co-operate in this survey.

Claimed the women have shortened everything including skirts, hats, sleeves, and even their lives. All of them have shortened their talk, however.

AFFECTION FOR THE OLD HOME

Many successful men and women have gone out from the Burlington and the surrounding neighborhoods to take positions and carry on business in different places. Many of them have been very useful in the cities in which they have gone. It is a pleasure when they come back to make visits. Usually a good number of them do come back each summer. If you could get at the inmost thought of these folks, many of them would say they never doubt in any place where they found warmer friends, better neighbors, or more chances for enjoyment than they did right around here. Very likely some wish in their inmost hearts that they had never left us. We all reciprocate that feeling.

As a result of British government control the price of raw rubber has almost doubled within a month. While it is intended to make American consumers pay the British war debt, it is also hurting the British manufacturers to such an extent that they are making a vigorous protest.

TROUBLE AHEAD

As a result of a report made by the National Safety Council that only one-twelfth of the year's traffic accidents were due to women automobile drivers, thousands of married men will find new strength and inspiration with which to continue their seige against the Man Behind the Wheel. Millions of others will develop aspirations for the gasoline throne and we are probably due for an era of female drivers with mere man exercising his prerogatives from the dim recesses of the tonneau where he has been stationed as dry nurse to the children. Woe! Woe! to us!

The Hero of the War

Ever since the War was over Nations have been arguing over "Who won it." And if the discussion is not stopped we may have to have another War just to decide who won the last one. If we ever do go into another War, have it understood there is to be a Referee, and at the finish he is to announce "Who Won and how much." In the last War we paid Transportation both ways and rental on the grounds, and now all England and France say, "We didn't get there soon enough." Germany don't seem to ever have uttered any complaint on the lateness of our arrival, so that just shows you, you can please everybody, even for Humanity's sake. I must bring the thing "Bull" Durham in this even if I have to drag it in by the horns. It just struck me, and after careful examination of complaints and statistics, I find that "Bull" Durham was the only thing connected with America during the War that France and England haven't been able to criticize. It must be good.

GO THOU AND DO LIKEWISE

Once a farmer had 1800 bushels of wheat, which he sold, not to one grain merchant but to 1800 different dealers, a bushel to each. A few of them paid cash, but far the greater number said they would pay later. A few months passed and the man's bank account ran low. "How is this?" he said. "My 1800 bushels of grain should have kept me until another crop is raised, but I have parted with the grain and instead I have a vast number of accounts so small and scattered that I cannot get around and collect fast enough."

So he posted a public notice and asked all who owed him to come and pay quickly. But few came. The rest said: "Mine is only a small matter, and I will pay you some other day." Though each account was very small when all were put together it meant a goodly sum to one man, and enough to enable him to pay his own bills and meet his needs. Things went on thus. The man got to feeling so badly that he fell out of bed and awoke. Running to his granary he found the 1800 bushels of grain still there.

And the moral is this: The next day he went to the publisher of his home town paper and said: "Here, sir, is your paper, and when next year's subscription is due you can count on me to pay you promptly. I stood in the position of an editor last night, and I know how it feels to have his honestly-earned money scattered all over the country in small amounts."—Ex.

MILITARY CITIZENS BREAK CAMP AT CAMP KNOX, KY.

Camp Knox, Ky., July 30.—Taps were sounded for the 1925 Citizens' Military Training Camp shortly after 8 o'clock this morning when 3,000 citizens soldiers had boarded special trains for their homes in the states of Ohio, Indiana, Kentucky and West Virginia after a thirty day period of camp life.

Many a young candidate who, at their first taste of the simple and uncompromising life of a soldier, evinced a profound dislike for the machine like methods of the Army's "top kicks" this morning expressed reluctance to leave their friends and counselors, the old first sergeants.

With reveille at 3:25 this morning, the boys had their last meal in camp, at 6 o'clock. After being given a box lunch, of fruit and sandwiches to take along on their homeward journey, candidates were grouped within organizations in accordance with train numbers and marched, in military formation, to the railroad station, a few minutes before train time. Work of getting the boys into five special trains was supervised by company officers and battalion commanders.

PETERSBURG TAKES TWO GAMES FROM FLORENCE

The last game of a three-game series between Petersburg and Florence was played last Sunday at Florence. Petersburg won by a score of 8-3. Brady was in the box for Petersburg and at no time of the game was he in danger.

PARTY FROM BURLINGTON SPENT SUNDAY AT THE ZOO

A party from Burlington visited the Zoo at Cincinnati last Sunday and spent the day mingling with their jungle kinsfolk (according to Scopes, Darrow, et al.). The members of the party were Mr. and Mrs. D. R. Blythe and family, Mr. and Mrs. Julius Smith, Mr. and Mrs. H. Jones, Mr. and Mrs. L. T. Utz, Mr. and Mrs. R. E. Berkshire and family, Mr. and Mrs. K. W. Ryle, Mr. and Mrs. L. R. McNeely, Mrs. J. M. Botta, H. W. Riley of Union, and Mrs. Collins, of Waynesboro, Va. They spent an enjoyable day, but all still claim that they failed to find or see any family resemblances in the cages.

ENGLAND RAISES THE PRICE OF RUBBER TO TIRE USERS

Anything that affects the price of automobile tires gets close to the average man's pocketbook.

Tires are a commodity that many people have to buy and when the price goes up rapidly, as it has recently, the gentleman who is known as the ultimate consumer is going to raise a terrific fuss.

The crux of the situation is the control of the rubber supply. England is reputed to control 90 per cent of the world's rubber and the United States uses 75 per cent of all the rubber sold.

The charge has been made that England is boosting the price of crude rubber in order to make the United States pay the British war debt.

Regardless of whether the accusation has any foundation in fact, there is no denial that it is not entirely probable, and that the United States may be at the mercy of the English rubber producers.

We must have automobile tires and we want to buy them as cheaply as they can be made. The only hope for automobile owners lies in the experiments with rubber plantations in Florida.

COMMITTEE ISSUES STATEMENT TO THEIR PATRONS

"Drinking of intoxicating drinks, drunkenness or profane language is positively prohibited. Anyone caught drinking or intoxicated will be ejected from the grounds."

DEMOCRATIC PRIMARY FURNISHES POLITICAL SURPRISES

The regular Democratic primary which according to law and custom is held every four years, passed into history Saturday evening when the last precinct (Carlton) reported about 7:30 o'clock.

The feature event on the card proved to be the County Clerk's race which was uncertain from the time the first precinct reported until the last. The leadership passed from McMullen to Rogers, who retained the lead until Carlton precinct reported, which turned the tide in favor of McMullen by 28 votes. A very slender majority. Sullivan, another candidate on the ticket, received a splendid vote in Burlington, his home precinct, but was not equal to the pace in the other precincts. He received slightly more votes than both his opponents in this precinct.

The same thing was true in Walton, where Miss Rogers polled more than both her opponents, while McMullen's banner precinct was Carlton, where he polled almost double the vote of the other two.

Fowler, the winning candidate for jailer, led the ticket, polling 28 more votes than Utz for sheriff. However, Fowler had but one opponent, while Utz had two.

In the race for County Attorney Riley was renominated over Tolin by a substantial majority. The result of this race surprised a great many people, as a number of folks thought that Tolin would be returned an easy winner. However the uncertainty of elections is what makes them interesting to the general public.

The result in the Senatorial race was also more or less of a surprise to a great many Boone county people, it being pretty generally predicted that Lee would win easily. However L. C. Littrell was leading by a majority of more than a thousand votes in the district at the end of the unofficial count. Mr. Littrell has previously served in the Senate. He is editor and publisher of the Owen County Democrat.

Utz was an easy victor for sheriff with a majority of approximately 1100.

SCHOOL NOTES.

The Common School Commencement will be held August 12th at 2 p. m., in the Baptist church in Burlington. J. C. GORDON.

LETTER FROM CALIFORNIA

Greetings from California to my Hebron school friends. I am out here enjoying sunny California and I wish all my friends could be with me and see this wonderful country. I will be back to my little lunch room when school opens with a good supply of school accessories and I will try my best to serve the children in the way they want to be served. With love to all my big and little friends.

NORMA MCGLASSON

Attorney Harper Rucker, of Cincinnati, was in Burlington on legal business Wednesday.

Eugene Gordon and Donald Mathews, of Petersburg, were business visitors to Burlington Wednesday.

Shelby Cowan of Covington, spent Sunday with relatives here.

STATEMENTS OF CANDIDATES TO BOONE COUNTY VOTERS

TO BOONE COUNTY VOTERS

I desire to thank my many friends for the loyal and wholehearted support given me in my campaign and for the splendid victory they achieved for me. I have only the kindest feelings for those who opposed me and will strive to serve all the people with equal consideration.

B. H. RILEY.

TO BOONE COUNTY VOTERS

Realizing the utter impossibility of my being able to see each voter personally, I am of publicly extending my thanks to each one who supported me in the campaign just closed. Especially do I wish to thank my friends for my splendid majority, which is one of the largest received by any candidate for the office of Sheriff in recent years. I will do my best to fill the office to the satisfaction of everyone.

L. T. UTZ

TO BOONE COUNTY VOTERS

I take this means of thanking my friends for their loyal support and encouragement given me in my recent campaign for the nomination for Sheriff of Boone county.

While I was not nominated, I feel that I had many friends who were vigilant to my opponents and voted for them, and I have no feeling against them for so doing, as that is the right and privilege of everyone to cast their vote for their favorite candidate.

And to my successful opponent, I offer my congratulations and support in the coming Regular Election.

HAROLD CONNER.

TO BOONE COUNTY VOTERS

I desire to publicly express my appreciation for the loyal support given me by the people of Boone county in nominating me for the office of County Court Clerk last Saturday.

I shall always remember the many friends who supported me and to those who were not in position to vote for me I have but the kindest feeling and their matters of business at my office will be cheerfully looked after just the same as those who voted for me.

To my opponents I bear no ill feeling, as they conducted their race on a high plane and treated me at all times during the campaign as a perfect lady and gentleman.

My desire is but to serve the people of Boone county to the best of my ability, and when I take office I ask that every one feel free to use me in every way in which I can serve.

A. G. MCMULLEN

TO BOONE COUNTY VOTERS

I want to thank the people of Boone county for the many courtesies they extended me in the campaign for County Court Clerk which ended with the Primary Election August 1st.

I want to thank those who saw fit to support me and I hope that never in the future by any act of mine will I ever cause you to regret that fact. I have naught but the kindest feeling toward those who saw fit to cast their vote for my opponents and I assure you there is no chagrin in my bosom. I went down to defeat. A fate that suffrage brings to no few.

Yet the sting of defeat is alleviated when my opponents are taken into consideration. One of them, the present incumbent already has the honor of being the first woman ever elected to an office in Boone county and is spoken of as the best County Clerk in Kentucky. The other, a gentleman of the highest character, a battle scarred veteran of a campaign four years ago, and who emerged as the victor in this fight.

I am also thankful and proud of the fact that when the clouds of defeat lowered over me I could think of the loyal manner in which my home people supported me. So far as I know we fought a clean fight and the verdict was rendered by the voters of this county whose citizenship ranks second to none under God's sun.

In conclusion I have but this to say. We contested the field closely; but when the battle was over, when the bugle sounded truce as the night clouds lowered, we met in peace and the victors are we. We fought like men, we have peace like brethren.

NEWTON SULLIVAN, JR.

TO BOONE COUNTY VOTERS

I wish to extend my sincere thanks to all who so loyally supported me in the campaign recently closed. A number of the supporters of the defeated candidates are naming over the numerous causes of the respective defeats, but there is but one cause of my defeat and that was Mr. Fowler.

ELMER KIRKPATRICK

TO BOONE COUNTY VOTERS

I take this method of thanking the voters of Burlington and Bullittsville Magistrate Districts—especially those who supported me, and I want to say that I have none but the kindest feeling for those who saw fit to oppose me, and I have no ill feeling toward anyone.

Yours Respectfully,
HUBERT W. ROUSE.

TO BOONE COUNTY VOTERS

I wish to thank all those who so loyally supported me in my campaign just closed for Magistrate. I entertain no ill feeling toward any of my opponents or those who supported them.

F. L. MCGLASSON

TO THE VOTERS OF FLORENCE AND CONSTANCE PRECINCTS

I wish to thank each and every one who kindly supported me in the last election.

Yours Truly,
GEO. B. MILLER

TO BOONE COUNTY VOTERS

Reports are in circulation that I have selected my deputies but these reports are erroneous, as those who will assist me in my office have not been employed.

A. G. MCMULLEN

CARD OF THANKS

TO THE VOTERS:

I wish to express my appreciation and sincere thanks for the work of those who so nobly helped me in race to secure the nomination for State Senator in this 26th District. It is by the help of such loyal friends that victories are won. For those who were so situated that they could not vote for me, I have no ill will or unkind words and only hope to serve all, especially the school children and the tax payers in the state so that they too, may become my personal friends. Hoping for the success of Kentucky and Kentucky, I am, Your Humble Servant,

L. C. LITTELL

SHERIFF CONGRATULATES VOTERS FOR NOMINATING MR. L. T. UTZ FOR SHERIFF

I want to congratulate the people of Boone county for nominating L. T. Utz to the office of Sheriff. A lot of people in Boone county asked me to put on for my deputies the boys who fought overseas for our country and I did it on the strength of their request.

L. T. Utz has worked for me close to four years and I think he is competent of filling the office, and any and all parts of it, and I feel that the people felt that way about it by the large majority of votes they gave him in the primary election Saturday.

There was quite a lot of talk handed out in this campaign that I said I was going to "put Utz over" for Sheriff and that I could handle the Burlington precinct any way I wanted to.

I know no one believed that I made any such remark and it did not have the desired effect they wanted it to have.

You don't have to put them over in Boone county and say you are "boss" or "Go. B. Cox" if you put up the right material.

The people of Boone county will "put them over" and there isn't any one man who can tell them what to do in a Boone county election.

B. B. HUME

WILLIAM JENNINGS BRYAN
The unexpected death of William Jennings Bryan, at Dayton, Tenn., on Sunday afternoon, caused a disturbance in the mind and heart of the business world while men and women, of all degrees and types, paused to consider the passing of one who may be acclaimed as the most outstanding American of this generation.
Born in Salem, Ill., in 1860, he graduated at Jacksonville, Ill., college in 1881, and settled at Lincoln, Neb., as a young lawyer. In 1892 he became editor of the Omaha World-Herald. In 1896 he was elected to Congress, and re-elected in 1899. During his first term on March 16, 1892, he made his great tariff speech and immediately became a national figure. In 1896 he was nominated for the presidency by the Democrats and Peoples parties as the result of a remarkable speech known as the "Crown of Gold" but was defeated after one of the most spectacular political contests in American history. He was again nominated in 1900, and a third time in 1908, each time being unsuccessful. In 1901 he began the publication of the Commoner, a Democratic paper.

He was appointed Secretary of State by President Wilson, whose nomination and election was largely due to Mr. Bryan's efforts. His opposition to intrigues that were leading us into the World War resulted in a break with the President and his resignation from the Cabinet.

Since then, and down to his last day on earth, he has been a consistent "defender of the faith," a preacher, editor, lecturer, statesman, politician, who always and everywhere commanded greatest attention and deepest respect.

Time has demonstrated that he has generally been right on public questions even to the silver question—the foundation and keystone of his strength with the people was quarried from their faith; in his honesty, and he never failed them.

He was a life of intense activity, but so clean and pure and upright that the world cries for more of his type.

INCITEMENTS TO AMBITION
A country town resident was once asked why young people left his town and went to the cities. He gave as one of the reasons therefore, that school teachers were apt to incite the ambition of their pupils, by encouraging them to think they could get big positions, which would lead them to go away from home.

It is a fine thing for teachers to encourage their pupils to have ambition. But while they are doing that, they should not encourage them to have extravagant dreams. It would be better to dwell considerably on ambitions that can be realized in their home town environment. It is rather sorrowful when a kid who was really cut out to be a successful farmer or storekeeper, gets it in his head that he might be a millionaire bank president in some big city.

TOO MUCH THRIFT
Is it possible to have too much thrift in the land? There is a school of thinking in the country just now which believes that it is and that it has hurt business.
For some time there have been "whisperings" emanating from Washington that the federal government is overdoing the thrift business and that it is beginning to have a bad effect.
Thrift that makes people miserly ceases to be thrift and is of course not to be desired. No one would recommend stinginess as a national ideal, but avoidance of wasteful and unnecessary spending is commendable.
The government's economy policy need not stop buying, but merely set an example for thriftiness that may well be emulated by individuals. Certainly the tax reductions that have resulted in a saving of several hundred million dollars a year can not be harmful.
It merely leaves in the hands of the people the money they earned, instead of paying it out for useless employees. It gives the people the right to spend the money as they choose.

GIVE THEM A GOOD TIME
One of the best ways to promote development in small towns is to be very warm and cordial in entertaining visitors. If they come to a place for a little stay, and no one takes any interest in them, they go away saying that town is a cold and sleepy place and they feel no desire ever to come there again.
But if they are given a warm welcome, if people go out of their way to make things pleasant for them, they go away with a feeling that it is a mighty fine town of real whole souled people. They think that town would be a good place for a home. Some of them who form that impression may move there some day and establish themselves in business. These little impressions which we spread abroad are very magnetic and they help a place to grow.

CHURCH NEWS
Rev. John B. Smith, of the Methodist World Service Commission, defends the press against the charges of decadence, and he thinks that never before was so much church and religious news printed. He feels that church news can be made interesting, and that if so the newspapers were glad to print it.
It would be a fine thing if every minister would do newspaper work for about a year as a preparation for his calling. Then he would get the news point of view, and would be able to so present the activities of his parish that they would make interesting reading. It does not make a very interesting story just to announce the dates and hours when meetings are held, but every effort in church work can be made into a news story by featuring results achieved and difficulties overcome.

KEEPING UP A HOUSE
It is customary for housewives to groan about the cost of repairing a house, and many are tempted to let the same go, and not attend to defects.
People who own property must expect to spend a considerable sum in keeping it up. Houses wear out like clothes. If they are promptly attended to so that the decay does not touch the main structure, the annual bill will not be too big. If you rent a house instead of owning it, you have to pay that repair charge just the same as a part of your monthly payment.

But if repairs are allowed to go, the deterioration becomes more and more serious. After some years it is necessary to take a large sum to make that house salable, or even so that a family can occupy it with comfort. But the family that own their own home can usually feel that the cost of repairs to them is less, than if they were renting the house and paying for them indirectly.

RUNNING AROUND CORNERS
One of the most important causes of automobile accidents is the speed with which many drivers will turn around corners. This is particularly perilous to pedestrians, who have looked to their right and to the left, but the perhaps failed to look corners. If a car is turning around from the cross street.
Any operator should use special care in making such turns, as he does not know what conditions he will find on the street into which he is turning. Also this habit of swift turning of corners is destructive to street surfaces, and must riden out with faster and straight running.

It would do much to the comfort of the people of Burlington if every one of our automobile drivers would display the caution and courtesy that are called for in such situations.

LEARNING FROM JOURNEY
Some people will go on a vacation journey, and return home no wiser than when they left. They were probably most interested in the kind of food they got at hotels, and in attending shows and sports along the way. They did to a large extent the same things they did at home, and came back without much new intelligence.

A different type of folks will go away with keen interest in the country they are passing through. Usually they see things more or less different from what they are at home, and they feel interested to make inquiries about these conditions.
They talk with the people whom they meet on trains and at resorts. They obtain ideas of how things are done in different sections. They return chock full of new ideas, and if a Men's Club or Ladies Aid Society in Kent's club or interesting lecture with which to start their fall season, they could give it.

In a survey covering 80 cities in the United States, the Prudential Life Insurance Company estimates between 12,000 and 15,000 suicides throughout the country in 1924. Reports indicate that more men than women resort to self destruction, the average being about 15.3 for every 100,000 of population. Petersburg, Va., is the only large city with a clean record.

Time is everlasting. But you and I have only today. We may have tomorrow, if God is good. Today is the stuff life is made of.
Hot weather has one compensation—you know there'll be no snow to shovel in the morning.

So far no one has offered to go to war merely for fear that some country is going to claim ownership of the North pole.

WASHINGTON HAS BEEN MADE for the battleground of the forces of religion and science, fresh from their first important engagement of this century in Tennessee. Hardly had the Tennessee case reached its conclusion before a clerk in the Treasury Department here invoked a part of the last District of Columbia Appropriation Act, passed by Congress in 1924, to stop the teaching of natural science in the public schools of Washington. The injunction proceedings thus instituted are brought under a proviso that none of the money spent for salaries can go to teachers who teach paganistic politics or disrespect the Holy Bible. The man who started the suit admits he is an atheist that he is opposed to all religion, and that he wants to make a real test of the power of religious bodies to set up the Bible as a standard in school curricula. The Washington case may end quickly if progress cannot be made in the District courts, but failure there is expected to result in other attempts to get the question squarely before the U. S. Supreme Court.

AT THE SAME TIME another battle along the same line is in progress as Congressman Uphaw of Georgia, an itinerant preacher and other religious fundamentalists are planning to try to get the Tennessee anti-evolution law enacted as a federal statute. There seems no way at the present to avoid a conflict over the war of religion and science in the next Congress, regardless of the efforts that will be made by party leaders to prevent it. On questions of that kind party lines will be smashed completely and the debates which are started probably will crowd all other legislative business aside.

FINISHING THE WHITE HOUSE is not proceeding as rapidly as had been hoped, with the result that the Coolidges may not be able to return to Washington early in September, as they had planned. Those in charge of the work now estimate that they may take until the first of October before the entire Executive Mansion is again ready of occupancy. The President's plans are not known yet, but it is thought here that he will remain in St. James until the White House repairs are finished or will go up in Vermont to finish his vacation, thus avoid a month's stay in a hotel here.

FOOLING HIS RESIGNATION from the War Finance Corporation, to which he was appointed as a lame duck by President Harding, Frank W. Mondell, former Republican leader of the House, is in Washington without a federal job and there has been much speculation as to whether or not President Coolidge has something in mind for him. One report had it that Mondell was to be appointed Secretary of the Interior, but Secretary Work, who now has the job has denied that he intends to resign. About the only important post which is likely to become vacant shortly, is the war portfolio and it may be that Mondell will succeed Weeks there unless he decided definitely to stick to private law practice.

A SPECIAL JOINT Congressional Committee has embarked on a tour of the country to find out how the new postal rates are working and what further changes, if any, should be made. Before leaving Washington, the committee learned that the Postoffice Department stands to have a deficit of forty million dollars this year because the increases in postal salaries are costing more money than the increased bring in. Various plans for cutting down expenses have been suggested among them being the proposal that Congressmen be compelled to pay their own postage instead of having the free franking privilege.

SECRETARY OF LABOR Davis has gone to Europe leaving the anarchistic situation up in the air and with threats of a strike this fall still being heard. The feeling in the Capital is, however, that the President's threat of Government control unless the coal industry learned to behave has offset a walkout for the present.

Some people seem to be suffering from heat owing to the hard work they put in trying to keep cool.

After being mistreated for years one of our best friends, Health, packs his grip and moves out. And gold won't induce him to return. He's through.

GOVE ASKS FOR ADDITIONAL REVENUE

RAISE IN TAX TO GET $2,150,000 IN 1929 SOUGHT; OPPOSES DIRECT LEVY PLAN FOR FUNDS.

Governor Urges Legislature For Limited Power To Remove Elective Police Officers - Suggests Regulation of Weapon Permits.

Elimination of the direct levy of 10 cents "per" that all the taxpayers might benefit," additional taxes for raising $2,150,000 in 1929, and $2,400,000 in 1928 to take care of road maintenance and a building program; some provision for raising $1,000,000 for the second unit of the new capital; the revoking of restricted authority in the chief executive to remove certain elective police officers who fail to do their duty and are up and about to pass new laws regulating persons licensed to carry arms, were the high points in Governor Gove's message to the extra session of the legislature, which he delivered in person before a joint meeting of the two bodies here.

In explaining his attitude toward the industrial situation, suggesting for a revision of the laws giving licenses to certain persons to carry arms the governor declared that their conduct at times, in their efforts to protect lives and property "is such as to defeat the very purpose for which the license was granted."

The state's law enforcing officers, he asserted, should have the power to revoke or suspend such licenses, where the conduct of the licensee is such as to threaten a breach of the peace and which interferes with law enforcement.

All of the funds derived from automobile license fees and the three cent tax on gasoline, will be consumed by the sinking fund and interest on the outstanding bonds, thereby leaving nothing for road maintenance.

"It would not be sound public policy for the state to expend $300,000,000 and local and political divisions spend a similar sum, and then not provide a fund for maintenance," said the governor.

"It is a matter of common knowledge among those experienced in road building and maintenance," he added, "that a policy of this character has proven disastrous, both from the standpoint of convenience, durability and economy."

The governor outlined the needs of several state institutions for additional or improved buildings and expressed the opinion that an expenditure of $300,000 for each of the next two years would be necessary to take care of them.

"It is my plan for the future," he said, "to insist that buildings undertaken should be completed within the revenue provided or else not begun."

"Intelligent economy would not lie in failure to provide but rather in providing the funds necessary to maintain these institutions healthy, rendering efficient service," the governor added.

The second unit of the new capital should not exceed the expenditure of $1,500,000. Mr. Gove asserted and he reminded the legislature that of this sum, the estimated value of $500,000 placed on the sites of the old governor's mansion, the temporary capital and board of control building, should take care of a part of the second unit expenditure, thus leaving $1,000,000 to be raised in another way.

BONDS FOR SCHOOL REPAIRS

Bluefield and Beaver Pond District To Issue $600,000 For Buildings.

Bluefield.—A six hundred thousand dollar school bond election held in Bluefield and Beaver Pond district was carried 40 to 1. With all but one of the twenty-seven precincts heard from, the tabulation showed 3,900 for and 107 against. Littleburg, the one precinct yet to be heard from, was expected to give a majority for the issue.

The bond money is to be used in rebuilding Beaver high school, of Bluefield; damaged by fire several weeks ago, the erection of several other schools in the city and district and general improvements for all other schools.

The majority given the issue was the largest ever given a bond issue in Mercer county.

Dead Signed By Jackson Still Legible
Wheeling.—William A. Hodges, of this city, has in possession a public lands deed granted in 1833 and signed by President Andrew Jackson. It registers the sale of 40 acres of land in Seneca township, Monroe county, O., to John Carpenter, a French settler. The deed was found among other papers belonging to the present owner's mother, at the time of her death last November. It is 96 years old, it is well preserved, and its writing, including the president's signature, is perfectly legible.

MERCER MAY PAY NOTE WITH BONDS

FEDERAL COURT WILL BE PETITIONED TO PASS ON PROJECT

Bankers Approve for Credit of State as the Investment Was Executed in 1921 by Former Judge J. W. Davenport.

HARRISBURG.—The additional tax of 10 cents, ordered by the United States District Court on Mercer County to pay $50,000, the county borrowed in 1921, with interest, will not have to be levied, County Judge Ben C. Allen asserts. The levy ordered would go back to 1922 and apply on each of the succeeding years.

Judge Allen said the order was entered on the information that the county levy was only 40 cents; but it is, in fact, 50 cents, the Constitutional limit.

Judge Allen said $15,000 has been paid on the judgment and he believes the balance can be met with 5 per cent bonds, without a vote of the people. He said the county will be brought in the Federal Court to determine whether this can be done. The bonds, amounting to $50,000, were offered for sale and purchasers were found for them on condition that they were valid. The interest amounts to about $30,000.

Another thing Judge Allen denies is that the resistance to the collection on the note was an attempt at repudiation. This does not signify that the action was in the nature of a friendly suit predicated on an agreed statement of facts. Attorneys were employed by the county on a contingent fee basis, and the facts were controverted, both in the pleadings and testimony. The county carried the case to the Circuit Court of Appeals, which affirmed the judgment of the District Court, entered in April, 1922.

The proceedings have attracted the attention of bankers and brokers who were apprehensive that the credit of Kentucky counties and municipalities would be unfavorably affected by attempted repudiation. The situation is quite different from that of the State debt, which was created by incurring obligations in excess of revenue. In this instance the county borrowed $50,000 outright, received the money, and gave its note to George A. Ever of New York.

The note was executed August 17, 1921, at 6 per cent and due December 21, 1921. It was executed by J. W. Davenport, then county judge, in accordance with a resolution of the Fiscal Court. It recited in terms that "each and every act, condition and thing, required to be done, to have happened, or to be performed precedent to and in the issuance of this note, has been done, has happened, and has been performed in full and strict compliance with the Constitution and laws of the State of Kentucky, and this note is within every debt and other limit prescribed by law, and the faith and credit of Mercer County, Kentucky, are hereby irrevocably pledged to the punctual payment of the principal and interest on this note, according to its terms."

Former Judge Davenport said the money was borrowed in anticipation of the 1921 revenues to provide for the construction of the Harrisburg-Turkey pike, which was afterwards turned over to the State for completion. It was the last bond to get in under the old State law, and if the State had reimbursed the county promptly the note could have been met. The State, however, was so obligated to all the counties that it had to resort to the annual installment plan, and has been paying Mercer County installments since.

He said he wanted to renew the note, but County Attorney R. L. Black insisted that the obligation was illegal and Ever was afraid to take a new note.

LETCHER TO PUSH ROADS

Mayo Trail, Fifty Miles Long, Will Unite Cumberland, Kentucky, Valleys.

Whitesburg, Ky.—Good road enthusiasts of Letcher and Harlan counties are determined to arrive at plans to push the further construction of the Mayo Trail Highway between Whitesburg and Harlan, via Lynch and Benham, industrial cities on the Harlan border. It is planned to do much of the construction this fall before the advent of the bad weather. Letcher County constructed eight miles of the Mayo Trail last year, starting here and extending through a scenic section of the Cumberland Mountains, reaching almost to the Cumberland River.

The length of the highway is fifty miles, and would unite and connect the Kentucky River Valley with the Cumberland Valley and the two growing cities, Harlan and Whitesburg. At Harlan proper connection would be made with Pineville and other cities lower down on the Cumberland.

Moonshiners in Madison Battle.
Richwood.—Three moonshiners escaped here after engaging in a gun battle with deputy sheriffs on the banks of the Kentucky river near Valley View by swimming the river to the Fayette County side. Clark Ashcraft and Mack Mastaler, after discovering the still remained later and found three men running the still. They ordered them to surrender and the response was two pistol shots. The officers opened fire and the moonshiners dived in the river and escaped. The still was destroyed.

GIVE CHINA A CHANCE

Senator Borah asserts that there is nothing in the Chinese situation to justify a departure from our "traditional policy" regarding China. Our traditional policy regarding China, however, is quite different from that regarding most of European affairs.

The independence of China; its equal treatment by and to all nations and the prevention of any dispute whose natural outcome would not merely Chinese, but American policies.

Unless we are to reverse our traditional policy what is happening in China now is decidedly our concern, because we are pledged to see that China gets a square deal at the hands of European Powers—and that is the real point now at issue. In this the United States and Russia seem to be working together.

Henry Ford says Americans are living too fast. Henry is doing his best to make the pace faster with airplanes.

THE MESSAGE FROM THE CAMPS

Sixteen thousand young men were reported enrolled at the Citizens' military training camps on July 11, and 20,000 additional will have been enrolled when the camps all get to work. It is a very interesting thing to think of nearly 40,000 young men obtaining direct instruction from the United States Government, and soon to return to their homes after this new experience.

They should bring home a new spirit of patriotism. It should be a message not merely of the obligation of every American to support his government in time of war, but the thought that a country that can produce manhood of our fine American type, is worth our best devotion in times of peace. The friends and associates of these fellows ought to be inspired by the example they have set, to feel that they too can serve the same cause that these camps were meant to promote, by doing their best all the time to make America the land of the highest manhood and womanhood and civic spirit.

You may have to work longer hours in the country, but it has its compensations—there is no time limit on parking.

A fire, down may be a place where everybody goes to the fire, but even a fire is an indication that something has happened.

BRAINS

What is a thought? How is it created? Where does it come from—where does it go to?

It is something every human being has—and yet no one knows much about it.

Materialists assert that thought is a substance which the brain secretes much as the liver secretes bile. But the eye is not the author of light, nor the nose of smell, nor the ear the sound of the voices.

Daniel Webster's brain was very heavy. The brain of Ruloff, the confessed murderer of nine people now in the Cornell museum, is said to be the heaviest ever weighed in this country. The brain of Anatole France was much lighter than the average, yet he had a superior mind.

The brain is the sounding board of our human plan. As it is sensitized, developed or attuned, so it will receive, for all science tells us thoughts are things that always live.

It is doubtful if man ever created a thought—because man never created anything. If he did he would be on a par with the Great Invisible Intelligence of the Universe.

Thought deserves more than passive notice at the hands of our wise men.

BUSINESS BUILDINGS

One thing that helps a lot toward the progress of a town, is to have good clean looking business buildings. That does not necessarily mean that it must have been, expensive structures. Even if many of its buildings are somewhat old, yet if these are kept well painted and repaired, the whole town will have an impression of efficiency and alertness.

Every shabby and poorly kept up building in a town's business district does something to create an unfortunate impression, and make the town look as if it were not prosperous or as if it was indifferent to development. It may be argued that many people have carried on business successfully in shabby looking old structures. But probably that business could have been considerably increased, if they had given themselves the modern touch with plenty of paint and good looking window glass.

"PARKING"

The demand for parking places is growing and the long lanes of life are becoming littered with darkness. Time was when the corner grocery was the community parking place. Today it is anywhere, everywhere.

Progressive business institutions and successful men do not tolerate the habit one minute. To them real life is movement. The man who stands still not only lays himself open to temptation, but he slowly shrivels and his courage fails. One can almost read the sign "PARK HERE" on his face.

But why park, anyway? If your goal is worth attainment keep moving toward it every moment of the day, keeping constantly in mind the fact that while the other fellow is "parking" the gates are open, the fences down, the field wide open for development—and its your business to do the job.

Improved Business Prospects

While business conditions continue in the main a good deal as they were three months ago, yet a distinctively more hopeful feeling is manifest.

The improved prospects for the corn crop are a feature that ought to create much confidence. It had a bad setback by frost in May, but has now recovered, and is giving prospects of one of the largest crops ever harvested. A good corn crop means that the products of every section will sell well in the great corn states.

The cotton growers had a good year last year, and prospects are equally good this year, and perhaps better. Present indications are that the great cotton growing section will be prosperous. Winter wheat fell about 200,000,000 bushels short of last year, but spring wheat is doing well. The farmers have had 30 to 40 cents more a bushel for early marketed wheat than they got last year.

Thus it looks as if farm conditions would be better than average this year. The building industry continues to show a wonderful degree of activity. The automobile industry started the year cautiously, but the prosperity of the country is revealed by the fact that it has generally been behind orders since April. Iron and steel have been at about 70 per cent of capacity, in comparison with 45 per cent a year ago. In the textiles a slightly better feeling is manifest.

In Europe there is a gradual movement toward a settlement of those frictions that have held up business progress so long. The world is making steady progress toward recovery from war. There seems every reason for the business men of Kentucky to feel confident that prospects will gradually improve, and that the worst of the difficulties experienced since the war have been passed.

Away From The Crowds

America is still undiscovered, still waiting to be discovered—by you! Away from the paved highways, deep in the hidden solitudes—are shady groves fragrant with the scent of flowers—sun-drenched valleys—lazy streams—or hurrying brooks as beat your mood. Waiting to please you with their untouched charms.

Take your Ford and venture forth into the delights of the unknown. Leave the beaten path to others. Go where you will—whether the road is paved or not.

It is the car of the true adventurer; the car that no going—be it sand, dirt or rocky road—can halt; the car that will take you safely, certainly and happily to where nature hides her true loveliness.

Coal Is Marketed On a Competitive Basis—Lowest
Prices Get Most of the Orders—

As has been pointed out in an earlier bulletin in this series, the greater part of Kentucky's coal tonnage is used for commercial or industrial purposes, and must be sold to large buyers—in competition with those mined in Indiana, Illinois, West Virginia, Pennsylvania, Ohio, Virginia and Tennessee.

The great consuming territory for Kentucky coals is that surrounding the Great Lakes, and in order to reach this market our coals must be hauled a much greater distance than those of our competitors. This disadvantage of long distance and higher freight rates makes it much more difficult to compete for commercial business.

Kentucky coal operators must not be burdened by special taxes, by increased freight rates or by any other obstacles which will raise their costs of production. If the industry is to continue to be one of paramount importance to Kentucky, investors in coal properties must earn a fair return on their money; or go out of business. Such a condition would throw out of employment approximately 60,000 citizens of the State, and deprive the public treasuries of the many hundreds of thousands of dollars per year, now being paid by the coal industry.

Familiarize yourself with all the facts in the coal situation in Kentucky, and express your disapproval of radical legislation which may cripple or bankrupt this important industry.

The average increase of the United States is 25 per cent every ten years.

Our Ambition is to keep up with the procession. If we fail to keep up with the average or stand still we are slipping.

But Ambitions must be backed by Performance.

The unfulfilling formula for accomplishing these ambitions is to make Burlington attractive and keep it so.

Today city folks are flocking to the small and medium-sized towns where they find more joy in living. The automobile has brought the suburb to the door of the city.

We must stimulate Pride and Patriotism, Loyalty and Good Will within the community and make certain that we can provide all the essentials that make for moral and physical well-being of all who would come among us.

Good government, good schools and churches, pure water, clean streets, better roads, thriving merchants, and industries, a progressive and loyal community spirit of true co-operation—all make a splendid inducement to folks looking for a REAL HOME.

Let each one do his part toward making Burlington a better place to live in and spread the good word to every corner of the globe.

COMMISSIONER'S NOTICE

Walton Bank and Trust Company Administrator with the will annexed of Lucy A. Carpenter deceased, etc.

NOTICE
Wm. J. Carpenter Deceased, &c
Defendants

All creditors of the Estate of Lucy A. Carpenter, deceased, are hereby notified to present their claims against same, properly proven, before me on or before the 30th day of July, 1926. Beginning at 9:30 a. m., on said date in my office at the Court House in Burlington, Boone County, Ky. I will sit for the purpose of hearing proof on and auditing claims against said estate, in the presence of the Administrator with the Will Annexed of said Lucy A. Carpenter. Return from day to day of from time to time until the purposes of said hearings is completed. Done by order of Court at its April term 1926 referring said cause to me as Master Commissioner. R. E. BERKSHIRE M. C. C. C.

Judging from the way England is hopping the price of rubber there is little wonder that big business is opposed to government control of natural raw materials. It was Russia, however, that set the pace in her oil production, which will soon defray all government expenses.

HIGHER COST OF LIVING

The U. S. Department of Labor announces that on June 15 of the present year the increase in the retail cost of food in the U. S. was about 9 per cent greater than for the year ending June 15, 1924, and that for the twelve-year period from June 15, 1913, to June 15, 1925 the increase in the retail price of all food combined was about 58.5 per cent. To show the continuing tendency toward higher costs it is pointed out that between May and June of the present year the average increase in food prices at retail was 2 per cent, and this at a period of the year when market and home gardens were beginning to yield an appreciable supply of vegetables and fruits in many sections of the country.

It is also shown that while the farmers are receiving slightly higher prices for their produce it is only a fraction of this 58.5 per cent selling price, which they are compelled to pay on everything they buy.

It is also admitted that storekeepers are not making profits twice as large as before the war. On the contrary their profits are very small due to increased rents, overhead and the reduced purchasing power of consumers. The trouble seems to be that products of the farm and garden and mill, are handled too many times and too expensive processes together with pyramided profits make the elimination of multiplicity costs.

Main stores do not solve the problem because they benefit from the prevailing price standards by holding their prices well to the top. It is a disquieting condition despite the great propaganda designed to stimulate consumption.

CONSULT YOUR BANKER

Every time a swindler is sent to prison, after his fraudulent dealings have been exposed, the question arises in the mind of the average person how he was able to find enough gullible people to make his scheme temporarily successful.

Morton S. Hawkins was sentenced to fifteen years in the federal penitentiary and fined $10,000 in federal court in Indianapolis for defrauding thousands of investors out of millions of dollars.

He operated through the Hawkins Mortgage Loan Company and subsidiary organizations, which promised the investor fabulous returns. The savings of a life time were taken from secret hiding places by scores of widows and aged people in the hope that they would be richly rewarded.

Those who have money to invest will do well to reflect that money is only worth so much and that any pledge of interest rates out of reason is an evidence of intention to

After thirty years of hard work a western editor has retired with a net surplus of $50,000. He attributes his phenomenal success to close application to duty, always hewing to the mark and letting the chips fall where they may, to the most rigid rules of economy, never spending a cent foolishly, everlastingly keeping at his job with a whole heart, and the death of an uncle who left him $49,999.50.

ALL STATE ROAD WORK SUSPENDED AT PRESENT

Frankfort, Ky., Aug. 5.—All road work on contracts made by the former state highway commission prior to December 10, 1923, will be suspended until the suit of J. Guthrie Coke and others against the State Highway Commission to test the validity of road warrants aggregating $3,500,000 has been finally litigated and determined.

The state highway commission, in session here today, adopted a resolution suspending the work and payments thereon after John Lucas, sheriff of Franklin county, served injunction processes in the Coke case on the members of the highway commission, State Treasurer E. B. Dabman and State Auditor W. H. Shanks.

The road work suspended involves an expenditure of approximately $1,400,000, the state being pledged for about $800,000 of the amount. The contracts involved were awarded by the former highway commission which was composed of H. Green Garrett, of Winchester; Ben Willis of Paducah; Leslie B. Samuels, of Bardonia; and H. H. Asher, of Pineville.

The court of appeals, before adjourning for the summer vacation, dismissed the first suit brought by Coke and others to test the validity of the road warrants issued on contracts made by the former highway commission. The suit was brought under the declaratory judgment act and the court dismissed the petition because the interested parties were not parties to the suit.

In a day or two the commission will make public a list of the work effected by the suspension. It did not do so today because some of the contracts let prior to December 10, 1923, have been completed but the estimates have not reached the office of the highway commission.

Governor Fields and the four members of the commission, W. C. Montgomery, chairman; R. W. Owen W. C. Hanna and E. S. Helburn, were present at the meeting today.—Lexington Herald.

15,000 ACRES OF ALFALFA THIS YEAR

Lexington, Ky., July 8. — More than 15,000 acres of alfalfa were sown in Blue Grass counties of Kentucky this year, according to estimates made by Ralph Kenney, extension crops specialist for the College of Agriculture. Estimates obtained from 20 counties show new acreages ranging from 25 to 1,550 acres per county.

The spring was cold and at times dry and conditions generally unfavorable for good growth of clover and alfalfa. Mr. Kenney said, "Alfalfa stands as a rule are better than clover, an adjoining fields and farms," he continued. "This is shown in Fayette county, where with a total of 42 acres sown last spring, alfalfa is making satisfactory stands on several farms. A little red clover on the same or adjoining farms is doing well, but a total more than 250 acres failed to grow or made much poorer stands than did the alfalfa."

The past spring was unfavorable for establishing good stands of clover and alfalfa in nurse crops of oats, wheat, barley and rye, according to Mr. Kenney. The best stands were obtained without nurse crops. In spite of the conditions, alfalfa grows well in western Mercer county where successful in getting good stands of alfalfa sowed in oats, where the oats were seeded 3 and 4 pecks to the acre. A total of 1,500 acres were thus established last spring in Mercer county, and it is difficult to find a field that was sown without a nurse crop, Mr. Kenney said.

On account of the wide-spread interest in alfalfa several hundred farmers from Central Kentucky are expected to attend the lime and legume meeting to be held on the Experiment Station farm at Lexington August 5-6. They will see two variety tests of other legume crops, and many other things of interest.

Alvin Steger, 52, assistant State Inspector and Examiner, died at his home in Owenston, Saturday, Aug. 8th. The announcement of Mr. Steger's death was received in Burlington Monday evening and was quite a shock to his many friends in this county. He was one of the best known Democrats in this section of the State and his ability to make friends was marked when several years ago he assisted the late Chas. Maurer as Clerk of the Boone Circuit Court. He is survived by his wife, two daughters, his mother and one brother. Since his appointment as state inspector he had been making his home at Frankfort.

Rev. David Blythe of Wilkesbarre, Penn., is visiting his brother George and wife and meeting with friends of boyhood days. Rev. Blythe has charge of a large church at that place.

AUGUST TERM OF CIRCUIT COURT CONVENES MONDAY

The August term of the Boone Circuit Court convened Monday morning with Judge Sidney Gaines on the bench. This is the 29th session of this court to be held by Judge Gaines, he having convened his first court here in 1916. The prospects are for a rather more lengthy session than has been the custom here for the past few years, according to the number of cases that are set for trial, cases being set down for trial as far in advance as Monday of next week. This however being the "heated" session some of the cases set down will probably "melt" which will naturally cause a continuance.

The following attorneys were in attendance at the opening session: Commonwealth's Atty. Jno. J. Howe, County Atty. B. H. Riley, Charles Strother, of Walton; E. R. Rivard and S. W. Adams, of Covington; J. L. Vest, of Walton; B. F. Menefee of Crittenden, D. E. Castleman, of Erlanger and Judge N. E. Riddell, G. W. Tolin and S. W. Tolin of Burlington.

The Monday morning session was consumed as usual in the empaneling of the juries and instructing the grand jury. The following grand jury was sworn for service: Will Crigler, W. T. Berchire, J. H. Jockey, C. T. Easton, John B. Cloud, L. C. Acra, C. O. Hempling, C. S. Riddell, J. A. Huey, Coir Kelley, Frank Rue, Rod P. Hughes.

Petit Jury No. 1.—Russell Smith, W. T. Carpenter, Melvin Townsend, H. L. Crigler, B. C. Gaines, Harry Bailey, O. N. Scott, Andy Muntz, J. W. Aylor, John P. Rich, Grover Ransom.

Petit Jury No. 2.—C. A. Sheets, Wallace Rice, W. T. Dudgeon, Shelly Aylor, H. R. Dixon, Bernard Rogers, J. G. Huey, Lou Scott, John G. Fennell, Jonas Stevens, Charles Fennell, B. W. Clore.

FACTS AND FIGURES.
P. T. A.

DO YOU KNOW,

That one year ago we had about thirty members and that now we have almost TWO HUNDRED?

That the purpose of P. T. A. is to work for the welfare of the children of Burlington?

That we are a part of the state and national organization, whose membership is 400,000?

That we indorse a law of taxation, whereby the rural child may have equal opportunities with the city child?

That our aim is to put PARENT PRIDE and PARENT POWER to work for the children of this community?

That we are organizing a BOOGEYS club to be composed of "grades" of Burlington Hi School?

That we have raised within the past year, and now have in our treasury about THIRTEEN HUNDRED DOLLARS?

That every man and woman in Burlington and vicinity OUGHT to be a member of P. T. A. and have a part in this great work for our children?

The next regular meeting of P. T. A., is the 3rd Wednesday evening of August at the Court House, at 8 o'clock. Everybody welcome.

A good school is but another home; a good home, just another school.

An ounce of parental interest in the home ought to generate a ton of productivity in the school.

There is no stronger force in the world than the combined efforts of all good fathers and mothers, good teachers, and interested pupils. This is a BIG FOUR that is hard to beat.

The P. T. A. has some splendid big things that it plans to do in the near future. Come out to the next meeting and hear all about them. You will be surprised.

A WORD OF APPRECIATION

Nor have I the least ill feeling against any one who failed to support me. With good will to all who supported me and those who did not I remain yours.

Respectfully,
GARNETT W. TOLIN.

THREE OLD CITIZENS MET HERE MONDAY

L. H. Voshell, of Union, who is nearing his 82nd mile post in life's journey, was in attendance at court Monday, and while in town met with a couple of his old pals—Asa Cason, who has passed his 85th birthday and Chas. E. White who has passed his 81st mile, and whose birthday only comes every four years—having been born on Feb. 29th. These old citizens, all looking hale and hearty, spent a pleasant time together talking over their school boy days, which they seemed to enjoy and had many hearty laughs as to the things they were youths again.

"We are young only once," is a remark often made by way of excuse for "hitting the pace." And so it is the pleasures of youth must be crowded into a brief space of time. But how long are we young? Some are 18 to 40 while others are young at 80. It depends upon the pace they hit and the manner they hit it. Lots of work and pleasure can be crowded into youth, if the secret is known, or the years can be distressingly brief. Youth belongs to the individual and it lasts so long as he keeps it. Can he three old citizens above mentioned give us the secret?

TO THE VOTERS OF BOONE CO.

I thank all of you in advance for your support on the 1st day of August, and I did not in the last issue of the Recorder, as there were so many cards of thanks I did not want to cause a collision but will say now that I am grateful to all of you, with no hard feelings against any who saw fit to cast their vote against me. Calvin Coolidge no doubt was proud of his election, but not any more than I was to know the people of old Boone county placed their trust in me to make their jailer for the third time, and I will keep my promise. If I am compelled to lock any of you up I will feed you good, treat you well, and not keep you one hour longer than your time is up. I thank you.

C. A. FOWLER, J. B. C.

Charles Parsons, wife and daughter and her husband of Delhi, Ohio, were in Burlington for a short time Tuesday morning meeting with a few of his old friends. They left town for Waterloo neighborhood to view the scenes of his boyhood which he left about thirty-five years ago.

About twenty-five members of Mrs. E. W. Duncan's Sunday school class of the Burlington Baptist church left Tuesday morning on a hay wagon for the forks of Gunpowder, where they enjoyed an all-day outing, all laden with good things to eat.

Mrs. A. L. Furnish, son and daughter, Harvey Winn and Dorothy Nell, after a three week's visit with Mrs. Furnish's mother, Mrs. Laura Martin, and sister Miss Nell, Martin, left Wednesday for their home at Golden Pond, Trigg county.

TWO SIDES OF LIFE

There are two sides to everything, even life, and they are often so far apart that it is impossible to reconcile them.

One man says: "Times are good and they will be better. The condition of the farmer is improving and crop prospects are splendid. The financial pages of the newspapers show business is better and I am going to help in my small way to make it better."

Another man says: "Times are awful. It's a constant struggle to keep the wolf from the door. Everything is topsy-turvy and I don't know what this world is coming to."

Two opposite opinions on the same subject. One man is enjoying life. He recognizes the handicaps, but instead of complaining about them, is endeavoring to bring about some improvement. He belongs to the class that leads the way to better things.

The other, his vision obscured by the darkness cast by his own shadow, sees only darkness when the sun is really shining. Nothing satisfies him because he expects miracles. Nothing pleases him because he is not able to please himself. He is just here, can't help it, and wouldn't if he could.

Each of us is one or the other or in between and don't know which way to turn. Think well before you classify yourself.

MARKED INCREASE IN FORD SALES IN JULY

Detroit, Mich., Aug. 8.—During the month just ended the Ford Motor Company did a record July business in every division, it was today announced at the Highland Park general offices. Domestic sales of Ford cars and Trucks totaled 167,626 in July exceeding by 6,192 those of a year ago, sales of Fordson Tractors were more than 3,000 greater than last year and 207 more Lincoln cars were delivered to customers during the month than in the previous July.

On the basis of Branch reports received early in July, the company anticipated an increased volume of business and while it predicted that summer buying would rise to a higher level than usual, the demand for all Ford products during the month exceeded expectations.

The outlook is for increasing business in August.

One of the chief indications of this appears in agricultural sections of the country, where farmers are coming into market in rapidly growing numbers. Evidence of this is found in the remarkable sales of Fordson Tractors during July.

MASS MEETINGS OF GROWERS TO BE HELD IN COUNTIES.

At the meeting of the Board of Directors of the Burley Tobacco Growers' Co-operative Association in Lexington, Ky., Wednesday the annual primaries and election of delegates to the district conventions which will select the twenty-two directors to represent the 108,000 members of the Association for the coming year were arranged.

The mass meetings August 22nd will be held at the court-house in each county of the Burley District. They will be called to order by the members of the association designated by President James C. Stone and will elect the other officers of the meeting themselves. They will nominate twice as many candidates as the county may be entitled to have as delegates and they will select three persons to serve as officers for a 71-day election to be held September 19, between the hours of 8 o'clock in the morning and 4 o'clock in the afternoon, at which delegates to the district conventions will be selected from the nominee of the mass meetings.

Every member will be furnished one ballot by mail, and twenty percent of the number so furnished will be mailed to the election officers, so as to be sure to have ballots for everybody, whether he gets his by mail or not. These ballots are to be sent out ten days previous to the election, so that every grower will receive his ballot in time to cast it in the election September 19th.

SALT RIVER TRIP

The primary is over, and it was a quiet, or more so, than usual—the day being ideal and a large vote. Your choice may have won or gone down in defeat—that is human. Now—all could not win. Good men have been selected for the various county offices (nominations being equivalent to election) and it behooves every citizen of Boone county to assist these men, after they are inducted into office, in every way possible to make good. An official is human, just the same as you are, and he is almost powerless to perform his duties as they should be performed without your co-operation. If there are wrongs being done in our county, help to right them—you are just as much of Boone county as anybody else. If evil are being committed within our borders help to overcome them with good. Our county is what we help to make it—it will be no better or worse than the citizenship. There are far more good citizens than bad in Boone. Were this not true you would not remain in the county. Are you a booster or a knacker? Let's go.

The elegant little side-wheel steamer, "Primary" left its moorings last Sunday morning, August 9th, on its quadrennial excursion up Salt River with the following passengers on board: Elmer Kirkpatrick, Newton Sullivan, Jr., Garrett W. Tolin, Miss F. C. Beth Rogers, H. W. Rouse, Tom Borah, Frank McGlasson and Chester Tanner.

Lee Huey, having made the trip over, before, was put in charge of the pilot wheel to insure safety to the other passengers as this was the first trip up that noted stream.

The crowd of friends of the defeated candidates gathered on the banks to bid them adieu, and as the little steamer glided out over the waters the crowd joined in singing, "God Be With You Until We Meet Again."

The Lexington Herald, which is regarded by a great many Northern Kentuckians as the most forward looking Democratic paper in the State, hints that the result of the recent primary augurs well for the Democratic party and the state of Kentucky in general and the Fields Administration in particular. The Herald lays particular stress upon the results of the Senatorial primaries, since the senate has the last word in legislative matters, and which, if it so desires, can effectually block any progressive measures that the governor might favor.

Although the editorial in a recent issue of the Blue Grass paper along these lines is rather lengthy we publish it herewith since it covers the present political situation of the governor and Kentucky so effectively. It follows:

THE VOICE OF THE PEOPLE

Amid the voluminous returns of a statewide primary election for nominations for local officers and legislative representatives there must be some note of concurrent decision indicative of the sentiment of the rank and file of the Democratic voters of the commonwealth.

It does not take much searching into the reports from Saturday's balloting to reveal that there is to be found in the selections made by the parties, such an expression. While under the primary law both parties are entitled to primary elections, the Democratic party is more inclined to choose the primary method while the Republican party seems to eschew it. The most hotly contested races of Saturday were within the Democratic party. The results, therefore, can be analyzed to more avail by considering the results of the Democratic contests.

The most important state contests were those for the nominations for one-half the seats in the state senate. The senators are elected for four years while the representatives are chosen for two years or for one legislative term unless a special session is called. The senate is generally accepted to be a more important body, having a final decision on important matters so that, though the house is considered a good place to start things, the senate is considered a good place to finish them, either by passage or the graveyard process.

In the twentieth district composed of Anderson, Franklin, Mercer and Spencer counties, Captain E. C. Walker, who was in the house of representatives the previous year and who consistently supported the Fields program, was decisively victorious over E. Polk South, a candidate who represented the policies of the group which has just as consistently opposed the governor. The victories of Charles K. Oldham, of Mt. Sterling, and C. O. Graves, of Georgetown, were won in the same manner. In Kenton county in a very hotly contested race Samuel Adams, speaker of the last house of representatives, defeated Alfred E. Strickland, who in the state primary election of 1923 was defeated for the nomination for lieutenant governor. The defeat of Charles A. Nelson of Hardin county, of John A. Lee of Glencoe, and the apparent defeat of Jas. R. Rash of Madisonville, can hardly be interpreted as personal repudiations of the services of these men but of the policies of those who have failed to cooperate with the efforts of a Democratic administration to serve the state.

Dropping the so-loudly raised coal tax issue as soon as it became shown that the disposition of the people was to encourage, not attempt to destroy, a struggling industry very necessary to the progress of Kentucky, promoters of the so-called reconstruction movement in the Democratic party then attempted unsuccessfully to raise the lifeless corpse of the "moral issue" which, disinterestedly, remained as dead as ever.

The decision of Kentucky Democrats was the same as their decision was in the primary campaign of 1923 which determined the policies upon which W. J. Fields ran for governor and upon which stand he was elected with forty thousand votes to spare.

Those who said the pari-mutuel act was an issue went down in defeat in the majority of important races.

What does this mean? It means that the state of Kentucky is weary, fatigued—or just plain tired if you like it better, of having progressive legislation held back and efforts to move in a forwardly direction side-tracked and blocked by trumped up, unwarranted "issues" of which there has been repeated expression by the majority of the voters.

Moreover, it means that the Democrats of Kentucky wish a Democratic administration in 1927 to be a success. They wish Democrats elected under the new plan in 1927 to be a success.

And to the legislative halls of the state capital will do what they can to assist the present administration at Frankfort to succeed in serving the state and in winning the approval of the state and in doing good for the commonwealth and for the interest of political parties and for the advancement of which legislative sessions are held.

The Democratic party has through its choice of nominees made for itself a great opportunity. With a forward program it can go before the voters of the state in November in an election not as Saturday's war for partisans for the choice of nominees but for all voters for a choice for officers and more particularly for lawmakers. It can "stand on the record" and ask for endorsement. It can also ask for election on the grounds that with a Democratic administration in Frankfort and with a Democratic majority in the legislative halls, working together for the good of Kentucky and working not on trumped-up issues but upon real business for the state and seeking to work out the many serious problems of the state, there can be progressive legislation accomplished in the 1926 session of the state legislature. Such a program will make this session go down in history as a deliberative conference of chosen representatives of the people and not as an imitation of a college flag rush, an Irish celebration of the Battle of the Boyne or a debate on evolution. The people of Kentucky are willing to concede the world's first prize in fighting championship to Herrin, Ill., and to have Frankfort try for laurels along other lines. The Democratic party nominated William J. Fields for governor, not for a clay pigeon and the decisions of Saturday show that they wish the men solemnly chosen at the polls to be tribunes of the people to go to Frankfort and practice statesmanship, not marksmanship.

Those who entered the Democratic primary elections and those who voted therein, whether successful or unsuccessful, thereby declared their unqualified faith in the Democratic party and in the ability of the majority to choose for the best. There was no room for the "issue" of through sincerity sought nomination or cast votes unsuccessfully, to rally to the banner of the party. The party is able now, having settled differences over the issues raised among its own members, to unite in a common purpose to serve the state and to further the commonwealth's interests.

It may now adopt a program which looks forward, with a faith in Kentucky's future and with a sympathetic interest in her welfare, with a thought of care for her wards, with a vision of advancement for her children in the schools, with a determination to improve her handicapped and retarded road system, with a decision to make her sections a willingness to distribute equitably among citizens the cost of the government maintained in their interest and with the mutual goal of making the dollar do more and better work when paid in salaries or for materials because those serving as selected officers of the people are working with a common aim.

There is no reason that the Democratic party reunited and refreshed after the family scrap, enjoying the fellowship only known to those who can overlook little things and join together on big ones, cannot go militantly, confidently, enthusiastically into the election campaign from now until November, rejoicing in the fact that there is work to do for the good of Kentucky and confidently believing that the men it has nominated for public offices can do the job.

MR. BRYAN'S GIFT

When William J. Bryan passed on, one of the most conspicuous figures of the past 30 years left us. The majority of the American people did not accept his ideas, but he admitted his honesty of purpose.

Mr. Bryan will perhaps be long remembered for his gift of passionate oratory, which he used in the art of swaying millions. Probably no man ever addressed so many people or had such power over his listeners, if one will perhaps except Theodore Roosevelt.

Mr. Bryan seemed to know how to touch the common run of people, and he could move them to action and attach them to the causes which were dear to him, where an orator with more cultivated gifts might have failed. The enthusiastic ardor with which he threw himself into the causes that he loved, will be remembered for a great many years.

GOOD TIME TO ADVERTISE

Now is a fine time for the country merchant to look over his stock, get together a lot of stuff that he does not want to carry over, and advertise it at bargain prices. He will find that it will be a paying policy to turn a lot of his goods into money before the fall season comes on. Then he can stock up with fresh goods, and be ready to do a rushing fall trade.

The heavy summer advertising in the city papers and the campaigns by the mail order houses, have led the people of Boone county to look for special bargains at this time of year. The merchants will find it pays to get into the same game, and keep their home trade interested in the home stores.

COUNTRY TOWN PARKS

The old idea about parks in country towns was that such towns had no more use for the same than a cat has for two tails, as the old saying went. It was considered that there is so much open land in a country town, that such a community does not need those breathing spots that are so absolutely necessary in a congested population.

The country towns with their beautiful air may not need breathing spots, but they do need wholesome outdoor recreation and gathering places. You can find many country towns of pretty fair size where there is no convenient place where boys can play base ball, or people can enjoy tennis or various sports they would like to take up. Some times the available spots are so far outside of the village that it is difficult to develop the habit of resorting there for games or picnics. Some times owners of private property anywhere near the center will simply not permit such use of their land. The town of Wamego, Kansas, a place of 1700 people, has set a fine example to country towns in park development. Twenty years ago their present beautiful park was a field of wild grass and dandelions, without a tree. Now it is a forest with more than 50 varieties, carpeted with blue grass and well planted with flowers and shrubs.

This park has an artificial lake, used for boating and bathing, a wading pool, band stand, dancing place, a playground, equipped with dining tables, base ball, football and basket ball fields, free tourist camp ground, etc.

A town with an equipment like that has a wonderful start in the race for progress. Such a park must be a great center of summer enjoyment, and it must have much to do with building up a community that possesses it.

BUSINESS HARMONY

One of the worst features about country towns some years ago, was the feeling of jealousy and hostility existing among the business men. The merchants felt sore at their competitors, and hated to see them get ahead and they often seemed more anxious to see some rival get into difficulties than they were to work for their own success.

Such a spirit was destructive of community progress. Today business people commonly make good friends of their competitors, and they all plan to get their mutual benefit, for exchange of information and for the advance of the town as a whole. The results are far better.

This country was built up by the saw and the hoe, but it seems to be considered now that it can be carried on with the ball bat and the golf stick.

During all the centuries of this world's history, no great man has ever set down the rules of success that did not include "hard work" and "perseverance." It generally interests us in so far as it is necessary to secure more "gas."

ALTHOUGH HIS power had been waning, William Jennings Bryan was the last national leader of the Democratic party. Not that the party of Jefferson and Jackson will not have other leaders—but at the present time, with Bryan eliminated by the hand of death, the Democrats are without a leader or spokesman with a great personal following such as Wilson and Bryan had. The men who oppose each other for the Democratic presidential nomination last year will of course be looked upon by their friends to take up the reins of leadership. John W. Davis, although defeated last year by Coolidge, is the titular leader of the party, but there are many elements of which he could never bring to his support—and he is not interested in politics. McAdoo is also thought of, and it is likewise expected that the Commoner's brother, Mr. Charles W. Bryan, will not hesitate to follow in the political footsteps of William J. For twenty-five years Mr. Bryan had been a power in high Democratic councils and his death causes a big void.

THERE ARE REASONS to believe that the next session of Congress will witness a fight over prohibition more intense than any which have taken place since the passage of the Volstead Act. Senators and Congressmen opposed to the bone dry prohibition law will make a strong move for liberalization on the ground that the Government is finding it impossible to enforce the law in spite of all the money that is being expended for that purpose. Dry forces are as equally insistent on the law as it now stands, charging that any efforts at amendment, are "high treason," because they attack in effect, the Constitution. In the meantime, the row in the Treasury between Secretary Andrews, the new prohibition director, and Commissioner Hayes still sticking on the job. Though everything that he had to do has been transferred to other hands or other departments.

THOUGH HE WAS rejected all friendly overtures from Administration Republicans, Senator Brookhart of Iowa appears destined to retain his seat in the Senate despite the contest brought by his defeated Democratic opponent and the recount now going on at the Capitol. Republican leaders fear that should Brookhart be thrown out of his seat now, he would be a candidate again in the next election and make things hot for Senator Cummins, one of the wheel-horses of the Administration. Cummins' friends are glad to have him stay in the Senate Committee. He is handling the case, and Mr. Borah be treated with absolute fairness even though he is an avowed enemy of the Administration and has been read out of the Republican party.

RENEWED DISCUSSION of the world court has led certain Republican leaders opposed to permitting the United States to join the League of Nations fight to call upon Senator Borah, the Chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, to rise up and put down this new movement before it gets much headway. Although just as opposed as any of them to any connection with the League of Nations, Borah's chairmanship of an important Senate committee such as Foreign Relations puts him in a position where he hesitates to openly oppose the Administration. Polls of the Senate on the world court are being taken and they are said to indicate enough voted to ratify the court protocol as laid before the Senate in the Harding Administration.
